Fergusons Are Swept From Power in Texas Election

DAN MOODY WINS GOVERNOR'S RACE BY BIG MAJORITY

"Ma" Ferguson, Incumbent, Is Defeated in Run-off Primary, Trailing Leader by 161,000 Votes.

HATCHER LEADING TREASURER'S RACE

"Ma" Ferguson Promised To Withdraw If Beaten in First Contest but Changed Her Mind.

Dallas, August 28.—(AP)—Dan Moody, youthful red haired attorney general, swept the Fergusons out of political power in today's democratic run-off primary in Texas.

Governor Miriam A. Ferguson was overwhelmingly defeated for renomination on the face of incomplete but conclusive returns. Moody as standard bearer of the party will be the next governor of the Lone Star state, nomination on the democratic ticket being equivalent to election in November.

With returns in from nearly all of the counties in the state, most of them incomplete, Moody was leading the woman governor by nearly 2 to 1. Mrs. Ferguson had gained slightly from earlier returns. The count, tabulated by the Texas election bureau, from 212 out of 252 counties, with 49 complete, give: Moody, 333,022; Ferguson, 171,362.

Hatcher Is Leading.

In the state treasurer's race, W. Gregory Hatcher of Dallas, the incumbent, who has been opposed by Governor Ferguson, was well in the lead, over J. R. Ball.

The attorney general's race was in doubt, with James V. Allred of Wichita Falls slightly ahead of Claude Pollard of Houston.

Moody took the lead from the first returns and kept it, his voting mounting with every additional tabulation.

Efforts to reach the Fergusons at Austin for a statement were futile. Neither Governor Ferguson, nor her husband, James E. Ferguson, could be reached by telephone.

Newspapermen were told at the executive mansion that because of incomplete returns it was almost certain neither the governor nor her husband would issue a statement tonight.

Davidson and Moody.

Moody exhibited much greater strength than he did in the elimination primary, July 24, in which the vote was split among half a dozen candidates. The supporters of Lynch Davidson of Houston in the first primary apparently rallied to Moody's cause as urged by Davidson. In July Davidson polled more than 100,000 votes.

Moody in a statement tonight asked Texas democrats "to lay aside the bitterness of the campaign just closed."

"I see in the results of the primary the complete triumph of the principles of government advocated in this cam-

Holder Outlines Campaign Issues To Home Citizens

Candidate for Governor Speaks at Homecoming Planned by Townspeople of Jefferson.

RUNNING OWN RACE, HE TELLS AUDIENCE

Stronger Banking Laws, Educational Expansion, Economy in Handling State's Funds Advocated

Jefferson, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—Declaring that "no man in Georgia believes more than I do in paved highways, because I know what they mean to our people," John N Holder, chairman of the state highway board and candidate for governor, was the principal speaker here today upon the occasion of a homecoming celebration arranged in his honor by his fellow townsmen.

Mr. Holder, after reviewing his record as chairman of the highway board and answering some of the charges made during the gubernatorial campaign, outlined several points he would advocate if elected governor. These included a program of educational expansion; change in banking laws that would, as far as possible, make deposits safe; no increase in taxes: no extra sessions of the legislature "unless the gravest necessities demanded it;" economical handling of the state's money; elimination of useless waste and duplication in the state's activities. He also voiced his opposition to state bonds, declaring that by 1927 there would be available for road building purposes the total of $13,000,000.

Mr. Holder stated that the highway board will allot 786 miles of state aid roads to the present mileage. He also stated that he was not "allied with any other candidate and am not in combination with any one."

Introduced by Ayers.

The speaker was introduced by J. S. Ayers, ex-mayor of Jefferson and a former member of the legislature from Jackson county.

Mr. Holder's speech in full follows:

"My Friends, Neighbors and Fellow Citizens:

"It was through your generosity and kindness that I was entered in the race as a candiate for governor of Georgia. I have been indebted to the people of Jackson county for many honors. I have served them both in the house and senate of the state of Georgia and no man could hold in more lasting love and grateful remembrance than myself the people of this great old county.

"I have been busily engaged in my duties at the highway department and have made no campaign speech, and have issued no campaign cards, but I felt that I would like to come back home and have a heart-to-heart talk with my neighbors and friends who have known me from childhood. I wanted to tell them how 'our' campaign was progressing.

"I call it 'ours' because under no

CANDIDATES BEGIN CLOSING DRIVES IN VARIOUS RACES

Governor's Race Gets Warmer as Holder Draws Fire of Other Aspirants.

Coming down the home stretch in the state political campaign candidates for state offices are applying the whip and spur in the hope that they will flash by to victory before the judge's stand of "Old Man Peepul" on September 8, and as a result there is considerable excitement in various races noted as candidates draw near the close of the campaign.

During the week just ended the increased activity of candidates for governor was one of the outstanding features. Three of the candidates centered an attack on John N. Holder, also a candidate for governor, while Chairman Holder made his first political speech in his home town of Jefferson, in which he stoutly defended his record and replied to his critics.

Eugene Talmadge, candidate for commissioner of agriculture against J. J. Brown, continued his attacks on that official, calling on Brown to meet him in further joint debates, while Brown steadfastly refused to engage in any more discussions with his opponent. Talmadge issued a statement reiterating charge that the state bureau of markets is bankrupt and also reviewing the fight against Brown which resulted in cutting the appropriation of that department. Statements also were issued by J. J. Brown and Dr. L. G. Hardman, candidate for governor.

George Confident.

From the campaign headquarters of United States Senator Walter F. George came a statement in which enthusiasm was expressed over reports from all parts of the state to the effect that the campaign of Senator George is in excellent shape and that he will be returned to the senate by an overwhelming vote.

The statement made public by E. B. Dykes, campaign manager, follows:

"We are elated over the uniformly favorable reports we have received from all parts of Georgia in connection with the candidacy of Senator George. After a careful check of our information we have found that the opposition has crumbled and that there is a strong sentiment built up throughout the state that it would be unwise to supplant Senator George at this time.

"The chief source of Senator George's strength is unquestionably his excellent record in the senate. We feel that the people of Georgia know full well the records of the candidates and are able to tell real service rendered in a patriotic spirit by a public official.

"We have found that there is an unwillingness on the part of the people to make a change either in the

1 DEAD, 3 HURT AS FEUD FLARES NEAR NASHVILLE

Aggressor Is Shot to Death, One Man, Woman and 6-Year-Old Child Injured in Family Duel.

CORONER TO PROBE FATAL SHOOTING

Lonnie Johnson, 35, Returns Suddenly From Florida and Threatens To "Wipe Out Family."

Nashville, Ga., August 28.—(AP)—One man is dead and three others are seriously wounded as a result of a gun battle between the Johnson and Luke families in the lower end of Berrien county this afternoon.

The dead:

Lonnie Johnson, 35, of Daytona, Fla., formerly of this county.

The wounded:

Perry Luke, 35, bullet wound in the shoulder.

Mrs. Perry Luke, shot through the neck, the bullet coming out at the mouth.

Perry Luke, Jr., aged 6, child of Mr. and Mrs. Perry Luke, bullet wound in the chest, within an inch of the heart.

Doctors say that he cannot live.

Lonnie Johnson, just back from Florida, who was in an automobile with his wife, is said to have driven to the home of Walter Luke, this afternoon, informing him that he was going to wipe out the family of Walter's brother, Perry, on sight.

At the time, according to information in the hands of county officers, Lonnie Johnson, who married a sister of Mrs. Perry Luke, ascertained that Perry Luke had gone to the home of his mother, to get her to spend Sunday with them. The mother resides on the highway between Adel and Ray City.

As Johnson drove away rapidly in the direction of the residence of his mother, Walter Luke cranked up his truck and obtained his shotgun and started in pursuit, but the automobile outran the truck in the chase.

When approaching the residence of his mother, Walter Luke found Lonnie Johnson's car turned across the highway, blocking traffic, while he said Lonnie Johnson was shooting into the car containing his brother and the members of his family.

As he climbed out of the truck, Walter Luke says that Lonnie Johnson turned his pistol upon him, but Walter Luke opened fire with his shotgun and killed Johnson almost instantly.

The wounded were taken to a doctor's office in this city and they are being cared for by relatives tonight.

Perry Luke tonight informed the officers who investigated the case, the latter said, that there had been "a little feud brewing between them" for some time, but he said he did not consider it serious. Perry Luke said that he didn't know that Lonnie Johnson was in the county.

Perry Luke told officers that he had a pistol on the seat beside him in the automobile, but would not use it for fear of killing his wife's sister, Mrs. Johnson, who was at the latter's side, endeavoring to prevent the tragedy.

There have been no warrants issued. Officers of this county said that there would probably be a coroner's inquest.

BRIDGES IS BACK IN BROWN CAMP, SAYS TALMADGE

Former Assistant Farm Commissioner, Who Quit After Row, Again for Brown, Says Candidate.

Fred T. Bridges, former assistant commissioner of agriculture, who left the state agricultural department following a stormy factional fight with J. J. Brown, is back with the Brown forces and is working for the reelection of Brown, according to charges made Saturday night by Eugene Talmadge, candidate for commissioner of agriculture, in a speech delivered before members of the Atlanta local of city and county public service employees held at the Labor temple.

Talmadge charged that Bridges has "made peace" with his former chief and is now traveling over the state addressing various secret orders in behalf of Brown's candidacy.

"A short time ago Brown was calling Bridges 'Judas' and heaping on his head curses as a traitor, but Bridges is now back with the Brown forces," Talmadge charged. "I have seen the grass shake and I know the snake is there. I warn all of the members of secret orders throughout the state to be on the lookout for Bridges."

Introduced by Cunningham.

Talmadge said that Lem B. Jackson and James H. Mills, two other former associates of Brown who retired from the department when Mills announced his candidacy against Brown, were sincere in their retirement and are still opposing Brown.

The speaker was introduced by W. C. Cunningham, president of the Georgia State Federation of Trades. In his speech of introduction Mr. Cunningham said that the action of a joint committee of labor and the Farmers' union, which indorsed Brown for commissioner of agriculture, was not binding on individual members of the labor organizations throughout the state.

"If I feel disposed on election day to go to the polls and vote for Eugene Talmadge for commissioner of agriculture I shall do so and I shall not violate any of the ethics of the labor movement," he said.

Talmadge said Brown had run away

WOMAN SUICIDE ATTEMPTED TO SAVE LIFE AFTER SHOT

Childress, Texas, August 28.—(AP)—Evidence that Miss Lila Clark Franklin, young woman practicing attorney of Ardmore, Okla., whose body was found in a hotel here yesterday, had attempted to save her life after shooting herself was found here today and that the shooting was accidental.

Apparently she had twisted a bed sheet and had attempted to force it in the wound near her heart to stop the flow of blood.

Her body was found after she arrived her about midnight Thursday with Norman Spann, 24, and Carl Farmer, 22, of Headland, Ala. They were on their way to California. The body was lying face downward on a small pistol.

ROACH IS BARRED FROM APPEARING IN CANTON PROBE

Chicago Criminal Attorney Conducting Inquiry Into Murder of Mellett Not To Take Part.

Canton, Ohio, August 28.—(AP)—Joseph R. Roach, Chicago criminal attorney, conducting an inquiry into the murder of Don R. Mellett, Canton publisher, and into the alleged liquor conspiracy from which the assassination is believed to have arisen, will not appear before the Stark county grand jury now in the midst of its inquiry in the murder.

In a conference between Prosecutor C. B. McClintock and Roach today it was decided that the attorney's personal appearance will not be necessary and that the evidence he has collected will be entrusted to McClintock for presentation.

As a result of the conference, all controversy between Roach and McClintock apparently was settled.

Earlier in the week Roach had threatened to withhold the information he has gathered because he said he believed McClintock "incompetent," a block to the inquiry.

McClintock answered the allegations with a wholesale issuance of subpoenaes and a vigorous statement that he is "out for indictments."

Acting Police Chief Wise today reported Patrolman Joseph Metzgar to Safety Director Earl W. Hexamer for insubordination. The step was understood to have been taken toward Metzgar's dismissal. He has been frequently mentioned in connection with various phases of the inquiry and was questioned in connection with the grilling of Mazer and Studer in Cleveland. His hearing is set for 9 a. m. Tuesday.

BANKS AUTHORIZED TO REDEEM NOTES FOR $415,000,000

Federal Reserve Institutions Will Begin on Monday Redemption of U. S. Treasury Certificates.

Washington, August 28.—(AP)—Federal Reserve banks, were authorized today by acting Secretary Winston, of the treasury, to begin on Monday redeeming the $415,000,000 in treasury notes to August 1, 1922, which mature September 15. The notes bear interest of 4 1-4 per cent and will be redeemed in cash at the holder's option at par and accrued interest.

New financing will be necessary to meet the obligations, Mr. Winston has announced, and it is expected the treasury on September 15 will issue new short term securities but probably at a lower rate of interest.

Additional Money Needed.

While tax collections for the September quarter are expected to total almost the amount of the maturing obligations, the treasury has found it will need additional money to meet prospective expenditures before the tax collections for the December quarter are received.

An analysis of internal revenue collections for July, the first month of the new fiscal year, showed the effects of the repeal of the capital stock tax provided by the new revenue law. Miscellaneous tax receipts totaled only $53,817,365, a decrease of $37,096,105 from July a year ago. Most of the capital stock tax returns were paid during this quarter.

Loss Is Offset.

This loss was offset, however, by increased returns from income taxes.

The corporation tax which was increased to meet the loss of the capital stock levy yielded $34,940,126 in July compared with $23,148,038 a year ago. Total income tax collections for July amounted to $50,551,730 compared with $34,953,218 in July, 1925.

COLUMBUS MAN DIES AS RESULT OF ELEVATOR FALL

Columbus, Ga., August 28.—(AP)—Clarence Austin, 28, died at the city hospital today as the result of injuries he suffered Friday when an elevator fell four stories at an annex of a local textile plant that is under construction. Marvin Beall, who was on the elevator with Austin, is in a critical condition.

Both men's backbones were broken and they were rendered unconscious. They were construction foremen.

Manley Collapses After Testifying Friday and Is in Local Hospital, Court Is Told.

WIFE OF BANKER ON STAND MONDAY

Manley Company Assets Placed at $781,936—Federal Probe of Affairs Begun.

While W. D. Manley, president of the defunct Bankers Trust company, who suffered a nervous collapse following his appearance on the stand Friday afternoon, was reported as "doing fine" at Piedmont sanitarium Saturday night, efforts of his creditors went forward unchecked before United States Commissioner Joe Abbott to prove that he is bankrupt.

After further sensational testimony had been elicited the hearing was adjourned at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and Mrs. Manley—who did not appear Saturday on account of the illness of her husband—will take the stand when the hearing is resumed Monday morning, according to agreement of counsel.

Saturday's developments in the case were as follows:

R. E. Lewis, cashier of the Farmers and Traders bank, of which Manley was president, issued a statement to newspapermen denying Manley's statement made on the witness stand to the effect that Manley had deposited $150,000 to the credit of the bank to save it from closing its doors. Mr. Lewis charged that Manley had promised to save the Farmers and Traders bank no matter what happened to the Bankers Trust company, but failed to do anything to halt the crash. The cashier also ridiculed various other claims made by Manley on the stand and said the banker had deposited sums at various times in the Farmers and Traders bank and had checked them out as fast as he put them in.

Miss Lena Long, Manley's secretary, on the other hand, appeared as a witness Saturday and testified that the banker had done everything in his power to avert failure of his banks and had poured thousands of dollars of his own into them in an effort to save them.

Meeting at Manley Home.

Other witnesses examined Saturday described a meeting July 7 at the Manley home on Pace's Ferry road, attended by Mr. and Mrs. Manley, their attorneys and Manley's secretary, at which time Manley's assets were transferred to the W. D. Manley company. They saw no consideration for the transfer passed, they said.

District Attorney Clint W. Hager announced that the federal grand jury would begin a general investigation into Manley's affairs September 1 and said subpoenas had been issued to

Screen Stars To Carry Body Of Valentino

Pola Negri Is Due To Arrive in New York City Today.

New York, August 28.—(AP)—Motion picture stars, producers and managers, and two fellow countrymen will carry the body of Rudolph Valentino into St. Malachi's church for funeral services Monday morning.

Douglas Fairbanks, Mal St. Clair, Richard Rowland, Adolph Zukor, Marcus Loew, Hiram Abrams, Sidney Kent, James R. Kirk, Joseph M. Schenck and Nicholas Schenck are the stars, producers and manager friends, who will act as pallbearers. Michael Romano and Frank Manillo, friends and countrymen, complete the list of those who will bear the casket into the church.

Pola Negri, actress, who had announced her betrothal to Valentino before his death, was en route from California to attend the funeral.

Men To Speak By Telepathy Says Watson

Prediction Is Made by Pioneer in Telephone Field.

New York, August 28.—(AP)—A future wherein man will speak to man by mental telepathy was predicted by Thomas A. Watson, of Boston, associate of Dr. Alexander Graham Bell in the manufacture of the first telephone instrument.

Watson, 72 years old, made his prediction at the annual convention of Telephone Pioneers of America. Lying on a table before him as he spoke was a reproduction of the first telephone. Gazing at it he said:

"When that little acorn sprouted half a century ago no one believed that it would grow into the great tree of the telephone system that now spreads its branches—17,000,000 instruments—all over the country. Nor can anyone predict its future. There is no limit to what science may achieve. Much can be achieved by concentration and the mind of man coordinated with mechanical inventions may yet lead to a spiritual communication such as mental telepathy.

MANLEY'S ILLNESS NOT TO HALT PROBE

Judge Arthur G. Powell said Saturday night that while no definite decision had been made by Manley's counsel on an appeal from the commission in ordinary's court which last week pronounced Manley sane and responsible for his acts, he was of the opinion an appeal would be taken. Action must be immediate in the matter, as the legal time limit for appeal expires Monday.

Judge Powell said that Manley suffered a nervous collapse from the strain of his appearance on the witness stand Friday, and that his heart action had been sufficiently alarming to cause his removal to Piedmont sanitarium. Attaches of the sanitarium reported at midnight that Manley was "doing fine," though no statement was made concerning when the banker would be released from treatment.

Assets Valued at $781,936.

Assets of the W. D. Manley company were valued at $781,936.70 on July 14, 1926, according to testimony of Isaac Wengrow, representing Attorney Herbert Haas and Arthur A. Acklin, personal representatives of Harold Hirsch, now acting as treasurer of the Bankers' Trust company.

Mr. Wengrow identified an audit of a safety deposit box and stated that the value named in the audit ($781,936.70) was, in his belief, the value of the assets of the company.

Mr. Wengrow testified that he has been active as an attorney for Manley. On July 7, he said, he went to Manley's residence on Pace's Ferry road in company with Herbert Haas. There were five present—Mr. and Mrs Manley, Mr. Haas, Miss Lena Long and himself, according to his testimony. He testified that he did not know all that took place at the meeting, declaring that he spent most of the time there talking to Mrs. Manley and Miss Long, while Mr. Manley and Mr. Haas were talking, seated at a desk at the other side of the room.

At this conference, he testified, various assets of Manley were transferred to the W. D. Manley company. Asked if he saw any consideration passed for the transfer, Mr. Wengrow stated that he did not, later stating that the actual transfers had been executed earlier in the day at Mr. Haas' office.

A safety deposit box containing assets of Manley was brought into the courtroom Saturday afternoon for the first time since the hearing opened. It was brought by Mr. Wengrow, who testified that probably he had "examined the contents" more frequently than anyone else.

On permission of the court, Judge Powell opened an envelope containing private papers of Mr. Manley. He did so without making announcement of what the envelope contained.

Acklin Trustee of Box.

Arthur A. Acklin testified that he had been made trustee of the safety deposit box.

"You have no interest in the W. D. Manley company?" Attorney Davie asked him.

"No."

He testified that he agreed to make an audit of the box. It was this audit that Mr. Wengrow identified, which listed assets of the W. D. Manley company at $781,936.70. He said he was made assistant treasurer of the W. D. Manley company by Mr. and Mrs. Manley.

$5,000 Note Removed.

Mr. Acklin testified that he had not unlocked the box until ordered to do so by the court. On re-direct examination by Attorney E. Smythe Gambrell, for Manley's creditors, Mr. Acklin said that the box had not been examined until Monday. The box had been opened several times since it had been engaged, however, he said.

"Mr. Haas took a $5,000 note out of the box over my protest?" Mr. Gambrell asked.

"Yes."

"The note was apparently Manley's note?"

"Yes."

"What was Haas' reply?"

"He refused to turn it over to you."

Protested Official Capacity.

"You remember I told you I didn't want you or Mr. Hirsch to accept official capacity with W. D. Manley company?" Mr. Gambrell asked.

"Yes."

"Have you ever acted as assistant treasurer of the company?"

"I don't think so."

On cross-examination Mr. Acklin said the intention of all parties concerned was to hold Mr. Manley's assets intact. Mr. Hirsch had not sought to go over them, he added.

"When was your first knowledge of Mr. Manley's intention to form this corporation?"

"Early in May."

Discussed Position.

"Didn't Mr. Manley offer you a position to handle the corporation for him?"

"We discussed that."

"He told you he was going to retire?"

"Yes."

"He wanted you to run it?"

"Yes."

Mr. Acklin added that he did not know what assets the company had then, testifying that the corporation was formed to transfer assets of Mr. and Mrs. Manley to it.

Secretary on Stand.

Miss Long was called to the stand next. She testified she had been Mr. Manley's private secretary since October 15, 1919.

"You knew as much about his private affairs as he did, didn't you?" Attorney Carl Davie, representing the state banking department in the case, asked.

"I thought I did; but now it seems I didn't."

Miss Long testified that the W. D. Manley company charter, which Mr. Manley has been accused of buying to "get a charter quick," lay dormant for a long time and that the banker received it in July. She insisted that every reference Mr. Manley made to the charter was always accompanied by the question as to whether he could get it "legally."

Attended Meeting.

She testified that she attended the meeting at the Manley home to which Mr. Wengrow referred in his testimony.

"I had no interest in the meeting and don't own anything in the company—I went because I was asked to go by Mr. Manley," she explained.

She testified that she thought Mr. Manley wanted to retire from business.

"When did Mr. Manley first become worried?"

"When his youngest daughter married. That's what threw him off."

"When did he begin to show worries over business?"

"I thought that if Mr. Manley had been let alone he would have come out all right. He was worried in February."

Ignorant of Assets.

"Do you know of any assets of Mr. Manley's that the receivers have not gotten possession of?"

"I asked Mr. Manley and he said he had turned over everything."

She said she knew nothing of any safety deposit box except the one in the courtroom.

"You remember in March Mr. Manley told the Bankers Trust company he was worth $8,000,000?"

"No; I think he got it down to about $3,000,000."

"Who owns the home on Paces Ferry road?"

"Mrs. Manley."

"When did she become the owner?"

"Probably in June, 1921."

"How much was paid for that property?"

"I don't know."

"Was it bought for cash?"

Cash and Notes.

"I think she paid a part of it and made notes for the rest. The last note is still pending. It is for $10,000."

"Do I have to answer all these questions?" Miss Long asked. "I don't want to betray confidences. I've been very close to Mr. and Mrs. Manley."

Assured that she must answer, Miss Long said Mr. Manley told her to pay the note on the home.

"I paid nearly all of Mrs. Manley's bills," she said.

"You spoke of paying Mr. and Mrs. Manley's bills; what other bills did you pay?"

"Nothing except to reduce a mortgage on the Spring street property. Twice a year I paid $200 notes on it."

Asked how much still is due on Mr. Manley's daughter's home in Morningside, Miss Long said only a few hundred dollars still is due on it. She said Mr. Manley paid about $150 a month on the house.

Man... Rolls-Royce.

Going into the personal property of Mr. Manley, it was brought out by Mr. Gambrell that Manley paid $12,000 for a Rolls-Royce automobile last September. She also told of his purchase of a Cadillac car.

"Judge, do I have to answer these questions?" she appealed again to Mr. Powell, Mr. Manley's attorney.

"You do," Judge Powell told her.

She said Manley paid cash for the Cadillac. She also told of purchase of a Marmon automobile in December, 1924. "It was Mr. Manley's Christmas present to Mrs. Manley," she stated.

"What other property did Mrs. Manley own besides Paces Ferry and Spring street property?"

"I don't know. Mrs. Manley was purchasing some other lots near her home, but has not paid them out."

"Could you estimate Mrs. Manley's worth?"

"I could not."

"What was the value of the Pace's Ferry home, $200,000 or $300,000?"

"I don't know."

$40,000 Annual Salary.

Mr. Davie elicited from the witness the information that Mr. Manley's salary from the bank was $40,000 a year.

"How much was Mrs. Manley's income?"

"I don't know."

"How much of the joint account was Mrs. Manley's?"

"I don't know."

"What money do you know of she deposited to the joint account?"

"I know she opened a savings account when she came back from Florida."

"Then it wasn't a joint putting-in account, it was just a joint paying account, wasn't it?"

"I don't know."

Can't "Twist Me Up."

Miss Long warned Mr. Davie that he wasn't going "to twist her up."

"I know what I said and I'm going to stick to it. I read what you said about me in the papers."

"I don't recall anything," Mr. Davie replied.

"You would if as many people had called you up as called me," Miss Long said. "I can't get a regular job. Everywhere I go somebody sticks a subpoena at me."

"You knew Mrs. Manley had money in the New York account of W. D. Manley and associates?"

"I had heard that."

"She was the associates of that firm, wasn't she?"

"Yes. I begged him not to send the money to Florida," Miss Long said. "I told him self-preservation was the first law. It was his obsession to never let a bank fail."

Put Money Into Banks.

"Did he put personal property into the banks to keep them from breaking?"

"I'm not holding a brief for anybody, but Mr. Manley certainly did pour his money into the banks."

"If you had been as vigorous as he was things would be all right now," she said, pointing her finger at Attorney Davie.

Miss Long said in her belief Mr. Manley would have remained solvent except for the Florida crash.

"I think that any man who brought banks through 1919, 1920 and 1921 deserves credit just like B. C. Forbes said," she commented.

Manley's Statement Denied.

R. E. Lewis, cashier of the Farmers and Traders bank, Manley's Peters street bank, alleged fraudulent insolvency, of which was specified as the basis of an indictment against Manley charging felony, Saturday told newspapermen in an interview that Manley had never deposited any money to the credit of that bank to avert its failure. Mr. Lewis said he told Mr. Manley that $100,000 in cash would avert a theratened crisis and that Manley promised to place the money with the bank. Manley failed to do this, Mr. Lewis said, but assured him up until the last minute that he would take care of the Farmers and Traders bank regardless of what happened to the Bankers' Trust company.

Mr. Manley's statement on the stand in federal court before United States Commissioner Joe Abbott, hearing a petition for bankruptcy filed against the banker, that he deposited $150,000 to the credit of the Farmers and Traders bank was branded as untrue by Mr. Lewis. He said that the only money Manley ever put in the bank was credited to his own account. Mr. Manley was frequently seriously overdrawn at the Farmers and Traders bank, Mr. Lewis said, and at the time the bank closed had only a few dollars more than $500 to his credit. Mr. Manley's statement that J. D. Russell was made president of the bank also was declared untrue by Mr. Lewis, who said that Mr. Manley now is and always had been, according to his knowledge, president of that bank.

Statement of Lewis.

Mr. Lewis' full statement follows:

"The statements made by Mr. Manley on the stand in federal court Friday were incorrect. He did not call me and asked what amount would be necessary to 'save the bank' and I did not tell him that deposits were $300,000. If he had called me on this question, I would have told him that they were approximately $457,000.

"Mr. Manley did not send me $150,000 in cash, as he stated in his testimony.

"Nothing passed between Mr. Manley and myself about further loans or pushing collections. Nothing was said about saving the bank. We didn't consider it subject to any saving—it was perfectly solvent.

Never Filled Agreement

"Officials of the Atlanta Lowry National bank went to Mr. Manley and discussed with him the matter of his giving them ample security to protect them in handling the Farmers' and Traders' bank account. This Mr. Manley refused to do and discussed the matter briefly with me and asked me at this time what I thought it would take to put a satisfactory balance with the Atlanta Lowry National bank. I told him at this time I thought $100,000 would satisfy this bank as to our balance and at the same time protect the bank against any emergency that might arise. He replied that he would arrange this amount of money immediately—but he has never complied with that agreement to this date.

"In the last hours of exitsence of the Bankers' Trust company and the Farmers and Traders bank, Mr. Manley positively assured me he would make financial arrangements to take care of this bank, regardless of what happened to the Bankers Trust company. When I advised him that I had gone as far as I could without him and asked him to comply with his agreement, he failed to do so.

"It is true that Mr. Manley placed quite a good deal of money in the Farmers and Traders' bank in various amounts during the last 60 or 90 days before the bank closed. But this money was credited to his account and was checked out by him. His balance at the time the bank closed was just a little over $500. He did not place one 5-cent piece of this money at the disposal of the Farmers and Traders' bank for any other purpose except for his own account. We recalled one check not very long before the bank closed for $16,459.45 made payable to the Bankers' Trust company with the notation 'payment in full'—also another for $10,000 to the 'Bankers Trust company with the notation 'loan 180 shares stock W. D. Manley company.' We know nothing of the checks save the notations.

Account Checked Out.

"A statement of Mr. Manley's account, which had been rendered to him together with an auditor's report will show that amount deposited by Mr. Manley was checked out by him as fast as it was deposited.

"Since I became connected with the bank on June 4, 1925, and according to records as far back as I have examined, Mr. Manley's account in this bank was frequently seriously overdrawn.

"I did not tell Mr. Manley over the telephone, as he stated, that I remembered what he did about placing $150,000 in this bank for its use. The fact is that he had never done this nor discussed doing it with me. As to his statement that Mr. Russell was made president of this bank, it is absolutely incorrect. So far as I know, such a procedure was never even discussed. If this had been done it would have been done at a regular meeting in a regular manner and the minutes of the bank would show it. But there is not such record in the bank, and I have never been present at any such meeting.

"Mr. Manley is now and, so far as I have any record, always has been president of this bank.

Derides Bankers' Claim.

"As to Mr. Manley being shocked, according to his statement, when he found that $175,000 had been loaned to banks of the Bankers' Trust company chain that he knew were in bad condition—this statement is absurd. There was a total of $95,000 of the Farmers and Traders' bank funds placed on call with various banks in the system, and this was done with complete knowledge and consent and in accordance with Mr. Manley's written instructions, as I have been told by higher officials who handled the transaction.

"Therefore, Mr. Manley knew all about the $95,000 being loaned to the various banks. I know nothing whatever concerning why they loaned this money to the banks nor of the condition they were in and the time the money was placed. I only knew to make the book entries, according to written instructions direct from his office. In fact, my power to loan money was only for $500 or less to local customers.

"With reference to the $6,000 which Mr. Manley stated Mr. Bennet (superintendent of banks) told him he was going to take over the following week, he does not even state which bank it is. If Mr. Manley had knowledge of the condition of this bank we are at a loss to understand why he would place $6,000 with it.

"It is absolutely untrue that Mr. Manley discussed the $11,000 item with me and also incorrect that my tellers told him his balance was insufficient to cover it. (Mr. Manley testified Friday that he gave a check to the Farmers and Traders bank for $11,000 to cover a note which he said was no good. He testified that he was informed by the teller that his balance was not sufficient and that he promised to get the remaining amount. The bank closed before he had opportunity to do this, he said) Mr. Manley did not discuss with me the making of this $11,000 loan, whatever it was, and, therefore, had no reason to discuss the worth of it with me, as he said he did.

At Manley's Instruction.

"His statement that I loaned $75,000 illegally without his knowledge or consent is absolutely untrue. Every dollar he refers to and $20,000 more was placed on call with various banks and done from his office under written instructions. These banks were given cash in form of exchange on the Farmers and Traders bank account or the equivalent.

"I had nothing to do with the manipulation or financing of this institution. The only checks written by me were for funds to pay the Atlanta Lowry National bank for our daily clearings and to pay our current bills. Most of this was done with cashier's checks.

"The financing of this bank was done in the offices of the Bankers Trust company exclusively and was never discussed with me. We received daily memorandums with instructions to book entries according to the handling of the finances of this bank.

"Mr. Manley was obliged to know the condition of this bank daily, for he received a daily statement showing completely and in detail the condition of this bank.

"I make this statement in behalf of the Farmers and Traders bank and persons who are interested."

Subpoenas in the federal probe of the Manley case have been issued for the following, according to court records:

D. B. Baker, cashier of the East Point bank; T. F. Hemminger, 48 Page avenue; J. K. Armstrong, 30 West Twelfth street; M. Godbee; Miss Lena Long, 759 Ponce de Leon avenue, former secretary for Mr. Manley and a former officer in the Bankers Trust company; Y. J. Stover, E. R. Jones, W. D. Floyd, C. R. Faulk and J. C. Kilgore, all of whom reside in the middle or southern districts of the United States court.

BIG POWER PROJECT IN SOUTH GEORGIA

Quitman, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—J. C. Donald, representing the power companies which have recently effected a big merger in this section, and H. C. Hoey, manager of the Valdosta Lighting company, were in Quitman this week and made highly significant talks at the weekly meeting of the Rotary club.

Speaking of the tremendous power development program now beginning in this section Mr. Donald said current would be brought direct from St. Petersburg to Valdosta, the latter to be a central distributing point. This line from Florida will have 90-foot towers and only four towers to the mile. A large plant is being built on the Withlacoochee river and another on the Ochlockonee, and a third is contemplated, with gigantic dams.

Mr. Donald declared the magnitude of the development has not yet dawned on the mind of the public in this section, but it is undoubtedly the most important single development in this section in many years, and means unlimited power for manufacturing and other uses. This development program in Georgia, Florida and Alabama covers 45,000 square miles and reaches from St. Petersburg to Waycross on the east and the Alabama line on the west.

Quitman was one of the first towns in this section to make a contract with the Valdosta Lighting company for piwer, doing this in preference to making expensive enlargements of the local light plant. Quitman is looking forward to using electricity for domestic purposes with an attractive low rate.

AUXILIARY YACHT OF NEW YORKERS GOES FOR SHARKS

Norfolk, Va., August 28.—(AP)—The auxiliary yacht Advance, owned by Louis Crossett, and David Milton and Edward K. Dunham, New York bankers, sailed from this port today on a shark-catching expedition to Cape Verde Islands.

"Every part of the shark," Crossett declared, "is valuable. The fin is the most valuable of all, selling from 70 cents to $2.70 per pound." Shark fin soup made from a gelatinous product of shark fin, is considered a rare delicacy in China, he exlained. Shark hide, he continued, can be developed into excellent leather, and shark liver oil contains considerable nutriment. Meal, derived from grinding the shark flesh after extracting the oil from it, is used, Mr. Crossett said, as feed for poultry and cattle.

STEINWAY

THE INSTRUMENT OF THE IMMORTALS

THE Steinway Piano has been manufactured and controlled by the Steinway family since 1853. The sons and grandsons of the original Steinway employees are making the Steinway today. They have grown up with Steinway traditions and are as jealous of those traditions as if they actually owned the business.

This, probably, more than any other one thing is the reason that Steinway Pianos never vary in quality. No less an authority than the famous Paderewski says that after trying Steinway after Steinway he is unable to make a choice because they are all perfect.

There are many styles of Steinway Pianos. There is one that will fit your home and your income. And, quality considered, they are moderately priced. This is especially true when you take into consideration the fact that when you purchase a Steinway your Piano expense is at an end. Steinway is so built that its quality is not impaired by many years of service.

Any new Steinway may be purchased with a small cash deposit and the balance will be extended over a period of two years.

THE NEW TREND IS TOWARDS THE NEW FRANKLIN!

Biggest July in Franklin history
Bigger Year to date than most prosperous on record
50% Gain in Sales to water-cooled car owners

[From complete dealer figures just received]

THE rising tide of New Franklin sentiment throughout the country is reflected in these three impressive sales facts. And the secret of the first two is contained in the third.

As the delivery of orders to established Franklin owners continues its steady growth, demand on the part of owners of other cars shows a sharp and significant rise.

In brief, other owners are beginning to see for themselves, as well as to hear from Franklin owners, that what the New Franklin gives cannot be bought in any other car!

Other owners are getting tired of buying cars famed for their high power—and then being constantly passed on the hills and outdistanced in the day's run by New Franklins.

("Do not think there is a car made that can beat them in a run of from 100 to 1000 miles," says John M. Rees of Pittsfield, Mass., who speaks from a wide experience with other cars.)

Other owners are getting tired of buying cars noted for their Pullman-like weight—and then discovering that it is the New Franklin which comes closest to giving Pullman-like comfort.

("Series 11 is the easiest-riding of all cars I have ever driven," says Roy W. Sexton of Wytheville, Va., who has driven cars continuously since the early days of the industry.)

Other owners are getting tired of buying cars reputed to be easy to handle—and then noticing that any New Franklin owner can drive farther with less fatigue than they can.

("I have never driven a car so easily operated as my new Franklin Sport Sedan," says J. H. Rose, Pittsburgh, Pa., who also finds them more comfortable than the cars of longer wheelbase he has been driving.)

Other owners are learning that aviation is turning to air-cooling, that Byrd and Cobham used air-cooled planes, that only Franklin offers this same superior dependability and efficiency in motor cars—and are insisting on having it!

("The most marvelous success. I drove with wide-open throttle in Texas temperatures of 110°, all day, day after day, with no suggestion of overheating," says Paul Hunt, Dallas, Tex., comparing Franklin with water-cooled cars he has used in the past.)

Other owners are seeking lines and looks that are not standardized—materials and workmanship of real pre-war fineness—long life that gives them new-car performance over a period of years—and finding them in the New Franklin!

("Nearly all automobile manufacturers speak of quality, but I believe that only Franklin owners realize the great difference," says H. B. Holloway, Elkhart, Ind., who has owned 47 automobiles in all.)

And other owners are comparing prices with products—costs with results—and are concluding that more money will not buy more than the New Franklin gives, and that less money will not buy nearly so much.

("Have driven and ridden in almost every make. Would not give up the Franklin for any car in America, regardless of price," says E. D. Church, Cambridge, N. Y.)

Are you an "other owner"? NOW IS THE TIME TO OWN A FRANKLIN! Performance, quality and style were never higher—price has never been so favorable. Come in and get all the facts—today!

Perhaps you do not realize how easily you can become a New Franklin owner. Your present car in trade may cover the entire first payment. Balance on easy monthly terms, making it today's wisest motor car investment. Ask for full information.

NICHOLES, NEW YORK SHIP-NEWS HOUND, IS ATLANTAN

Former Constitution Man

On Tuesday morning, August 3, a story appeared on the front page of The Constitution, and on the front pages of a thousand or so other morning newspapers, which related the strange case of Morton Nicholes, modestly paid ship news reporter on the staff of the Wall Street Journal, who remained true to the ethics of his profession on one of the hottest stock tips in history, who passed it along to no one and who—while the paper profits of others in on the General Motors coup mounted in two market days to $115,000,000—profited not a cent by it.

Morton Nicholes is the son of Henry M. Nicholes, of Peachtree road. He was a reporter for The Constitution several years ago before going to New York to work for the financial journal. Morton was regarded as an unusually good reporter in Atlanta. He had the required nose for news, which he apparently took with him to New York, for there he is rated "the best ship news reporter in town." Through his family connections and his association with The Constitution, Morton was widely known in Atlanta and many knew that he was the "Morton Nicholes" of the Wall street case.

Volunteered for Army.

Morton entered Oglethorpe in the first class of 1916, remaining there until 1917 when he entered the army. He would have been exempt from service on account of a bad eye, but he chose instead to volunteer, enlisting in the ambulance corps which was made up here and which took several Constitution reporters to France. Some time after his enlistment Morton won a commission in the 118th field artillery, where he saw action on the front. He remained in the army two years after the armistice, after which he reentered Oglethorpe university, graduating in 1920.

In 1921 Morton left The Constitution to go to New York and begin his present work. He has been with the Wall Street Journal since that time and has, by his extraordinary ability as a reporter, won the rating of the "best ship news reporter in New York."

According to his father Morton has won a number of prizes and salary increases during the five years he has been with The Journal, some of them being awarded when he succeeded in interviewing prominent men of the financial world who had never been interviewed before.

Won Many Honors.

He was selected by his paper to represent it on the trial trip of the Leviathan. Many such honors have been accorded him, and his friends have watched his progress with a great deal of interest and probably a few "I told you so's."

The "hot stock tip" which has brought the former Constitution reporter a deal of fame throughout the United States, certainly on Wall street and in his own home town, was given to him in an interview with Thomas Cochran, one of the J. P. Morgan partners, as he was about to sail for Europe. Shortly before midnight of Saturday, July 31, Nicholes sat on the foredeck talking with Mr. Cochran. The usually reticent financier remarked that "General Motors should and will sell at least 100 points higher."

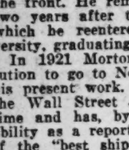

Morton Nicholes went home to a New Jersey suburb. He stayed there Sunday with his wife and baby. Monday morning he telephoned the story to a rewrite man in The Journal office.

Unethical to Play Tips.

It is said that within an hour after the strangely excited rewrite man took the story the Dow-Jones ticker of the Wall Street Journal had carried the Cochran prediction and General Motors was booming upward from a low 190 to 201 1-2 at closing. This was Monday, August 2. Tuesday it soared to 213 3-4, closing just under high at 213 1-2. The turnover in the stock was 275,300 shares on that Monday and 346,000, or about one-eighth of the total business on the following day.

Morton's information made financial history. But his managing editor explained that he saw nothing unusual in the fact that Nicholes kept it to himself. It is considered unethical for staff men to play the tips they naturally pick up in a day's work.

TARIFF WILL REMAIN UNCHANGED SAYS WOOD

Washington, August 28.—(AP)—Chairman Wood, of the republican congressional committee, predicted today upon his return from a visit to President Coolidge that no changes would be made in the tariff "until 1928."

The approaching short session of congress, he said, would be devoted almost entirely to appropriation bills.

ROBBERS LEAVE MAN HIS HAT, BUT NOTHING ELSE

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution.)

Chicago, Ill., August 28.—James Flynn was sauntering towards his home in Evanston when he encountered Policeman Skolnik. Mr. Flynn was jauntily attired in his beeveedees and a battered straw hat.

"There is something peculiar about this," commented the policeman. "Your straw hat destroys the ensemble. Your get-up puzzles me. You wouldn't go swimming in the hat, and as for the rest of it—well, it ain't that hot."

"Well," responded Mr. Flynn. "I was assisted in this make up. Two coarse men in an automobile took from me all my clothes except what you see; also my $6, so it occurred to me to get home as expeditiously as possible, attired as I am."

Government Needs More Architects For Construction

Washington, August 28.—A shortage of architects is holding up the government $165,000,000 public building program provided by the last congress.

Heavy private construction this year has kept architects busy and few are available.

Up to this time the supervising architect of the treasury who is charged with preliminary drafting work, has been able to fill but 17 of 63 vacancies for assistant architects and draftsmen.

ALLEGED ATLANTAN TAKES POISON DOSE

Louisville, Ky., August 28.—(AP)—A man who poisoned himself and kept his identity secret for 48 hours late today told hospital authorities his name was Arthur William Brady, of Atlanta.

Unknown Here.

There is no Arthur William Brady listed in the Atlanta city directory and all efforts to learn the identity of such a man in Atlanta failed Saturday night.

Dressed in mourning, she did not emerge from her seclusion as her train rolled through Chicago today. She is due in New York tomorrow morning.

Seven sacks of mail were reported received by the treasurer of the Rudolph Valentino memorial committee today. The sacks will not be opened until offices are established next week. The letters, believed to contain contributions to a fund for a memorial for the dead motion picture star, come from all parts of the country.

POLA FINDS DREAM SHATTERED.

Chicago, August 28.—(AP)—Pola Negri, in the loneliness of a private car, mourned today over the fragments of her shattered dream—a film career crowned with herself and Rudolph Valentino starring together, then a happy marriage, love and children.

Denied marriage—she announced their engagement some time ago—by his death, Pola wishes to take his body to Hollywood.

But she was ill today, still weak from her collapse at Kansas City, and during the less than three hours spent here before her car was attached to a New York train, she remained secluded in her car.

Former Marriage Repudiated.

Miss Negri apparently was agitated when reporters called through the door and asked her regarding intimations that the screen idol had felt that for religious reasons his marriage to his first wife, Jean Acker, still was binding in a spiritual way.

"No, no, no. It is not so," she said. "Everybody on the coast knows it is not so."

Asked then if she would take his body to Hollywood, she answered:

"I will do my best."

Would Have Made Film.

Before she reached Chicago newspapermen quoted her as referring to a film the two would have made together.

"We were to have made a picture together which was to be the final one of my career. Then we were to have settled down."

Valentino wanted a happy home and children, she recalled. Her secretary, Miss Florence Heim, said Pola dreaded the ordeal ahead at the funeral in New York, and that she was still suffering from the shock of his death.

BRIDGES BACKS BROWN DECLARES TALMADGE

from him in joint debates and although the original challenger had declined to meet him on the stump.

"He is afraid to discuss his administration as commissioner of agriculture and is now devoting his time to circulating petty side issues over the state under a stamp of the state market bureau which belongs to the state of Georgia. He has charged that I am the candidate of numerous state leaders, recently he went out of his state and charged that I was the candidate of Al Smith, of New York. If he will just go west now and say that I am the candidate of 'Ma' Ferguson and Dan Moody that will make it unanimous. The truth is that he has found I am the candidate of so many Georgians that he sees the doom of his machine and is like the proverbial drowning man grasping at straws. He's beat worse than any candidate in Georgia has been beat in a quarter of a century."

Talmadge recommended that the number of state oil inspectors be reduced from 191 to six; that the entire state department of agriculture be reorganized; that the state bureau of markets be continued and that it be forced to function for the benefit of the farmer and that the state market bulletin be enlarged and expanded. He urged changes in the fertilizer inspection laws and urged a drastic cut in the payrolls, many of the salaries, he said, having almost the appearance of "graft." He said Brown's family is drawing $29,000 a year from the state with "rambling expense accounts" and said the defeat of Brown would automatically put a stop to this condition.

Fred Stephens, president of local 17,212, presided at the session. After the Talmadge speech Robert Gordon and J. Allen Couch, candidates for mayor, made short talks.

GAINESVILLE MILL SITE IS SURVEYED

New York, August 28.—(AP)—Construction of a large cotton mill in the vicinity of Gainesville, Ga., costing several million dollars with the eventual development of a model settlement is being planned by the Chicopee Manufacturing corporation of New Brunswick, N. J., and Chicopee, Mass., it was learned today.

Surveys of land about three and a half miles from Gainesville are now being made. Officials of the company said tentative plans include the erection of a mill, bleachery, power house and several hundred cottages.

EXODUS OF NEGROES REPORTED AT SPARTA

Sparta, Ga., August 28.—(Special.) Many negroes are again leaving this section for the cities of the north and east, according to local railroad officials. A party of 16 left here yesterday morning and each week sees a half dozen or more entrain for the trip.

Practically all of the negroes leaving now have been sent for by relatives who went up several years ago and now have sent money for the remaining ones to come.

Peggy Joyce Announces Two

New Engagements on Arrival

Peggy Hopkins Joyce showing, in inset, her latest fiance—Stanford Comstock.

New York, August 28.—When Peggy Hopkins Joyce comes sailing into the port of New York without a fiance, that's news.

Peggy admitted when she arrived on the Berengaria Friday from Europe that two engagements were of vital interest to her. One was with a dentist; the other, with a doctor.

Peggy had an ulcerated tooth and displayed a bandaged ankle which she said she had sprained on boarding the ship.

Peggy has not stayed in Europe long this time. It was only a short while ago that she sailed, sending from the parting ship a message breaking the latest known engagement. "Changed my mind," read Peggy's message, "—woman's privilege—not marrying anyone."

This message announced the cancellation of plans published regarding her acceptance of the proposal of Stanford Comstock, most recent of the long list of Peggy Hopkins Joyce's male conquests.

Beginning with the opening of the fall term, Tuesday, September 7, the Atlanta School of Oratory and Expression, 402 Wesley Memorial church building, will offer a special course in school music in addition to the regular courses in expression, voice, public speaking, salesmanship, dramatic art and piano.

Mrs. A. R. Burt, teachers of school music, will conduct this department.

WEST END METHODIST REVIVAL ENDS TODAY

Conclusion of the evangelistic meetings in progress at Calvary Methodist church, in West End, for the past two weeks, will be made with today's services, which include for the morning sermon, "The Church's Challenge to Men of Today," and for the evening meeting, "Christ, the Only Hope for a Shattered World."

The Rev. Felton Williams, pastor of the church, has conducted the preaching, and O. A. Spruell has been in charge of the musical programs.

Right To Vote Is Retained

:: MILTON CITIZENS GET RULING ON ELIGIBILITY ::

In Change of County Line

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

Sixty-four citizens of Milton county can stand the stigma of being moved legally and bodily out of that county into the worldly county of Fulton but they'll be dad-burned if they are going to lose their right to vote by such a transfer.

This, in effect, is what a delegation told Assistant Attorney General T. R. Gress Saturday when its members called on him to learn their status as voters.

Recently a small section of Milton county was detached from that county and added to Fulton. The action was of a friendly nature as the people of that part of Milton county wanted some better roads and felt that Fulton was more able to pay for them than Milton.

But after the change was legally consummated they found that there was a possibility of losing the right of suffrage through the change.

Under the law a voter must be a resident of his county six months before he can cast his ballot. Inasmuch as the 64 new citizens of Fulton have been legal residents of this county for a little more than two weeks they asked the attorney general to tell them, "where they are at."

Mr. Gress said that common sense occasionally makes itself felt in the laws of this country and adopted common sense as his slogan he ruled that the former Milton county voters could vote in Fulton county provided they were properly qualified in the old county before the change was made. He ruled that they would be entitled to register in Fulton county and vote in the forthcoming elections.

Solaced by this ruling and renewed supplies of good old "Brown's Mule" plug the delegates returned with their peace of mind restored and their citizenship in this country guaranteed by the ruling of the assistant attorney general and backed up by the army and navy of the good old state of Georgia.

WIFE IS SLAIN BY HER HUSBAND AND HIS PARENTS

Prague, Czecho Slavia, August 28. In the village of Maleschitz, near Pilsen, Mrs. Helene Escafer was hacked and scalded to death by her husband, 29, and the latter's seventy-year-old parents, prosperous farmers.

Th parents, who were in a constant state of war with the daughter-in-law, decided to get rid of her. They locked her in a room and the old man began scientifically to carve her to pieces with a sharp shovel while her husband battered her head with a wagon shaft and the old woman poured boiling water over the writhing victim.

The woman's screams attracted a farm hand, who saw the scene through a window and forced the door, but was too late to save the girl. The police arrested the husband, but the father cut his arteries and died.

Federal Reserve Review Sees Average Conditions

Declaring that the final outturn of the cotton crop in Georgia and in the south will depend upon whether the various influences affecting the crop during the remainder of the season are more or less favorable than usual, the monthly busines review covering conditions in the sixth federal reserve district issued today characterised the agricultural conditions in the sixth district du ng July and August as "seasonal." It added that some crops are still late because of the late cool spring, and that in some sections there has been excessive rain recently, and in others there has been a continued lack of moisture.

The report covered activities and conditions in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee.

Discounts by the Federal Reserve bank of Atlanta for its member banks increased in this four weeks' p riod by nearly $5,500,000. Savings deposits at the end of July reported by 91 banks in this district decreased 4.8 per cent compared with June, following the interest period, but were 9.7 per cent greater than a year ago. Debits to individual accounts at 24 reporting cities in the district were 4.9 per cent greater in July than in June, and 6.1 per cent greater than in July last year.

Cotton consumed in the cotton-growing states during July, according to the United States census bureau's statement, increased 2.4 per cent over July of last year, but mills in the six district reported decreases in production of cotton yarn and cloth. The production of pig iron in Alabama in July was 3.2 per cent greater than in June and 9.5 per cent greater than in July last year.

The average price prevailing on the Savannah market for rosins in July were over 32 per cent higher than in July last year. Building permits at 20 cities in the sixth district during July amounted to $13,802,440, a decrease of 18.8 per cent compared with July of last year. Contracts awarded in this district during July were 17.1 per cent greater than in June, but 30.9 per cent smaller than in July, 1925.

Retail Trade Reported.

Retail trade, the report showed, "as is usual in the mid-summer months," suffered a decline compared with the preceding months, but the July sales were 3.6 per cent greater than in the same month last year. For the first seven months of 1926 retail trade has been 6.8 per cent greater than for the corresponding period last year.

For July, wholesale trade reached a point lower than in June or in July last year, however, except for July, 1925, wholesale tr..de in July this year was better than has been recorded.

Following a decline of approximately $32,250,000 between the middle of March and the middle of July, loans and discounts by 36 member banks in selected cities in the sixth district increased nearly $5,000,000 between July 14 and August 11. There was also a net increase in investments in stocks and bonds of a little more than $2,000,000 in this period. Time deposits increased, but there was a decline in demand deposits.

The report pointed out that though the Florida citrus crop was injured in the July tropical storm, indications are for a materially larger crop than that of last season. With the exception of oats, white potatoes, hay and apples, crops in Mississippi are scheduled to be smaller than last season. The report for Alabama stated that somewhat better conditions prevail this year than last for most crops, except cotton, while the smaller acreage of peanuts will give nearly a million bushels less in production. The wheat yield for Tennessee was reported to be the largest ever shown in that state.

Continuing to quote from information received from the United States department of agriculture, the federal reserve review said that there is some deterioration in the cotton crop in the southern half of Georgia caused by excessive rains, shedding of small bolls, and increased weevil activity. Cotton hopper ravages in Alabama cotton fields were said to have abated. The cotton crop in Louisiana was said to be from two to three weeks late, while in Mississippi farmers are encouraged by the decrease in cotton hopper damage.

Commercial failures in the sixth district totaled 75, with liabilities amounting to $2,504,453, compared with 72 failures in June with liabilities totaling $839,327, and with 81 failures in July, 1925, with liabilities amounting to $2,457,950.

Commodities exported during May, 1926, the latest month for which detailed figures are available, through the New Orleans port, were valued at $33,908,130, an increase of 17.8 per cent over the total for April, 1926, and 6 per cent greater than the value of exports of May, 1925. Increases over May, 1925, were shown in exports of cotton, gasoline, and illuminating oil, but decreases occurred in some of the other principal items. The total value of merchandise imported through this port for May, 1926, was $14,971,612, less than half the value of imports during the preceding month, and smaller than the totals for May of any of the preceding three years.

Exports of grain through the New Orleans port during July, 1926, the beginning of the new season, amounted to 1,118,005 bushels, showing a gain of 103,061 bushels when compared with 1,014,944 bushels exported in July, 1925. The increase was attributed to increases in the volume of corn and oats exported.

During the cotton season of 1925-26, extending from August 1, 1925, through July, 1926, the consumption of cotton, according to statistics compiled by the U. S. census bureau, has amounted to 6,450,987 bales, a decrease of 742,430 bales, or 10.3 per cent as compared with the consumption during the preceding year, which amounted to 7,193,417 bales.

Cotton consumed during July, 1926, totaled 460,918 bales, smaller by 11.1 per cent than the consumption in June, and 4.8 per cent less than the amount consumed in July, 1925. Stocks of cotton in consuming establishments at the end of July declined 13.5 per cent compared with the month before, but were 26.6 per cent greater than a year ago. Stocks in public storage and in compresses were 19.6 per cent smaller than at the end of June, but were nearly three times greater than at the end of July, 1925. July exports of cotton were 5.4 per cent greater than in June, and 80.5 per cent greater than in July, 1925. Spindles active at the end of July numbered 31,082,482, a decrease of 618,418 compared with the preceding month and a decrease of 654,864 compared with July, 1925.

26 Million Yards Made.

Confidential reports rendered to the Federal Reservee bank by cotton mills in the sixth district showed that in July they manufactured 26 million yards of cloth. This production was five-tenths of 1 per cent compared with June output by the same mills, and a decrease of 2.6 per cent compared with their production in July last year. Shipments and orders booked during July, and unfilled orders on hand at the end of the month exhibited increases over June, and over July, 1925. Stocks on hand declined 12 per cent compared with June, but were 1.2 per cent greater than a year ago. The number of workers on the pay rolls of these reporting mills decreased 2 per cent in July compared with June, but was 1.2 per cent greater than a year ago.

July production by cotton yarn mills which produced 6.3 million pounds of yarn during the month, showed a decrease of 6.5 per cent compared with their output in June, and was 6.6 per cent smaller than their production in July last year. Shipments orders booked and unfilled orders were greater than a month ago, but exhibited decreases compared with figures for July, 1925. Stocks on hand were 9.3 per cent greater than at the end of June, and 45.6 per cent greater than a year ago. The number of workers employed by these mills decreased five-tenths of one per cent compared with June, but was 2.6 per cent greater than in July, 1925.

Rich Employees Go on Annual Picnic Via Bus

Employees of M. Rich & Bros. Co., one of Atlanta's greatest department stores, enjoyed the annual picnic given Saturday. They traveled to and from Idlewood, scene of the festivities, by motor coach and, in addition to the primary requisite of a luscious picnic lunch, enjoyed swimming, games and other play features all day. They are shown, above, leaving the front of the great Rich store early Saturday morning.

DARING HOLD-UP TRIED IN MACON

Macon, Ga., August 28.—(AP)—Three men who drove up to the superintendent's office of the W. S. Dickey Clay Manufacturing company at 2:45 o'clock this afternoon and staged a hold-up failed to get any money for the hold-up took place 15 minutes before the weekly payroll had been delivered to the plant.

Two of the men covered Sam Grice, clerk, and a son of Warren Grice, president of the Georgia Bar association, with pistols, the third remaining in the automobile.

They demanded that Grice open the safe and turn over the payroll. Grice cooly informed them that he didn't know the safe combination and that the payroll had not arrived. The men fled.

A. H. Mitchell, superintendent, had passed through the office five minutes before the hold-up took place and apparently the men believed that he carried the weekly payroll of more than $1,500.

The Dickey plant is owned by St. Louis interests.

Sheriff's deputies and the police are on the trail of the hold-up men.

Three highwaymen in a light touring car held up the proprietor, a customer and clerk of the College Hill Grocery store late tonight and obtained $130, which the victims had in their pockets. They are believed to be members of the same gang that attempted to rob W. S. Dickey Clay Manufacturing company this afternoon.

Motorcycle police, motorized police and sheriff's deputies pursued the highwaymen.

MAMMOTH CAVE SALE PREDICTED

Louisville, August 28.—(AP)—The sale of Mammoth cave, with the possibility that it might become a national park, was foreseen by persons interested in the project after news of the death of Mrs. Serena Livingston Rodgers, of San Francisco, was received here today.

Mrs. Rodgers was the last of the original heirs to the estate. Under terms of the will of John Croghan, who purchased the cave properties in 1812, the property is to be sold at public auction after the death of the last of the heirs.

Congressman Maurice H. Thatcher, whose bill for converting Mammoth cave into a national park was passed by congress, said now is the time for the people of Kentucky to purchase the land and present it to the government.

His bill provides for creation of a national park when at least 20,000 acres in the cave are deeded to the government.

Thatcher said that no legislation would be needed to make Mammoth cave a national park as it will be made one when the land is deeded to the government.

The Croghan will signed in 1849 says the property is to be sold on "credits of two and three years, after advertising the same in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Washington, New Orleans and such other places as they may think proper."

Crop Good in Bibb.

Macon, Ga., August 28.—(Special.) Bibb county will grow from 2,500 to 3,000 bales of cotton this year with acreage about the same as last year. Some damage has been done by fleas but little from weevils. The yield will be under last year's with price running five cents a pound lower.

Good crop of corn, big crop of pecans with all other crops unusually good, except an overproduction of peaches. Farmers in fair shape due to running on cash basis.

KEEPING STEP---1906

Twenty years ago! Words that evoke a light-hearted Atlanta---an Atlanta that waltzed and two-stepped, laughed at the antics of Maud the Mule in the very novel funnies, and still admired the "straight-front" Gibson girl, "daughter of the gods, divinely tall," who laid a hat so lightly on the tip-top of her high pompadour.

But it was a stable Atlanta too---
An Atlanta 110,000 strong!
An Atlanta issuing bonds to build a big city auditorium
An Atlanta proud of the new Terminal Station, which had been modestly---too modestly---planned to "meet the needs of the city for fifty years."

1906---a mile-post in the history of M. Rich & Bros. Co. Service---worn 54 Whitehall rebuilt. Space trebled. The pulse of the twentieth century registering changes---changes in the lives of women---implied by the increased demand for ready to wear merchandise. "Lawn and batiste waists, bell-shaped skirts, and zouave coat-suits leading favorites."---(From Atlanta Journal files of 1906.)

Motto of Rich's in its third home: Adaptation to a growing city's needs at all times. The enduring motto of

Judge Alex. W. Stephens Entitled On His Record to Reelection as Judge of Court of Appea

Lawyers From All Sections of the State Familiar With the Work o Judge Stephens Commend His Splendid and Efficient Service

From Letters to Judge Stephens

A. S. Bradley, Swainsboro:
"Your decisions show sound judgment, an excellent knowledge of the law and painstaking and thorough endeavor to arrive at just conclusions."

H. F. Lawson, Hawkinsville:
"Your opinions have been distinguished by clearness and painstaking study and thought, and the legal results which you have reached are uniformly sound. This clearness and soundness could not, in justice to the work which you are doing, be reached in a hurry."

Marion H. Allen, Milledgeville:
"Your decisions are couched in clear and succinct language and were delivered after careful and intelligent study and legal research. It is in your head-note decisions that your qualifications as an outstanding judge are so clearly indicated."

J. E. Hall, Macon:
"You are industrious, able and careful. I should dislike very much to have appellate judges indulge in speed contests to determine which could reach quickest a decision in a case. Such procedure would be most unfortunate."

A. S. Skelton, Hartwell:
"The opinions you have written in cases assigned to you appeal to me as being clear, logical and strong, couched in elegant language and always declaratory of the law as related to the case under consideration."

Fred Kea, Dublin:
"I have been impressed by the well-balanced, fair, impartial and brilliant services rendered by you. Your work as Judge of the Court of Appeals clearly demonstrates your ability, industry and impartiality, and should insure your reelection to this distinguished tribunal."

Edgar J. Oliver, Savannah:
"Your decisions are careful, thoughtful and correct so far as it is humanly possible for any judge to be correct upon legal questions. Your decisions are just as prompt as it is possible for a judge to be who gives careful and thoughtful consideration to the questions requiring decision."

Judge James Beall, Carrollton:
"I have had occasion to peruse many of your opinions in the appellate court decisions, all of which I find to be fair, just, comprehensive and clear."

T. Hicks Fort, Columbus:
"I approve of your work as judge on that court and candidly think that your decisions and opinions have been marked by deep learning and fairness."

Benj. J. Fowler, Macon:
"I regard you as one of the best judges on the Appeals bench."

Judge E. W. Jordan, Sandersville:
"I feel that your record on the bench is entirely satisfactory and I think you should be elected to succeed yourself."

Judge G. A. Johns, Winder:
"Your record as judge entitles you to the favorable consideration of the voters and to reelection, and certainly the experience required in this particular work should and does better qualify you for further service."

Lee B. Wyatt, LaGrange:
"I consider the opinions written by you outstanding."

E. C. Stark, Commerce:
"I admire you for your fairness and common sense. Your opinions are always clear and understandable."

Judge J. R. Pottle, Albany:
"I know that you have been conscientious and painstaking and that your opinions reflect great industry, as well as profound knowledge of legal principles."

W. B. Mebane, Rome:
"The bar here have been favorably impressed with your work in the Court of Appeals. They say that your opinions show study, research and hard work."

Judge U. V. Whipple, Cordele:
"Your cordial manner, your careful and thorough attention to duties of the office, and your general acceptability to the people at large, combine to render you an ideal man for the position you occupy."

Judge William Wynne, Washington:
"Your opinions rendered while judge of the Court up to this time afford ample evidence of your ability and knowledge of the law to qualify you for the position."

George C. Palmer, Columbus:
"Your opinions are clear expositions of the law and bear evidence of having been carefully and ably prepared."

R. G. Hartsfield, Bainbridge:
"Your decisions exemplify a vast amount of industry expended, and a discriminating grasp of legal principles and precedents, and, what is more important, are clear cut and comprehensive."

Warren Grice, Macon:
"Your decisions show that you have studied the record, have grasped the points involved and generally have applied the law applicable thereto. Your reasoning is good, your opinions are in good judicial form, and altogether you have made a very satisfactory judge, and I think it would be a mistake to replace you with another who has had no experience in appellate court work."

J. L. Smith, Carrollton:
"Your able opinions, rendered fairly and impartially, should meet the approval of the voters of Georgia."

Noel P. Park, Greensboro:
"Your record, and the service you have rendered, entitles your retention of the office."

T. L. Bowden, Columbus:
"I consider your decisions are well rendered, and are as good as those of any judge on any appellate court in Georgia or elsewhere."

M. Felton Hatcher, Macon:
"I think your record as judge has been beyond criticism and that you merit reelection."

H. A. Boykin, Sylvania:
"Your record as judge of the Court of Appeals demands your reelection."

H. H. Chandler, Winder:
"I think your record on the bench deserves the support of the members of the bar, as well as all good citizens."

Judge W. M. Harper, Americus:
"I am impressed that a majority of the citizens of our state, and particularly of the lawyers, appreciate the value of your service on the bench, and we wish to keep you there."

Judge W. B. Sloan, Gainesville:
"I have read with satisfaction your decisions in which you stick right by the old principles of law upon which our personal rights rest."

James E. Rosser, LaFayette:
"I have watched your record on the Court of Appeals for some years, and I am inclined to say, without the slightest utterance of flattery, that you have made a splendid official."

W. S. Paris, Clayton:
"You have made a good impartial judge. I hope you will continue to discharge the duties of your office as ably and faithfully in the future as you have in the past."

Judge Frank Harwell, Atlanta:
"Your work on the civil division of the Court has shown a careful and thorough consideration of the questions to be decided in each case, and I feel sure that you have disposed of the cases assigned to you as promptly as was compatible with thorough and painstaking work."

James L. Dowling, Moultrie:
"His decisions reflect painstaking, careful study and a sound grasp of the fundamental principles of our jurisprudence."

E. W. Coleman, Canton:
"I am very much pleased with your handling of cases, and I feel that you are now more able to pass on questions of law than you were at the beginning of your term."

Y. A. Henderson, Calhoun:
"I feel that you have filled the position with merit to the people and credit to yourself."

Geo. A. H. Harris, Jr., Rome:
"I have watched your record closely and I think that you did well when you first went on the bench, but you have grown and I unhesitatingly think you are entitled to a vote of approval by the people."

Sam S. Bennet, Albany:
"I know that you have given the case careful and conscientious consideration before you have announced your view. I think this last-mentioned characteristic of yours is one especially desirable in a Judge—to be valued far above any quickness of decision, which is the result of 'jumping to conclusions' without proper consideration of the case."

Stanford Arnold, Newnan:
"The efficiency of an appellate judge is not measured by how quickly he may decide an issue but is measured by his ability to render a decision in accordance with the principles of Law, Equity and Justice, and his ability in rendering his judgment to write such an opinion as will bring to our state and our courts prestige and honor. Judged on such a basis, your record cannot be assailed by anyone and your decisions have been such as to bring credit to the court and to the state."

Wm. Hicks Key, Monticello:
"A consideration of the opinions written by you bespeaks of your qualifications, showing that you have faithfully, intelligently and impartially discharged the difficult duties of this office."

Hamilton McWhorter, Jr., Lexington:
"I desire to heartily endorse you for reelection, and to commend you as an honest, courageous, faithful and capable official of the State of Georgia."

A. H. S. Weaver, Macon:
"I should certainly think that your experience and ability as a Judge of the Court of Appeals should prefer you, rather than one who has never been judge of an appellate court."

S. J. Hale, Trenton:
"Your splendid record as a member of this Court has fully justified the expectations of your friends at the time of your elevation to the bench and I certainly feel that you are entitled to an endorsement of your record and the public to a continuation of your services."

J. S. Ridgdill, Tifton:
"I have noticed closely the opinions written by you, and without exception, they are sound, clear and concise. And I feel that your record entitles you to continuation in office."

R. H. Kimball, Winder:
"I have always been impressed with your outstanding character and ability, and the high quality of your work on the bench. We need such men in the service of the State, and especially in the position you have so ably and creditably filled."

Judge Arthur G. Powell, Atlanta:
"You have done extraordinarily good work on the bench. This character of work could not have been accomplished if you had attempted to dispose of the cases with undue haste. You have every reason to be proud of your work and of the way you have done it."

A. J. McDonald, Fitzgerald:
"I have had occasion to examine the opinions written by Judge Alex. W. Stephens, and I have found them to be clear, and to show research and thought."

Edward F. Goodrum, Macon:
"Judge Stephens is an excellent scholar and a very careful examiner of all the available authorities as to the law of a given case."

S. T. Wingfield, Eatonton:
"Judge Stephens possesses in a very rare and unusual degree the judicial mind. I know of no member of the Supreme Court or of the Court of Appeals who has done more painstaking, careful or efficient work than he has done, or whose opinions are more useful and valuable as precedents."

A. B. Conger, Bainbridge:
"His work on the Court of Appeals has shown thought, work and ability. His efforts, I think, compare favorably with his associates and predecessors."

Miles W. Lewis, Greensboro:
"He possesses the judicial temperament to a marked degree, and this, coupled with his experience on this bench, is reflected in the most enviable record he has made as a Judge of this Court."

John B. Harris, Macon:
"His fitness for this office needs no statement from me. His record speaks for itself."

Judge Horace M. Holden, Athens:
"His painstaking and conscientious work as a Judge, his thorough study of cases before rendering decisions, his high character, his ability as a Judge, and his eight years of experience and efficient service render it proper, in my opinion, that he be reelected."

Wm. M. Howard, Augusta:
"Any one of Judge Stephen's head-notes will justify his reelection."

Hawes Cloud, Crawfordville:
"Painstaking, deliberate, able and conscientious, his decisions are uniformly concise, clear and sound, bearing the earmarks of a real student and good judge of law."

R. Douglas Feagin, Macon:
"His decisions reflect a profound knowledge of the law, a wealth of common sense and an inherent love of justice and right. It would be a distinct loss to Georgia to lose him from the Appellate Bench."

Clement E. Sutton, Washington:
"Judge Stephens has made a splendid record since he has served on the Court of Appeals, and his decisions are recognized as being sound in law."

Walter A. Harris, Macon:
"During his incumbency, he has been upright, fearless and impartial in his judicial decisions. His opinions are learned and show that he is devoted to truth and justice."

J. R. Terrell, Greenville:
"The opinions of Judge Stephens are lucid and pure, reflecting the established law of Georgia upon questions with which they deal."

O. J. Coogler, Jonesboro:
"As a judge he has proven his ability and the proper appreciation of studious and careful consideration of the questions for decision by the Court of Appeals."

Judge C. A. Christian, Tifton:
"I consider the decisions written by Hon. Alex. W. Stephens as Judge of the Court of Appeals, to be clear, concise and sound. I consider him one of the ablest judges on the Court of Appeals Bench."

S. H. Dyer, Newnan:
"Judge Stephens has made a brilliant record for the past few years, and is noted for his thoroughness and thoughtfulness. I feel that we need a man who is able to turn out a reasonable number of cases correct, instead of writing up opinions in hundreds of cases with only a few minutes of time and thought applied to same."

Jos. E. Pottle, Milledgeville:
"Judge Stephens' work is of a very high order, exhibiting a high degree of faithful, conscientious and intelligent investigation. I consider him an honor to the Bench. His decisions show careful, painstaking research and investigation."

H. H. Perry, Gainesville:
"Judge Alex. W. Stephens, judging from his opinions in the Reports of the Court of Appeals, has been making and is now making one of the most valuable judges on the Bench in Georgia."

Isaac L. Oakes, Lawrenceville:
"Judge Alex. W. Stephens, in my opinion, has made an able Judge of the Court of Appeals, and I take pleasure in endorsing his candidacy for reelection."

The excellent record made by Judge Stephens for thorough and accurate work is fully understood by all who have followed his opinions, and such a record justifies his retention in the place where he is serving the people of Georgia so efficiently.

President's Mexican Policy To Be More Clearly Defined After He and Sheffield Meet Understood as Fairly Satisfied With Results, Coolidge Believes Intervention Would Mean Conquest.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Paul Smith's, N. Y., August 28.—Whether more forceful measures are to be adopted by the administration in dealing with the Mexican government in regard to its continued flouting of American rights in that country will be determined by President Coolidge after his forthcoming conference at White Pine camp with James R. Sheffield, American ambassador to Mexico.

The president's policy so far has been one of protest and demand for satisfaction whenever an American is killed in Mexico or American property is expropriated. It has not achieved the desired result of putting an end to the killings and dispossessions. The state department protests have been answered by the Mexican government with evasion and promises and the disregard of American treaty rights has continued.

Sees Measure of Success.

Mr. Coolidge regards his policy, however, as having been attended with considerable success when the difficulty of the situation is appreciated. In cabinet meetings the president has indicated his belief that he is accomplishing the utmost that could be expected in protection of American rights in Mexico short of invoking measures, the logical result of which might be armed intervention.

The administration policy has been branded weak and ineffective by various groups of American owners of Mexican properties, by some American church organization leaders since the outbreak of the conflict between church and state in Mexico, and by many other Americans who are filled with indignation at the spectacle of the inability of the great American republic to compel respect for the rights of its nationals in an adjoining country. That avowed interventionists should hold such views is conceded by Coolidge defenders to be logical and natural, but that anyone who is not ready to go the full length to armed intervention as a last resort should find fault, officials profess to find exceedingly puzzling.

Opposes Armed Intervention.

The administration is not prepared to entertain the proposal of intervention or of any course of action predicated upon intervention as a last resort. In the views the president has outlined to his advisers he has indicated convictions that armed interference south of the Rio Grande in protection of American rights would be more detrimental than beneficial, and, moreover, would not be approved by the majority of the people on the basis of the situation as it now presents itself.

There is very little interventionist sentiment in the country in the opinion of the administration. This belief was strengthened by the incident of the Knights of Columbus' demand that the government "put an end" to the persecution of Americans in Mexico. But in the conference later at Washington Secretary of State Kellogg asked Supreme Knight Flaherty whether intervention was desired, and he replied it was not. Then Mr. Flaherty issued a statement saying that the Knights' demand had been misinterpreted.

To intervene with force in Mexico, according to the Coolidge view, would mean undertaking the conquest of Mexico. This would entail the raising and maintenance of a large army at billions of dollars of expense and the shedding of much blood. The Mexican people would be united against the invaders, all Latin America would be inflamed with fears of Yankee aggression and the only tangible result of successful conquest would be the possession of another conquered province—another Philippines.

More Forceful Measures.

More forceful measures short of intervention have been considered and may yet be adopted. Recognition of the Calles government could be withdrawn, but this alternative is one that is regarded by many of the president's advisers as of doubtful value because of the impression that the Calles government does not greatly care whether it is recognized or not. In addition the withdrawal of our diplomatic representatives would deprive us of such means as we now possess of exacting satisfaction for infringement of American rights.

Nor does the Mexican government stand in fear of a lifting of the embargo of arms exports to Mexican civilians, according to these authorities. The reason the president refused to lift the embargo recently was that it would have placed upon the American government the blame for enabling the Mexican clericals to obtain the sinews of revolution from the United States. They are able to get arms from Europe, however, and eventually, when the church row quiets down, the American government will rescind its embargo.

Whether there are some other forceful measures that could be employed is a matter that the president will discuss with Ambassador Sheffield. The latter is understood to have felt at times that the administration policy was not sufficiently aggressive and that he was being unduly hampered in exacting redress for American grievances from the Mexican government. If he has any suggestions for obtaining better results, the president will give them careful consideration.

WORLD WAR SOLDIERS PLAN POST AT SPARTA

Sparta, Ga., August 28.—(Special.) A plan is on foot here to organize a new post of the American Legion with the Ladies' Auxiliary feature included.

Dr. W. Frank Harrison and W. F. Freeman, one of the few remaining survivors of the "Princess Pat" regiment from Canada, are the prime movers in the new organization. Although his home is in Windsor, Canada, Mr. Freeman has located in this city and is in the mercantile business. He is now hale and hearty although he has scars showing more than 400 stitches taken in his body from world war wounds.

Only 11 other men, besides himself, returned to Canada, out of the regiment of over 7,000 picked men. He is very much interested in the American Legion and is anxious to get a post started here. State Commander Stone has agreed to come here and address the ex-service men at an early date and at this time tentative plans will be made for the new organization.

There are about 100 ex-soldiers in the county who are eligible for membership in the Legion and no doubt a good per cent of them will join.

paign, and I do not regard it as a personal victory," he said. "It is my sincere hope that whatever bitterness and dissension the campaign may have engendered will be forgotten and that the democrats of Texas will unite to promote the welfare of our state and the peace, happiness and prosperity of our people."

Late Mr. Ferguson was reached tonight, but declined to comment on the outcome.

PETTICOAT GOVERNMENT IN TEXAS IS DEFEATED.

Dallas, Tex., August 28.—Indications that Texas is throwing off the feminine yoke were growing stronger tonight as incoming returns continued to swell the lead of Dan Moody over Governor "Ma" Ferguson in the run-off primary for the democratic nomination for the governorship.

Throughout his campaigns, both for the regular and run-off primaries, Moody had fought against what he termed as "a governor by proxy" with "Farmer Jim" Ferguson, an impeached governor, the actual power behind the throne of Governor "Ma."

In the regular primaries, Moody scored an impressive victory over the field of candidates. His margin, however, did not constitute the majority required by Texas primary laws and the run-off primary today was made necessary by the refusal of "Ma" Ferguson to honor her campaign wager in which she had promised to withdraw if her bitterest enemy, Dan Moody, beat her by even one vote.

The winner in today's run-off primary will be opposed in the regular fall election by H. H. Blaine, the republican candidate, but the republican opposition is only a party gesture. Texas always has elected democrats and the nomination today is considered a virtual election.

POLICE IDENTIFY BOMBER OF BANK

Pittsburgh, August 28.—(AP)—The bomber who exploded an infernal machine in the Farmers Deposit Savings bank here Tuesday, killing himself and a bank policeman and injuring more than a score of other persons, was identified late today by three Elwood City, Pa., police at Jim Robick, alias Dome Arabk, an Elwood city character.

The Ellwood City officers, headed by Chief of Police J. M. Peater, viewed the decapitated body after which they said they felt sure it was Rodick. Peater asked if the morgue workers had found a home-made abdominal truss on the body. The truss, made from an inner tube, was produced and identified.

Robdick, the officers said, had lived in Ellwood City for some time, but had disappeared a month ago. He was "queer," they said, and had been arrested there many times for threatening women when they refused to give him clothing.

Another mark of identification was the bomber's shoes. The Ellwood City men said Robick walked with a peculiar gait, wearing out his shoes on one side. The shoes removed from the bomber's body showed such wear.

PLAYGROUNDS OPEN MONDAY IN FIRST ALL-YEAR SEASON

Twenty-three Atlanta playgrounds will begin operation Monday afternoon in the first winter play season ever held in Atlanta under the supervision of the parks department. This announcement was made Saturday by John A. White, chairman of the park board.

All recreational centers which were operated during the summer season which closed formally August 20, will be reopened.

Civic and patriotic organizations and parent-teacher associations Saturday voiced approval of the plan, and Miss Margaret Camp Saturday held a conference with Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools.

Playgrounds will open at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and close at 5:30 for the time being.

STUDENTS CALLED O. K.

Fraternity Sees Improvement in Colleges.

Richmond, Va., August 28.—(AP)—The college student of today is a better person, morally and socially, than the college student of any former day, the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity in conclave here, declared in a resolution adopted today.

Setting forth that in view of the fact that moral and social concepts of present day college students were subject to adverse criticism the fraternity had conducted a survey, the resolution said:

"A comparative analysis of present concepts of moral and social obligations with those of the past has resulted in the conclusion that the present day trend of moral and social development in college student bodies in the United States as a whole is more wholesome and in better balance with

FARM PRODUCTS FALL IN PRICES

Washington, August 28.—Prices of farm products dropped still further during this month and are now 13 per cent lower than a year ago, the agricultural department reports in a survey.

The general level declined to about 132 per cent of the pre-war level on August 15, continuing the drop which carried it from 139 in June to 135 in July. The index is the lowest reached in nearly two years.

"Small price gains in cotton and grains were more than offset by declines in the meat animal and fruit and vegetable groups," the department said. "Farm prices of corn advanced about 11 per cent from July 15 to August 15 while the price of hogs dropped about 8 points. With July 15 farm prices, the price of 100 pounds of hogs was equivalent to the price of nearly 18 bushels of corn, while August 15 this ration was reduced to less than 15 bushels which is the lowest since November, 1925. The farm price of rye increased 7 per cent and the price of potatoes dropped nearly 20 per cent.

"Of the more important farm products for which prices have been determined, only five are 159 per cent of the price received by farmers during the pre-war period of 1909 to 1914, or equivalent to the level of wholesale prices of non-agricultural products, which was 159 per cent of the pre-war level for July. The five-year period, 1909-1914 is used as the base of 100 for the index of prices of agricultural products. The farm prices of the five farm products expressed as percentages of the pre-war averages are: Hogs, 161; wool, 179; lambs, 188; chickens, 194, and potatoes, 202 per cent. At the other extreme are horses, 56 per cent; barley, 89; oats, 95; rye, 120; beef cattle, 122; eggs, 123, and corn, 124 per cent of the pre-war average.

"The purchasing power of agricultural products is also down, dropping to 85 in July which is the lowest level since December, 1924. Decreases in purchasing power are recorded for grains, fruits and vegetables and cotton and cotton seed. Meat animals held their own and dairy products advanced a point."

FONCK AND SNODY PREPARE FOR TRIP

New York, August 28.—(AP)—Despite administrative disputes which marked early preparations for their proposed trans-Atlantic flight, all discord was reported smoothed out today and Lieutenant Allan Snody and Captain Rene Fonck continued to add to the specially prepared equipment that will be a part of the S-35's essential cargo.

After a newspaper printed a story today in which it was said that dissension had arisen which might mean indefinite postponement of the flight and possible removal of Captain Rene Fonck as commander, Lieutenant Colonel Harold T. Hartney, manager of the company backing the flight, admitted that there had been some friction but said that it had been "cleared up" two weeks ago.

Difference of opinion, it was admitted, about the kind of oil to be used, but this had been adjusted satisfactorily to all parties. Fourteen navigation charts supplied by the United States navy were brought to Lieutenant Snody today.

Test flights were made yesterday from Roosevelt field by Captain Fonck and Lieutenant Snody and will be continued tomorrow if the weather permits, they said. On these tests flights the weight the plane carries is being gradually increased. Yesterday she took off with 16,000 pounds total charge. It was originally calculated that when she hops off for Paris she will weigh 24,000 pounds. As 15,200 pounds of this must be fuel and oil, the outcome of the test flights will decide whether or not one or more additional men will accompany the two pilots. Captain Homer Berry was originally announced as a third member of the crew, by the Argonauts, Inc., the company backing the flight.

With few exceptions, the actors in "Three Bad Men," Fox drama of the northwest 50 years ago, wore real whiskers for four months.

'Complete School' Campaign Backed by Leading Citizens

Prominent Atlanta business men, city and federal officials and civic and patriotic clubs and societies joined hands Saturday in a drive to get Atlantans of school age to complete their educational work.

Scores of letters urging students to continue their courses and exhorting those who have not registered for the 1926-27 school term to do so at once were sent to Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools, and he made public several of the letters.

He praised cooperation of the Rotary, Kiwanis, Civitan and other clubs, the Parent-Teacher association, the school administration staff and officials of the Georgia Railway & Power company, all having entered whole-heartedly in the campaign to get every student to enter school by the opening date, September 7.

Mayor Walter A. Sims wrote Mr. Sutton as follows:

"Our girls and boys in school are our greatest resource. And it is vastly important that these girls and boys, the men and women of tomorrow, be educated to become efficient citizens—physically efficient, mentally efficient, morally efficient.

"The boy or girl who fails short of obtaining the completest education possible within his or her means, is incurring so much handicap which should not be present to hinder the future.

"We need future men and women of sound body, trained senses, clear minds and deep character, and the province of education is to foster and assist this development. Parents can do their children no better service than to aid and encourage them to remain in school, at least through high school, and beyond, if possible.

(Signed) WALTER A. SIMS, Mayor.

L. H. Beall, of Sears, Roebuck & Company, wrote as follows:

"Is education worthwhile?

"My experience as an employer of help in the mail order business has taught me that the H. G. Wells to the contrary notwithstanding.

"Is the boy or girl with high school training favored over the boy or girl without that training?

"With as the answer to that question is contained in the fact that our starting wage on activities that require high school training is just 50 per cent higher than on activities on which a common school education is regarded as sufficient. That 50 per cent advantage would not begin to cover the edge that the high school trained boy or girl has in our business over the boy or girl without high school training in the matter of opportunity for advancement.

"In our business the executive without high school training is the exception rather than the rule. (Signed) L. H. BEALL, Sears, Roebuck & Co.

The following letter is from Kendall Weisiger:

"The completion of a high school course puts one in an outstanding class in the minds of most business men and gives one a certain status that brings prestige in social life as well. For every one hundred children who start in the first grade, only ten finally go to high school and of these ten only three graduate. Therefore, every high school graduate represents one person out of thirty-three who was able to carry to completion the schooling begun early in life.

"Not only does high school graduation indicate high intelligence, but it carries with it intensity of purpose, stick-to-itiveness, close application, loyalty, ability to cooperate, and usually, good health, all of which are valuable assets which count heavily for successful living in the long run.

"The public school system is distinctly an American institution. The strength of the nation rests largely upon it. The more high school graduates there are to be found in the country the better will society be as a whole, for every inhabitant of the country.
(Signed) KENDALL WEISIGER,
Director of Employment and Training, Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co.

The wife of Postmaster Edward K. Large, wrote as follows:

"The two qualifications necessary for success in every field are undoubtedly educational background, as it is called, and personality or character, and both are the growth of every day's experience which beginning in childhood must be prolonged through life. Do not fail to immediately grasp the opportunity now presented with the opening of our schools.

"It means future success or failure.

WATSON BIOGRAPHY WELCOMED BY PUBLIC

Regarded by those who have examined the book as one of the most complete biographies in American literature, "The Life of Thomas E. Watson," by William W. Brewton, Atlanta newspaperman, has attracted the attention of the book-buying public throughout the country, it became known Saturday. Though the work has been out only a few weeks, it has already established itself in the favor of all collectors of works of an historical nature.

It was seen soon after the author completed the book that it would be in demand by all classes of readers and for various reasons. Followers of the late Senator Watson naturally have shown their interest in it; but the libraries throughout the country are buying it because of its historical value, it is now known. Then there are many persons in and out of Georgia who never shared Tom Watson's political views who are buying the book because it gives a record of the political history of the country with which Watson was connected, but which is now a fundamental part of the political development of the nation, regardless of Watson's part therein.

Traces History of Populism.

The biography Mr. Brewton has written is known to be the first tracery of the part populism played in the stirring days in the '90's when America was undergoing a deep-seated political alteration—the days when the democratic and republican parties were compelled to reform.

The life of Thomas E. Watson was so full of incident—he having been lawyer, lecturer, politician, congressman, historian, biographer, novelist, publicist and United States senator, besides being the political boss in Georgia for twenty years—that it required great labor to transfer all this to the printed page. This, according to critics, has been done with thorough satisfaction by Mr. Brewton, whose book has been pronounced standard not only for Watson himself, but also for the period of public affairs in which he lived and took part.

Those who have read the book have commented particularly upon the style in which it is written—the complete development of every phase of Tom Watson without a single break in the thread of interest. From the cradle to the grave, Mr. Brewton's book is a closely-knit story.

Kept Record Straight.

The authenticity of the book has been pronounced to be the thing that will make it standard for all time as the narrative of the facts of Watson's life, because it was written from material furnished Mr. Brewton by Watson himself, over a period of ten years before the senator's death, and from the full and complete collection of Senator Watson's private papers, which were almost fabulously exhaustive, and which were turned over to Mr. Brewton by the Watson estate after the senator's death. It was as far back as October, 1913, that Brewton, just out of college, pledged to Watson at Hickory Hill, the home of the great Georgian, that he would "keep the record straight" after the man was here no more to do so for himself. Tom Watson thanked the young man for his promise and cooperated with him until his death to bring about a book that was worthy of the subject.

Mr. Brewton has declared that the reward of a labor honestly and painstakingly done is now being realized in the wide interest in his contribution to the biographical literature of his state and nation.

SAFFRON SKIN FROM SOUR BILE

South Georgian Drives Out Enormous Quantity Sour Bile with Dodson's Liver Tone.

"After a long period of the worst form of weakness and the terrible feeling of sickness that comes from a system loaded with sour bile, Mr. Sam Puckett says: "When I kept getting those bilious attacks reckon I took enough calomel to kill a mule. Got worse all the time. Finally I turned saffron color all over. My wife happened to read about Dodson's Liver Tone in the Weekly Constitution, so we drove to town and got a bottle. It was like magic. It drove quarts of sour bile out of me as black as ink. From that day I have felt as if I had a new liver, and whenever I begin to feel weary and bilious, with no appetite, a dose of Dodson's Liver Tone puts me to rights."

This wonderful, quick-action, liver starter ought to be in every household, if for no other reason than to stop the use of dangerous calomel. Dodson's Liver Tone is pleasant to take, even for children, and never makes you sick.

Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle costs but a few cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.—(adv.)

SchoolDaysSoon; Muse Opens New Boys Department

With readin', writin' and 'rithmatic but a short while away, the announcement of the opening of an entirely new boys department by George Muse Clothing company, is being enthusiastically received.

Muse's new quarters for young America are located in a beautifully appointed section of the sixth floor of the Muse building. The department moved up from the third floor during last week, and has been fairly humming—for Atlanta's army of school boys soon must come to attention at the clang of the school bell and that means an endless number of school clothes to be purchased.

"In buying his school clothes," said W. H. Flemmister, manager of the new boys department, "a boy can learn a lot that will stay with him longer than his books. He can gain that most essential point, a practical sense of value.

"Mothers should have the salesman make clear to their boy the important fact that a good suit, of sound material, well made, is the only economical suit; that he might learn to buy well.

"Impress on him the value of the good name of the store; point to the years of sincerity that have made the name of the store synonymous with excellence, that the boy may come to realize the value of his own name and ever hold it high by every act and deed.

Muse's new boys department introduces a complete range of the new autumn styles in boys clothing, furnishings, hats, raincoats. Boys shoes are in the men's shoe department on the balcony.

Law Enforcement Day Plans Praised By Methodist Leader

Dr. Elam F. Dempsey, secretary of education of the North Georgia conference, who in traveling through the south observing present-day social conditions, has made strong statements in a recent interview commending the action taken by the Methodist ministers' meeting of Atlanta in naming Sunday, August 29 as law enforcement Sunday.

By this action ministers pledged themselves, as far as practicable, he says, to deliver sermons that day condemning Sabbath breaking, disrespect of law, lax social customs, improper amusements and advocating Christian citizenship, law enforcement, and keeping America Christian.

"It is folly to say that evil will correct itself," Dr. Dempsey says. "Evil never corrects anything. By bad progression it grows steadily worse until it becomes unendurable to decent members of society. Generally, it is some outbreak of vaunting and insolent evil that arouses the righteous wrath of all good people and causes them to clean up and clean out the dens of iniquity which the indifference of the same good people has permitted to come into being."

The pace set by Fisher—and exemplified in the beautiful new General Motors cars now commanding public attention—is the guide for the entire motor industry.

Fisher's vast experience, Fisher inventiveness and Fisher's unapproached facilities devise and perfect the beauties, comforts and conveniences which attract you to the leading new cars in all price classes—Cadillac, Buick, Chevrolet, Oakland, Oldsmobile and Pontiac.

For instance, Fisher achieves a new degree of safety—and nothing less than a Body by Fisher can approach it even after seasons of striving.

Fisher leads the way in luxurious fitments and decorations—and all the industry follows.

Fisher creates new standards of beauty in line and finish—and those standards are the measure of value for all of the world's cars.

It is easy to see, therefore, why the foremost of the new cars in all price classes carry the emblem—Body by Fisher.

And easy to understand why buyers the world over proclaim as the hallmark of quality that same magic symbol—Body by Fisher.

DELAWARE TO CLAIM 'BARON VON KRUPP'

Wilmington, Del., August 28.—(AP) Attorney General Clarence A. Southerland, of Delaware, will send for "Baron Von Krupp," held in Albuquerque, N. M., in connection with the passing of alleged bad checks. Detectives were to leave for the New Mexico city late today.

"Von Krupp," claiming to be the scion of German nobility, was lavishly entertained in Wilmington when he visited here several weeks ago, and made extensive trips through the E. I. DuPont de Nemours plants. He is charged with issuing worthless checks to a Wilmington hotel.

AARON LICHENSTEIN IN FATHER'S PLACE AS HEAD OF FIRM

Aaron Lichenstein, well-known Atlanta insurance man who has been connected with the firm of Morris Lichenstein and company, with offices in the Hurt building, has been named manager of the firm since the death last week of his father, Morris Lichenstein.

The firm name will remain the same and the business will be conducted on the same policies that it has followed for the past 10 years.

Mr. Lichenstein is experienced in all phases of the insurance game and has been under the direction of his father for the past several years. He is well known among the younger set of the city and is a popular member of the Jewish Progressive club. For the past three years he has been actively interested in the Jewish Progressive basketball team and served as its manager for one year.

GEORGIA MAGAZINE PLANS TOBACCO ISSUE

Waycross, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—J. W. Seals, M. M. Monroe and Dr. Kenneth McCullough have been appointed by the Waycross and Ware county chamber of commerce as the committee to see if arrangements can be made for having this city featured as a tobacco market in the next issue of the Georgia Magazine, the official organ of the Georgia association.

It is understood here that this issue will be devoted wholly to the tobacco industry in Georgia and Waycross is desirous of having itself included in such publicity.

Macon Girl Charged With Death Of Chum Says She Is Innocent

Metro Photo.

Miss Betty Queen, stage girl, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of a companion in New Jersey, on visit to sister in Macon.

Macon, Ga., August 28.—(Special.) Miss Betty Queen, girl of the stage, who on August 1 is alleged to have shot and killed Miss Margaret Craig, another actress, at Brown's Mill, N. J., is here in Macon for rest. She has been away from this city for three years, but after obtaining bond in New Jersey, where she is charged with manslaughter, she came back home and is now at the residence of her sister, Mrs. J. M. Morgan, near Lakeside park.

"The shooting was accidental," said Miss Queen. "The two girls (Miss O'Connor and Miss Craig) were in bathing and they came up behind me unexpectedly, while I had a shotgun in my hands. I was despondent over the fear that I had tuberculosis, and the girls knew it. They thought I was going to shoot myself. In some way the gun was discharged. Miss Craig, my good friend, was fatally wounded."

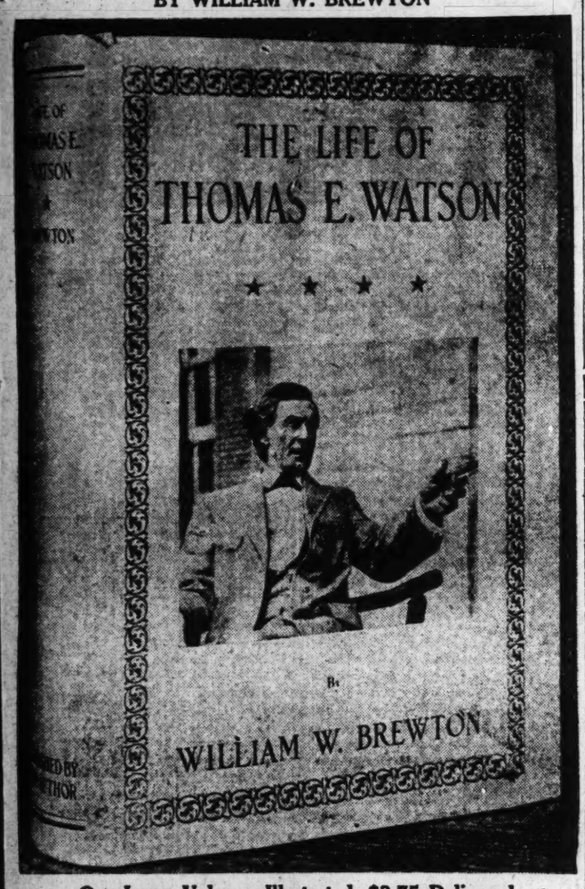

Miss Queen doesn't know whether she'll return to the stage or not. She says doctors here have told her that she has no lung trouble now, though she was at a tuberculosis camp at the time of the shooting.

The Mount Holly, N. J., authorities will investigate the case in October, Miss Queen stated.

Captured Bandits Deplore Killing Deputy Sheriff

Van Buren, Ark., August 28.—(AP) Swathed with bandages and their clothes stained with blood from the wounds received when they were captured, the young Kimes brothers, held tentatively in the Crawford county jail, deplored the death of Deputy Sheriff Perry Chuchulate whom they shot in a gun battle preceding their capture and declared their innocence of any connection with the recent robbery of four Oklahoma banks with which they are charged.

The young desperadoes were captured at the home of Ben Pixley, a cousin, five miles northwest of Rudy, Ark., early today. Sheriff A. D. Maxey, of Crawford county; Lee Pollock, Oklahoma City, of the Oklahoma state constabulary, and A. B. Cooper, Burns Detective agency operative. The trio was in wait for the boys when they approached the house. A gun fight took place and after Matthew Kimes had been shot in the right shoulder and George Kimes had been peppered with buckshot, the boys surrendered. They were brought to the jail here at daylight. Sheriff John E. Johnston, of Sequoyah county, Oklahoma, said they will not be returned to the Sallisaw jail at present, because of the high feeling against them.

Officers Continue Probe.

While the boys told a Southwest Times Record reporter the story of their 14-hour flight from officers, Oklahoma officers were attempting to discover the connection of their relatives with the Oklahoma bank robberies.

In J. W. Higgs, Muscogee, officers believe they may have a third bandit. Four looted the two banks at Covington, Okla., of about $10,000 Wednesday. Higgs is the brother-in-law of the Kimes boys. Sacks marked with the name of a Covington bank were found in the car abandoned by the boys near Sallisaw after a battle with officers in which Chuchulate received his fatal wounds. No money was found on the boys when they were captured, although Chief of Police J. C. Woll, of Sallisaw, kidnaped by the boys after the Sallisaw battle and forced to ride with them as far as Uniontown, Ark., said one of the Kimes boys had his shirt stuffed with currency.

Matthew and George W. Kimes, the young bandits, fit the description of two of the four bandits who looted the Covington bank. Higgs, who is held by Chief of Police C. W. Compston from Muscogee, for investigation, answers to the description of one bandit described by bank officials as being tall, about six feet, dark complexion.

Three Bank Robberies Charged.

In addition to the robbery of the Covington State bank and the National Bank of Covington, the youths are charged with entering the Farmers National Bank of Beggs, August 25, and taking $4,680. Three are known to have participated in this robbery and it is believed there might have been a fourth man.

Matthew and George Kimes and their father, Neely Kimes, are charged with the robbery of the Depew National bank in warrants issued from Sapulpa. Neely Kimes also is charged with automobile theft. He was arrested at Fort Smith and was removed to Sapulpa at 5 o'clock this morning.

A Small Leak Will Sink a Great Ship

"Poor Richard" made many a wise remark and true, but none more pointed than this. You see, he observed folks like you and me. He noticed that some are careless about little things and have only a fair living to show for what they spend. Others with the same amount of money are careful of little things and save more on the things they need and have more of the things they want. It is worth thinking about.

The wise man of Philadelphia gave to the World's Largest Store a reason for being—to prevent waste through small leaks—in manufacturing, in buying, and in distributing, resulting in "better merchandise for less money" to its customers.

Press of State Supports George for U. S. Senator

Georgia Papers, Weekly and Daily, Almost Unanimous for Reelection of Junior Senator.

Virtually all the newspapers in Georgia, both dailies and weeklies, are supporting United States Senator Walter F. George in his race for reelection, it was announced Saturday by E. B. Dykes, campaign manager. Many hundreds of clippings are received daily, said Mr. Dykes, showing the support Senator George is receiving from the press of the state.

Excerpts from some of the news clippings received during the week follow:

Columbia News—"The people of Georgia will demonstrate their appreciation and the realization of the worth of Senator George by reelecting him."

The Madison Madisonian had the following to say:

"Senator George's opponent is making little headway in trying to discredit the proud record of Senator George."

From the Sandersville Progress the following is taken:

"Only Be Just."

"It would only be just to give Senator George another term as his own successor."

The LaGrange Reporter spoke as follows:

"After three years in the senate Senator George has reached a place where he can be of real service to Georgia, Georgians and the nation. He is a member of some of the most important committees and is in close touch with public affairs. We say, keep him on the job."

From the Dalton Citizen the following is taken:

"Senator George's record at Washington merits the approval of the people."

The Milledgeville Union Record says:

"Senator George is one of Georgia's big men and the people of Georgia are going to return him to the United States senate by one of the biggest majorities ever given a candidate."

The Jesup Sentinel says:

"Man Nation Needs."

"It is men like Senator George that this nation needs."

The Springfield Herald says:

"Of course the voters of Georgia are going to keep Senator George right where he is, at least for one more term."

From the Augusta Herald the following is taken:

"We have evidence of almost unanimous support of Senator George in his race for the senate as the days go by."

Clarkesville Tri-County Advertiser:

"Senator George is without doubt one of the ablest representatives in the upper house of congress."

The Athens Herald has the following to say:

"The opposition to Senator George is doing the state and the senator a great favor. It is acquainting the average voter with the real ability of the state's representative in the United States senate."

JUDGE R. EVE SEEKS SUPPORT OF LAWYERS

Tifton, Ga., August 28.—(Special.) Judge R. Eve, of the superior court of the Tifton judicial circuit, has addressed a letter to the lawyers of Georgia, in which he says:

Dear Sir: Twenty years of intimate contact with members of the legal profession has brought conviction that lawyers, as a class, are intelligent and patriotic.

This gives me right to believe that my candidacy for associate justice of the supreme court will receive your full and fair consideration. I have no right to ask nor to expect more than this.

We know that vacancies in high public office seldom occur as a result of retirement, and that trial judges are unable to render the political service necessary to appointment. "He who would serve must seek to serve." It is no pleasant task to oppose anyone, but I am now 54, and if promotion is to come the time for it is at hand. A just application of a reasonable rule of retirement would oust me within 12 or 15 years.

For 20 years I have striven to do my full official duty and to hold up high standards of citizenship, law observance and efficiency in public service. Splendid cooperation on the part of attorneys and other officers of court has made some measure of success possible. It would hardly be fair to say that this experience and the knowledge thus obtained, under modern conditions of business and law enforcement, cannot be made available and beneficial on the supreme court bench.

While making no claims to proprietorship in constitutional principles of liberty, I have been an humble expounder of and a devout believer in "liberty under the law."

Years before Judge Hines received appointment to office I was entertaining a mild ambition to become a member of the supreme court of Georgia. This ambition is now finding expression through my candidacy.

Political issues may be ephemeral and candidates may come and go, but sincere friends made in campaigns or otherwise are a permanent asset. Regardless of your attitude in this matter, I honestly hope to meet and to know you. Very sincerely,

R. EVE.

TELFAIR LEADERS PRAISE TALMADGE IN PUBLIC CARD

McRae, Ga., August 28.—"To correct erroneous reports that are being circulated over the state by J. J. Brown and his campaign managers as to the integrity and ability of Eugene Talmadge, Telfair county's farmer-lawyer candidate," county officials of Telfair county and prominent leading citizens have given their enthusiastic indorsement to Talmadge.

Practically every county official, from justice of the peace to representative, together with lawyers, doctors, druggists, farmers, bank presidents, hotel proprietors and women, have attached their signatures to a card recommending Mr. Talmadge to the people.

POLITICAL RALLY FOR KEY SCHOOL WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Plans are completed for a political rally to be held at the James L. Key school Wednesday night at 7:30 o'clock, it was announced Saturday night by C. L. Wood, chairman of the committee on arrangements. The rally is especially for citizens of the second and third wards and plans have been completed for the entertainment of more than 3,000 persons.

Thom Stokes and C. D. Wilson have been named on a special committee to provide refreshments for the big party. J. P. Rollins has been named in charge of a reception committee. Music will be furnished by a well known local orchestra.

According to present plans, all of the city candidates present will speak first, followed by county and state candidates, all of whom have been sent special invitations to be present.

HOLDER SILENCE ON CHARGES HIT

In attempting to make a gubernatorial issue of road bonds, John N. Holder "would shoot a ghost," it was declared in a statement Saturday from the headquarters of his opponent, J. O. Wood, issued in reply to Mr. Holder's Jefferson speech. The card maintained that the governor has nothing to do with a bond issue.

Holder was assailed for letting go unchallenged the charge that he attempted to perpetuate the convict lease system when there was a public demand for its overthrow, and for his "holding highway mileage over small counties like the sword of Damocles" in order to get their votes.

Following is the statement:

"A political Lochinvar went a-courting Saturday. He went to Jefferson to make love to the folks of his own vine and figtree.

"Played The Mischief."

"Unlike the Lochinvar of fiction, John Holder went astride a road scrape, for was not he expected to scrape away some of the dirt which he had allowed to fall around his public record and his candidacy? Maybe he had such intention, but he played the mischief.

"Throughout this race the supporters of Holder have been embarrassed by the frequent charges against their candidate and by his continued reticence. When it was announced that Holder was going to his home town and make the one speech of his campaign, there was great rejoicing. All charges would be refuted.

"What did he do? He went over and delivered the speech which he had prepared in collaboration with Tom Hardwick and Sam Olive, and took along his whitewash bucket, only to find when he got there he had forgotten to take along any whitewash.

"John Holder accomplished nothing in his speech. John Holder, speaking or silent, says precisely nothing, and he says nothing because he has nothing to say.

Betrayed Brown.

"He based his principal claim to the governor's chair on the efficiency of his administration of highway affairs, and then said: 'With the experience that I have gained, and with a sympathetic board, and with the sympathy and cooperation of the county commissioners of Georgia, I firmly believe that we together can build for Georgia a magnificient system of highways,' indicating that he wants to hold both jobs.

"He betrayed J. J. Brown, his political bed-fellow, and on whose machine he had been relying for election, just as his opponents have predicted he would. He even betrayed Tom Hardwick, who appointed him to the job he now holds.

"He tried to fool the people into believing the matter of bonds is an issue in this campaign, when the governor has no more to do with a bond issue in Georgia than Mussolini, for the governor's approval is not required, and he has not the power to veto bonds.

"He said he wanted to answer the 'false and slanderous statements made by various opponents.' Why didn't he do it?

Mileage To Allocate.

"During Mr. Wood's ent ire campaign he has charged that the highway board has only 48 1-2 miles to allocate, whereas Mr. Holder has claimed to have 800 miles. In Jefferson did Mr. Holder refute the charge? No. He said that the board 'reached the conclusion' that there were 800 miles to allot. Since when is the legal opinion of Mr. Holder and his associates more weighty than that of such eminent legal lights as Edgar Watkins, of Atlanta, and Judge Orville Park, of Macon, both of whom have declared publicly that the highway board has only 48 1-2 miles to allocate?

"Holder says, 'We shall apportion the mileage at the proper time to the different counties in Georgia that, in our judgment, most need the mileage.' When shall be the proper time? Whatever mileage he has, he has had it more than a year. Why does he continue to hold it over the heads of the voters like the sword of Damocles? Because he knows there are small counties, impoverished by drouth and other causes, whose need for state aid road funds is so urgent they are almost afraid to vote against Holder, despite his principles.

"He says his enemies have circulated the report that some years ago he was in favor of bonds. 'I do not deem this report worthy of notice,' he says. No, maybe not. The report is true, nevertheless.

Wood Against Bonds.

"Mr. Wood had an opportunity to vote on bonds in the legislature, and voted against them. He is the only man in the race for governor who has a record on bonds.

"Holder made a mighty noise about how he was going to see that Georgia is not mortgaged for road building. What would he have to do with it if he was governor? If the people want bonds, John Holder as governor, or Joe Wood as governor, cannot keep them from having them.

"Why does Holder get so wrought up over bonds when there isn't any one trying to foist them on Georgia? He is like the shadow boxer who was going to give his imaginary opponent a sound thrashing. He would shoot a ghost.

"If ever a governor wanted bonds Governor Walker wanted them. Did he get them? No, because he had nothing to do with it. He could merely make recommendations.

"Mr. Wood has charged that when Holder was chairman of the penitentiary committee of the house, prison conditions in the state became so revolting that the people of Georgia arose in indignation and undertook to to abolish the convict lease system; and that Holder became the subject of severe rebuke from the press and pulpit of the state for advocating a bill which would in effect perpetuate the system.

Convict Lease Charges.

"Under Holder's bill the system was to be continued for five years, and was to automatically renew itself unless other legislation intervened. The bill passed the house, was fortunately defeated in the senate and a substitute bill originating in the senate which ended the cruel system then and there, was enacted into law.

"Mr. Holder knows that his stand in that matter is the blackest spot in his political career and he didn't mention it in Jefferson because the old-timers in the audience would have recalled the flame of anger against him which swept the state when, in an investigation of prison conditions under his regime, it was brought to light that a white youth, a convict leased to the Durham mines, had been flogged to death because he had accidentally scalded a hog.

"Small wonder, indeed, that John Holder saw fit to ignore this charge. He cannot refute it. The charge has been outstanding for a month, and in what he announced will be the only speech of his campaign he had allowed it to go unchallenged. There is a reason. You can't deny the records of the general assembly.

HOLDER FAVORED BONDS, SAYS WOOD

Bainbridge, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—"In 1923, when John N. Holder was advocating a bond issue, Holder admitted that a candidate for governor who undertook to run on a bond platform would have no chance of election, and it is because of that belief that Holder now pretends to be against bonds," it was charged here today by J. O. Wood, of Atlanta, speaking here in his race for governor.

"Holder has never been sincere in his opposition to bonds. In fact, the strongest evidence that the bond advocates now have the utmost faith in Mr. Holder's friendliness to bonds is the unqualified indorsement of his candidacy for governor by Hon. W. R. Jones, representative from Meriwether county, a recognized leader for bonds."

While disclaiming that the matter of bonds does not belong in a gubernatorial race as an issue, Mr. Wood made it clear that he is opposed to a road bond issue, and referred to the vote he recorded in the legislature against bonds.

The candidate flayed Dr. L. G. Hardman, of Commerce, for his alleged antagonism to organized labor.

"Eighty per cent of the people of Georgia are working people. Dr. Hardman has never known the problems of the working man. He has never known the want of material things, and not understanding the working man, he could never be the proper representative of the average citizenry."

The candidate outlined his previously announced plan for reorganization of the highway and agricultural departments which he will recommend to the legislature if elected governor. He deplored the waste of public funds in payment of salaries to "sinecures in office."

While discussing the famous "midnight bill," which he said was passed on the last night of the legislature without having been read, he said, as governor, he would undertake to carefully scrutinize all legislation which is rushed through the general assembly in its final hours.

WATSONIAN CLUB INDORSES WOOD.

Savannah, Ga., August 27.—(AP)—Resolutions indorsing the candidacy of J. O. Wood for governor were unanimously adopted here Friday night at the initial meting of the first district Watsonian club.

More than 200 members were in attendance. The resolutions referred to Mr. Wood "as the only candidate now in the race who has consistently followed the principles of Watson."

The club also passed resolutions pledging itself to assist in erecting a suitable memorial to "Georgia's great commoner." L. W. C. Sweat, Sr., of Guyton, Ga., was elected president of the club, which was formed as a permanent organization.

junior senatorship or in the position of chief justice of the supreme court. Our reports are that it is the general opinion that Georgia should keep both men in their present positions.

"In his speeches throughout the state Senator George has not indulged in personalities or mud-slinging. He has conducted a vigorous but dignified campaign. He has presented the issues as he sees them and is willing to abide by the opinion the people have of his record in the senate.

"The receptions accorded Senator George have been uniformly cordial and he personally appreciates the fine spirit in which he has been received in various sections of the state.

"From the information we have received there is no doubt of the overwhelming reelection of Senator George. He has made good as United States senator, he faces a period of even greater usefulness and has attained a position of honor and influence in the senate, although serving in that body less than four years."

Russell's Statement.

At campaign headquarters of Judge Richard B. Russell, who is running against Senator George, a statement was issued in which the progress of the campaign was outlined. Discussing the question of agricultural relief the report of Judge Russell's headquarters said:

"At this particular time our agricultural interests require particular attention and the attitude of Senator George in voting against farm relief and the McNary bill and his attitude towards the Ford bill and Muscle Shoals is not at all satisfactory to our farmers. What the farmers want is something practical, and they are not contented to know that congress spends days talking about farm relief while Muscle Shoals, a great source of practical relief to the American farmer, goes on neglected.

"The power combine has succeeded in putting it over the president and the congress, but it can't put it over to the people of Georgia, and on September 8 a sweeping victory for Judge Russell is already assured and we now have no doubt about the results, for the people of Georgia have in previous elections repudiated the League of Nations, of which the world court is the side door, and they are willing to stand by the advice of Washington to avoid entanglements in the affairs of Europe.

"Whether Senator George thinks this is an issue or not, he will find that the people of Georgia consider it a very live issue and are unwilling to risk his reservations to protect them from the decrees of a court which will very probably hold it within its power to limit and construe such reservations and render decisions accordingly."

HOLDER OUTLINES CAMPAIGN ISSUES

conditions would I have entered the contest had it not been for the insistent and loyal efforts of the people of my home county.

"I wanted to answer the false and slanderous statements made against me by various opponents and wanted to do so in the presence of men and women who have known me all my life and who are thoroughly capable of judging of my conduct, of my life, and of my works, as lived before them, for now over half a century.

Claims Victory.

"I want to say to you that our campaign is in splendid shape. From the mountains to the seashore—from the Carolina line to Alabama, my friends and your friends have responded in an ever-increasing number. Reports reach me from every section of the state and I have never seen a campaign in better condition.

"Experienced political advisers tell me that in all the history of Georgia politics they have never seen a campaign in which one candidate was so far in the lead and the opposition so thoroughly routed. I bring you this word of cheer today. We have the victory won and on September 8 there will be rejoicing in Georgia—rendered the people; but richer far am I, in the confidence which the people of this section and of my native state have manifested toward me.

"My opponents have sought by an overwhelming verdict against the campaign of slander and abuse waged by my opponents. No sentiment has ever been expressed which I have appreciated as much as the utterance in a sentence from some of my friends in Jackson county when they declared that however poor in worldly goods, I was rich in the service that I had every device of the well known cuttlefish to darken and becloud the issues in this campaign. There is but one issue, and that issue will be discussed by me plainly and frankly before you. But before I proceed to this issue, in order that we may see it clearly, I want to discuss some of the various slanders that have been circulated in an effort to divert the minds of the people. This campaign of opposition to me and to the principles I stand for is financed more abundantly and more lavishly than any campaign ever before waged in this state. All the elements of self-interest are centered in a fight for state bonds. All of those who would profit from exploitation of the state's credit, have centered their attacks upon me, because in me they see the one candidate who would keep their hands off of the untarnished credit of the state of Georgia, and would prevent their using it in order that their own coffers might be filled.

Mileage Charge.

"The first charge that has been made is that the highway department has only forty-nine miles of state road mileage now to allot. A falser statement was never circulated.

"The legal aspects of the case have been fully gone into and the attorney for the state highway department advised the state highway board that they had eight hundred miles to allot. The men who voted for the bill in the legislature stated that they had eight hundred miles to allot. The highway board, after a careful investigation, reached the conclusion that they had eight hundred miles to allot, and they proceeded in the discharge of their duty, to hear the various sections of the state which were interested in securing a portion of this additional mileage.

"No more asinine performance could exist than that the state highway board should go all over the state of Georgia and hear delegations of citizens, with only forty-odd miles of mileage to allot.

"No greater reflection has ever been made upon the integrity and patriotism of the Georgia legislature than that they would vote for the passage of a bill that only increased the state mileage forty-nine miles, when the members were urging the passage of this bill in order that the sparsely settled and isolated communities of Georgia might derive benefits from highways and that these communities might be brought into touch with the larger centers of population in our state.

"This legislative intent was so clear and plain that the highway board felt that it was its solemn obligation to carry out the intent of the legislature.

"One member of the state highway board has addressed a letter to the sheriff of Worth county stating his position, and I declare here, as chairman of the highway board, that we have 786 miles to allot.

"In the solemn discharge of our duty, we shall apportion the mileage at the proper time to the different counties in Georgia that, in our judgment, most need this mileage.

"Of this 800 additional miles, we still have 786 miles to allot, and the allotment will be made. It is an exceedingly strange thing that one of the candidates for governor was in the legislature at the time this additional mileage bill was passed and only recently discovered the alleged defect in the law. It is a remarkable thing how many flaws one can discover after he becomes a candidate.

"It is useless to discuss this question further. The position of the state highway board is that we have 786 miles of state highway mileage to allot, and in the discharge of our duty we shall allot it, and no part of this mileage has been promised to any person or county.

Concerning Machine Politics.

"We have heard much talk of machine politics in this state. By the Neil primary law, the head of the political machinery of this state is the present governor of the commonwealth. His powerful influence extends to every department of state government, for he has the right of almost innumerable appointments to various boards, institutions and departments.

"Surely no one in Georgia will claim that the present governor is throwing the weight of his machine behind me, but rumor has it that he and his cabinet at the capitol are in daily consultation with the opposition.

"Great newspapers in this state have allied themselves in solemn compact and are directing their attacks against me because I have refused to join them in their proposed raid on the state treasury.

"The most vehement and vituperative of all the newspapers is The Macon Telegraph, because I stand in the way of fulfillment of the ambition of the editor of this paper, as it has been reliably reported that should the opposition be successful the editor of The Macon Telegraph will become chairman of the highway board.

"They speak of the highway department as a 'machine' and yet it is well-known of all men that the highway board consists of three members, two of whom are not candidates for office, and the action of the board requires a majority.

"I need go into only recent history to show that I have never selected, nor been a party to the selection, of the state highway engineer, who appoints all of the engineers and the high salaried employees of the department. Surely no sane man could claim the control of a machine when I cannot even control the appointment of employees except by the consent and with the approval of my colleagues on the board.

Change of Heart.

"We hear much talk and much rumor of extravagance, and yet my distinguished opponent from this county asked me not to enter the race for governor and promised me, as a consideration, that should I not enter the race, he would be delighted to reappoint me as chairman of the highway board. Before I was a candidate for governor I was acceptable to this distinguished fellow citizen as chairman of the highway board, but since I became a candidate I have been charged by him with every conceivable extravagance and mismanagement.

"As the chairman of the highway department of Georgia, I felt that it was my duty to attend to the business of the state, for which I was receiving my salary. I have been in my office, or out in the state attending to the highway business, leaving my campaign in the hands of my friends. I have made no speeches—I have issued no statements. I have felt that that was the proper course to pursue. I am running as a candidate for governor of Georgia. I am taking no part in any race except my own.

"I am not allied with any other candidate and am not in combination with any one. I am running my own race. I am paddling my own canoe. I desire the support and the vote of every citizen of Georgia—I care not whose friend he may be. He may be the friend of any candidate in the race and yet I desire his support if he believes that the principles that I advocate and the policies I pursue will be for the upbuilding and prosperity of this state and for its progress along reasonable lines.

Progress in Highway Department.

"I propose to enter into no lengthy defense of the highway department. When I first became the chairman in 1922, the department was more than $500,000 in debt. Its credit was impaired and it was practically receiving no money from state sources, except enough to carry on its maintenance work and pay general expenses. Attempts had already been made to emasculate the law and to some extent, attempts were successful in 1921.

"In 1923, the first gas tax for the benefit of highways in Georgia was levied but did not become available until January, 1924.

"Only through the years 1924 and 1925, and up to the present date in 1926, has the highway department received any money from gasoline tax, and yet this department can point with pride to the record it has made.

"We have built more miles of bridges than any state in the southeast, even including our much beloved neighbor, North Carolina. We have now nearly 500 miles of hard surfaced paving in the state, 500 miles of gravel highway, which can be traversed at all seasons and in all weather conditions.

"We have 2,000 miles of graded highway ready for paving.

"This year we will complete the highway between the city of Atlanta and the city of Macon, and from Marietta, Ga., to Perry, Ga.

"We can travel a distance of 150 miles by the first of 1927 without disturbing the purr of the motor of any automobile under any and all conditions, because every inch of the road will be hard surfaced.

"We have prepared and will keep open the road through north Georgia from Chattanooga to Atlanta so that it may be traversed all this winter.

"Paving is in progress all the way south of Macon and we can see now the fulfilled vision of a completed highway from Tennessee to the Florida line in a period of the next eighteen months or two years.

"I need not take up your time with other details, such as the roads over the mountains which will soon link the cities of Asheville and Atlanta, with unbroken stretches of hard-surfaced roads.

"The Florida line and the South Carolina line will soon be linked, and every condition points now in the next two or three years to a rapid completion of certain great interstate highways, which will link Georgia with all adjoining states. This is all being done in compliance with the letter and spirit of the law, joining county seat to county seat. The revenues of the department will increase from time to time and the work will grow and grow.

"This is the record of the highway department. The administrative officials of the federal government compliment this department upon its low administrative overhead costs, which are lower than those of nearly every state in that great territory south of the Potomac and east of the Mississippi river, and far lower than those north of it.

One Great Issue.

"Now I come to the one great issue of the campaign. No one questions that Georgia wants paved highways—no one questions that Georgia wants better educational facilities. The question is—how shall she secure them? Shall the people pay for them, or shall we mortgage the future by a great bonded indebtedness?

"Some of my enemies have circulated the report that some years ago I was in favor of bonds. I do not deem this report worthy to be noticed, but I do desire to say that from the inception of the plan to bond the state, after our revenues in the highway department had reached a certain figure, I steadfastly opposed such a scheme.

"I took my political life in my hands and fought against the present governor's design to load this state down with a heavy bonded indebtedness in order that selfish special interests might prosper while the common people struggled under the burden of increased taxation.

"In order to entice me from this position, the present governor of this state, in a message to the legislature, offered to make me chairman of the road commission which would have the right to spend the seventy millions of money.

"This offer was made after the present governor had attempted illegally to remove me as chairman of the state highway board, with the statement that I was unfit to head this great board.

"I need not tell you, my friends, that this charge of the present governor was completely refuted and disapproved by the supreme court of Georgia, by the Georgia legislature, and by the people of this state.

"My opponent from the county of Wilkinson has been in both the house and senate, and has presided over the senate. Today he wails out his complaints and lamentations against the highway department.

This is Candidate Carswell, and yet as President of the Senate Carswell, and as Senator Carswell, he never lifted his voice against the alleged evils of the highway department, nor offered one single constructive suggestion to cure these alleged ills.

"And it was this same gentleman who came to me voluntarily after the governor had removed me, denounced the governor's action as an outrage and extended his sympathy to me because of my summary and unjust dismissal without even the courtesy of a hearing.

A careful study of the records of the finances of the highway department convinces me that by the year 1927 there will be available from state and federal funds—from state, $9,000,000, and from the federal government, $2,000,000, which, added to the county funds of $2,000,000, will give us $13,000,000 available for highway purposes in 1927. In addition to this, the counties themselves will receive $2,000,000 a year as their pro rata share of the gas tax fund.

"I felt then that with the increased revenues of the state, that we had as much money as we could economically and wisely handle, I still hold this position and, holding this position, it is inconceivable that the State of Georgia should go into debt.

"The siren voice may be heard everywhere that bonds do not increase taxation, but as you read the records written in state auditors' reports, comptroller generals' reports, state treasurers' reports and tax collectors' reports, you will find that the result invariably is that the cost of credit is paid for by the taxpayer in the form of increased taxation.

"My one desire is to keep the credit of Georgia high, and her taxes low, instead of to make her taxes high and her credit low, and this can only be done if we follow the example of those men who suffered all the privations that came after the war between the states.

"Faced with the threatened destruction of our southern civilization, they wrote into their constitution a clause of self-abnegation which has been the chart by which we have guided the ship of state ever since 1877 and which has brought peace and prosperity to our people.

"These men of stern mold and heroic character, seeing what debt would do for a state, made up their minds that they would not leave their children and children's children a legacy that would impede their progress and place upon posterity's back a burden that would hamper the industry and business of the state.

An Object Lesson.

"The bonded indebtedness of this state was found by the constitutional convention of 1877 to be $10,777,000. On that bonded indebtedness we have thus far paid $5,777,000 on the principal, and we have paid $18,531,000 interest, and we still owe five million dollars on the principal.

"At the rate we are now retiring the principal, viz: $100,000 a year, it will be 50 years before this debt is finally paid, or, in other words, the principal and interest upon this debt will aggregate the sum of nearly $35,000,000 when finally paid.

"This is an object lesson that stares Georgia in the face, and it should be a tower from which warning lights should be flashed our people at all times, telling us of the quagmire of debt and the incubus that comes from the extravagant use of the state's credit.

"In the opinion of our forefathers I have concurred, and, my fellow-countrymen, I want to warn you that behind all the propaganda this emanates from all three headquarters there is a master mind that is directing the whole affair.

"Whether the attack be delivered by the gentleman from Wilkinson, the gentleman from Fulton, or my fellow countryman—every one of these candidates is running in behalf of the bond people, and some of these campaigns of my opponents are financed by interests which would soon make back their contributions by an exploitation of the state's treasury.

"The whole venom of their attacks is directed against me, because I stand as the obstacle in the path of the bond advocates, whether they be for one or the other of those candidates, and my candidacy stands as a stone wall which must be surmounted before the chariot of debt can roll down upon the taxpayers of Georgia, and before they can be led by these same advocates into hopeless bonded indebtedness and financial slavery.

"That is the issue—whether Georgia shall remain free from bonded indebtedness or whether upon her citizens shall be placed the galling yoke of financial slavery. No other issue is in this campaign. This is the issue that the bond people stated openly that they were going to take to the people in a selection for the candidate for governor, and openly boasted that this was their intent after the defeat of state bonds by the Georgia legislature.

"I did not desire to lead the fight, but friends and fellow citizens in this state insisted that I should lead in behalf of the rank and file, and so I took up the battle. But when the fight was carried to the people and the people began to look behind the scenes and see what was being prepared for them, the bond people saw that the whole purpose of the campaign must be disguised and skillful propaganda must be employed and every known device of the political manipulator, including base rumor and false charges, must be circulated, because they realized that the people of Georgia would never knowingly settle upon themselves an indebtedness of the nature and character proposed.

Future for Georgia.

"Now, my fellow countrymen, I have been glad to come and talk with you. I love old Jackson county, with its fertile fields and its smiling valleys but more than all else, I love the people with whom I have been associated for more than 50 years. I love Georgia, and I resent every calumny that is circulated against this state, and every rumor that is started to retard her progress or impair her prosperity. I believe in a great Georgia.

"I believe that we are on the threshold of progress, the like of which has never before blest our people. I would like to have a part in the wonderful future that lies just around the corner for us. It has been the dream and the desire of my life to serve the people of my state, and at no time in all her history would I rather serve her than now, when the horizon is shot with every rosy hue of promise. With the experience that I have gained in the last four and a half years as chairman of the highway board, with a highway board thoroughly sympathetic and cooperating with me, with the cooperation and assistance of the county commissioners of Georgia, I firmly believe that we can together build for Georgia a magnificent system of highways which will be the pride of every citizen of this state, and that we can build it out of current revenues. No man in the state of Georgia believes more than I do in paved highways, because I know what they mean to our people.

"I believe in a program of educational expansion. I want to foster the cause of education in every way possible should I be elected governor of this state. I want to give the boys and girls of Georgia the very best educational advantages we can possibly afford. I want to build up both the common schools and the institutions of higher learning of this state. I want the program of educational expansion to be fully developed and carried out.

"Should I be elected, it would be one of the joys of my life to have a part and a share in securing these things for my people.

Stronger Banking Laws.

"Should I be elected, I shall recommend to the legislature changes in our banking laws which make, as far as is humanly possible, the deposits of our citizens safe. I shall urge the legislature to strengthen these laws in every possible way to afford protection to our people.

"Here in the presence of my neighbors, who have known me all my life, I desire to make this solemn statement: I have not made a promise to any living individual as to any office, and will make no such promise.

"I shall advocate no increase in taxation.

"I shall call no extra session of the legislature unless the gravest necessities of the state's business demand it.

"I shall advocate the economical handling of all the state's money.

"I shall advocate the elimination of all useless waste and duplication in the state's activities.

"These are the principles that I shall advocate if elected governor of Georgia, and if these views and policies meet your approval and the sanction of the people of the state, I do firmly believe that the people of this Empire State will follow the lead of the people of my home county and carry to a glorious victory our flag on the 8th day of September, and the principles that we all are fighting for will be vindicated.

"I am absolutely confident that I shall be nominated by the greatest majority ever given to a candidate for the high office of governor of Georgia."

HOLDER'S APPEAL FOR HIGHWAY BONDS

$70,000,000 issue advocated by Holder just two years ago, but read the record—

The following is full text of the report of Mr. Holder, Chairman, and two other members of the highway board, made to the Governor and Legislature in 1924, just two years ago, in which Mr. Holder strongly advocated a $70,000,000 bond issue for roads in Georgia:

(FROM THE ATHENS (GA.) BANNER, AUGUST 15, 1926)

"It gives us great pleasure to call attention to the advocacy of Hon. W. T. Anderson, one of the members of this board, in behalf of a bond issue for the purpose of constructing a large mileage of hard-surfaced roads. This board believes that the plan advocated by Commissioner Anderson is a reasonable one, and invites your attention to its serious consideration.

"Mr. Anderson has had investigation made of the income from the gas tax, and its actual increase both in this and other states, and he finds that this gas tax of 3 cents, if put into a common fund, would take care both in principal and interest of a bond issue of $70,000,000, paying it off in thirty years, and that there would accrue during the time on account of the increase in the consumption of gas and greater revenue from the tax, additional money to the extent of $111,000,000.

"Portions of this additional money would be available annually, and would enable the department not only to pave the entire state system and build the bridges, but it would enable us to fill in a great many very necessary links that are now omitted from the state highway system.

"The $70,000,000 bond money if authorized could be handled practically and economically by the present minimum organization of the department, and it is estimated that this would be put into hard-surfaced roads within a period of seven years. During this seven years, we should receive under the present plan of the federal government in the distribution of its road fund above $15,000,000 more, making a total of $85,000,000. This, it is estimated, would build roads and bridges to the extent of about 4,000 miles during that time.

"It is estimated that the number of motor driven vehicles in the state exceeds 200,000. The life of these machines is believed to be about two years or less. Figuring these at 60 per cent Fords, and conservatively estimating the value of the remainder, the probable amount of the investment in machines is $150,000,000. If they last two years, there is an annual depreciation of $75,000,000.

"The state of Maryland paved her roads, and states that one year was added to the actual life of her automobiles. The state of Kentucky took a fleet of 62 cars of the same make, placed half of them on dirt roads, and the other half on paved roads for one year. The differences in the operating cost of the two fleets of cars was 2½ cents per mile. This operating cost covered tires, mechanics' repairs, broken parts, gas and oil—depreciation and storage not figured.

"If the cars in Georgia are figured at 10,000 miles per annum each, and if Georgia were to have the same experience as Kentucky, this would make a difference in the operating cost of machines in this state of fifty million ($50,000,000) dollars a year. These figures are staggering and unbelievable but if they are reduced to the least possible amounts, they would more than justify a bond issue as proposed.

"The cost of maintaining dirt roads in Georgia is $250 per mile per annum. The cost of maintaining paved roads in some states is as low as $72 per mile. It may readily be seen that there is going to waste on our 8,000 miles more than $1,250,000 a year in this item alone."

(Signed) JOHN N. HOLDER,
Chairman State Highway Board.

STANLEY S. BENNETT, Member,
W. T. ANDERSON, Member.

A strong argument for bonds, but—

Can Georgia trust a man who is so "wishy-washy" on such a big subject and who changes his opinion with every seeming current of public opinion?

Dr. L. G. Hardman, safe, sane, conservative candidate for governor, has always opposed state bond issues, although he states it is not an issue in the present race, inasmuch as the governor cannot even veto a bond submission bill if passed by the legislature. No governor can prevent a bill from being introduced, cannot prevent it being submitted to a vote of the people, even if he wanted to.

HARDMAN CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE

Climb of Senator George Reads Like Fiction Story

From the corn rows of the old red hills of Georgia to the floor of the United States senate as the tribute of his people in the greatest forum on earth—that is the brief sketch of the career of United States Senator Walter Franklin George, made public Saturday by E. B. Dykes, campaign manager.

Standing in the senate as one of the youngest and most vigorous members of that body, Senator George has back of him a career of battling against adversity; of fighting for an opportunity against odds; for undergoing hardships and trials to climb slowly up the ladder of success, which should be an inspiration to every boy and girl in Georgia.

Senator Walter George is truly a son of the soil. He worked on a farm and he worked hard, almost as soon as he had reached an age where he could perform physical labor. Born on a farm, he stuck to the farm, obtained his early education in a rural school, is now engaged in farming, and although a United States senator, his chief interest in that body lies in endeavoring to do something for the relief of the farmers of his native state and the southland.

Senator George was born 48 years ago on a farm in Webster county. His parents were Robert T. and Sara Stapleton George, and they lived on a farm near Arabi in Crisp county. He is essentially a self-made man, working on a farm to get his early education, working on slender means to get through Mercer university, and working day and night ever since, to attain the high position he now holds.

Studious Boyhood.

Senator George is descended from both the Peels and the Stapletons, who were among the early settlers of Burke and Washington counties, their ancestors having emigrated to this country from Yorkshire, England, during the era of Charles I. Members of both families fought heroically in the War of 1812 and the American Revolution.

As a boy Senator George was of a studious disposition. He did not enjoy the usual opportunities for fun and pleasure afforded other boys. He had little time to play games, to visit the old swimming hole, even to hunt or fish, as he was either engaged in work or study all during his youth. He found early pleasure in books and in his spare time devoted his activities to reading and study. He was by no means a "sissy," but simply utilized his time in improving his mind and laying the foundation for the intellect he later developed.

Down in Arabi in Crisp county, the little old school building still stands where Senator George learned to read and write, and where he learned from the able headmaster of that old school a whole lot not taught in modern institutions of learning.

Began Debating Early.

It has been 30-odd years since Senator Walter F. George was a school boy at Arabi. But that school had come to be known all over this section for its excellency. Its headmaster, Professor A. F. Ware, now directing the South Georgia college, at McRae, is still in active harness.

George was a debater in early tendencies and always had a part in the debating societies and the work of the literary societies in the school. They took sides and waged active campaigns in many causes.

In September, 1897, Walter George entered Mercer university, Macon, coming from the high school at Arabi, and entering the sophomore class, or class of 1900.

This was the largest class at Mercer at that time and the largest that had ever entered that institution up to that time, graduating 38 men in the spring of 1900. In many respects it was a fine class, and any old Mercer man of that period will recall with pride the achievements of the class in the intercollegiate debates of 1899 and 1900. George was on the winning teams and also won the championship for Mercer in the intercollegiate oratorical contest of 1900.

Drafted to Serve People.

In college, Walter George, in spite of a natural reserve and dignity, which the many years of his life since that time in the limelight have not destroyed, was extremely popular. His friends predicted success.

The professional politicians in Georgia have been at a loss to explain the political strength of Walter George. He has not been one of their number. He has never served in the Georgia legislature or been closely identified with the political life of the capitol. The explanation is easy; In every Georgia county almost, and in every section of the state, live, as more or less influential men of their community, college and school friends of Senator George. For no man in the state will they fight harder or more persistently than for Senator George. To them he is the same warm, dignified and modest friend as he was in the "brave days of old," when as a youth he was drafted for service to represent them in the championship contest with rival colleges.

After he finished his course in college as bachelor of arts and as bachelor of law, he returned to Vienna, then the county seat of all the territory now comprised in both Crisp and Dooly counties. So large was Dooly county, he soon found plenty to do as a young lawyer. As he rose in his profession he was induced to offer for solicitor general of the circuit. He served some five years in this capacity and then was elected judge of the Cordele circuit. Here he gave another five years.

Served Four Years.

While in the midst of his duties as judge of the circuit, his friends pushed him into the race for the court of appeals. He was elected and served in that capacity till Judge Beverly Evans was appointed to the federal bench, leaving a vacancy on the supreme court of the state. To this place he was appointed and served until during the term of the late Senator Watson in the United States senate, when he resigned to come back home to his first love, the practice of law with Vienna as his home until elected to the United States senate.

In the senate, this distinguished Georgian has followed to the letter these fundamental principles of character ingrained in him as a boy and young man. He steadfastly has voted his convictions regardless of pressure. He has studied carefully and logically the many great questions faced in the senate and after reaching his conclusions, has fought for his principles with vigor and courage.

Although he has served in the senate less than four years, Senator George has reached a position of command and influence. Not only in his party councils but among the senators of all parties and factions his worth has been recognized.

In the last national election Senator George did valiant service on the stump in the western states speaking in behalf of the democratic national ticket.

From the corn rows of the Georgia hills to the floor of the United States senate is a far cry, but in making this tremendous rise in the world Senator George has always remained a real man, a man of thought and vision, of sympathy and understanding; a real man of the people willing to fight to the last gasp for those principles he believes should be followed to give his people the best there is in government.

Congressional Race Tangle Possible Under New Rules

With three candidates running for congress in the fifth district considerable interest is being shown in the possibilities of a convention fight and if there is such a convention fight it probably will be a spectacular battle under rules governing the convention.

The state democratic executive committee does not control the convention in the congressional races as this convention is entirely in the hands of the congressional committee.

In the fifth district there are 18 unit or convention votes. Fulton county sends six votes to the convention, DeKalb sends six votes, Rockdale county two votes, Campbell county two votes and Douglas county two votes.

To win the nomination in the convention the successful candidate must get 10 convention votes. Nine votes would tie but under the system of unit votes a candidate can get either 8 or 10 votes under the apportionment as there are no odd numbers.

Illustration Given.

To illustrate: Suppose one candidate obtains 8 votes, a second candidate obtained 8 votes and a third candidate obtained 2 votes. Under rules of the convention the balloting would continue two days. After that time if any candidate has both a plurality of the convention votes and a plurality of the popular votes he is nominated. If however, he has a plurality of convention votes and does not have a plurality of the popular vote there is a run-off between the two candidates having the largest number of convention votes.

If one candidate carries Fulton and Campbell county he would have 8 convention votes. A second candidate could carry DeKalb and Douglas counties and have 8 votes, while a third candidate could carry Rockdale county and have 2 votes.

If a candidate could carry one of the six-vote counties and two of the two-vote counties, he would win on the first ballot with 10 votes. If he should carry two of the six-vote counties he could win on the first ballot. If he carried all three of the two-vote counties it would be necessary for him also to carry one of the six-vote counties to obtain the necessary vote to win on the first ballot.

State Primary Rules.

In the state primary election it is certain that all nominees will be selected in the first primary, September 8, except in the race for governor. Under rules of the state democratic executive committee provision is made for run-over races in the contests for governor and United States senate. All other races are to be settled under the plurality county unit plan. But, in the race for the United States senate there are but two candidates, United States Senator Walter F. George and Judge Richard B. Russell, hence, this race will be settled in the first primary.

For governor there are four candidates, George H. Carswell, Dr. L. G. Hardman, Chairman John N. Holder, of the state highway commission, and J. O. Wood. In this race the candidate receiving a plurality in each county is entitled to the unit vote of that county. But in the state convention he must obtain a majority of the unit county votes or else there will be a run-over between the two candidates receiving the highest number of county unit votes.

Under this rule it is possible for a candidate for governor to receive a little more than one-fourth of the popular vote of each county and yet obtain all the county unit votes in the convention.

State Race Rules.

To cite an illustration: Fulton county has six county unit votes. Suppose the popular vote of Fulton county is 20,000. In the election one candidate receives 5,001 votes and the other three candidates receive 4,999 votes each. The successful candidate would get the six county unit votes though approximately 15,000 votes were cast against him. In a small county the vote can be supposed to be 400. One candidates receives 101 and the other three receive 99 votes each. The candidate with the 101 votes, or about one-fourth of the popular vote, is entitled to the two county unit votes of that county.

In the state convention there are 414 county unit votes. Eight counties have six convention votes; 30 counties have four convention votes, and 123 counties have two convention votes each.

CHATTOOGA BAPTISTS TO HOLD MEETING

Summerville, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—The 35th annual session of the Chattooga Baptist association will meet at Bethlehem Baptist church, three miles north of Subligna, on Tuesday and Wednesday, September 7-8, it is announced.

Several prominent religious leaders from various parts of the state are expected to attend the meeting, and all churches in the county will send delegates.

MACHINE DOOMED, SAYS DR. HARDMAN

Carrollton, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—Continuing his fight to clean the state capitol of the "Brown-Holder machine," Dr. L. G. Hardman, gubernatorial candidate, again scored his opponent and referred to him as John "Detour" Holder. Dr. Hardman stated that Holder's friends had waved the red flag indicating the dangerous situation and had urged him to break his silence by making a speech today at Jefferson.

"Sensing defeat, John "Detour" Holder, will make his maiden speech of the campaign in his home city this afternoon," said Dr. Hardman. "A hurry-up call to members of the Brown-Holder faction was made a few days ago to work out a plan to separate the machine, but it was decided to let the hair go with the hide, realizing all too late that the fact that the combination of the state highway and the agricultural department forces will not be sufficient to elect him. He is now desperate. The machine will be destroyed and the voters of Georgia are going to do it to a "brown turn.'

"There is only one issue in this campaign and that is whether the voters will permit the Brown-Holder machine to continue in office and waste the money of the state through employment of incompetent men. I reiterate the charge that the state highway department is overburdened with expenses that should be eliminated. The state's business should be conducted as a private enterprise.

"No business man in Georgia would for a moment tolerate in his own affairs conditions that now exist in the state highway and department of agriculture. With economies in these two and other departments of your great state there would be saved the taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars. It is up to you voters to say whether the machine shall continue to rule at the capitol in Atlanta, or if you want a business administration. The issue is clean cut. Make your decision at the ballot box.

"I have always considered a public office a public trust and should never be used for private gain. We have an overlapping of departments that simply provide jobs for friends of the political machine. Unnecessary departments should be abolished or consolidated and other economies effected which would obviate the necessity of increased taxation.

"On the road proposition I believe every one knows where I stand. I have never changed my position. Should the people desire or not desire a bond issue, that is a matter for them to decide. This is not a matter for a governor to decide, for that has already been tried, and failed. Personally I am for good roads, we need them, but let us spend the money on highways more economically. Why should a dollar of your money be spent in buying only a half dollar's worth of constrution on roads or bridges? That is being done today.

"I could cite you a number of counties that are building roads and bridges for one-half the cost to the state highway department. You are paying for it, so why not elect a man governor who would see that every dollar spent brings the people one hundred cents?"

SENATOR KNIGHT SPEAKS FOR HARDMAN.

Waycross, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—Making two speeches here today in the interest of the candidacy of Dr. L. G. Hardman, P. T. Knight, state senator from Lowndes county, made the assertion that the state highway department of Georgia is paying $2 for one dollar's worth of road work. He said:

"I. T. Y. Nash, county commissioner from DeKalb county, comes forth with the statement that he is building roads in that county for one-half that being paid by the state highway department. He states that a 90-foot concrete bridge was built on specifications of the highway department at one-half the cost estimated. He is also building sand-clay roads at one-half the expense the highway department is paying. This has also been done in Tift county and in other sections of the state. Let us elect Hardman, the business candidate, who would eliminate gross extravagance and graft at the state capitol."

HINES' REELECTION FORECAST BY FRIENDS

Indorsements of the candidacy of Associate Justice James K. Hines, for reelection to the supreme court of Georgia, have reached him from every section of the state indicating his election at the forthcoming September 8th primary, it was declared Saturday by C. Murphy Candler, J. K. Jordan and other prominent Atlanta lawyers who are actively interested in the race.

Files of letters in Judge Hines' offices at the state capitol, as well as correspondence of those in charge of the details of Judge Hines' race show that he will be elected, it was said.

Sentiment is overwhelming in favor of retaining on the supreme court bench a man of the true worth and sterling ability possessed by Judge Hines," Mr. Jordan declared. "There is no profession, or line of work anywhere in the state that has not been represented in the letters received pledging support to Judge Hines as one of the greatest jurists the supreme court of Georgia ever had."

Judge Hines' wide experience and preeminent fitness for the office which he now holds by virtue of an election to fill an unexpired term, have appealed to the suffrage of the whole state, insuring that the people will honor Judge Hines by giving him a full term, it was said.

CAMP HITS TALMADGE PRINTING CHARGES

Josephus Camp, superintendent of public printing, in a letter to The Constitution, denies that the printing costs of the state market bureau are excessive as he says was charged by Eugene Talmadge, candidate for commissioner of agriculture.

Following is the letter of Mr. Camp:

"Editor Constitution: Disclaiming special interest in the candidacy of any individual for the office of commissioner of agriculture, I request space for a challenge of the statement of Mr. Eugene Talmadge at Sparta last Thursday to the effect that, when he is elected to this office, he will improve the state market bulletin at considerably less cost than half the money now expended in publishing that periodical.

"The contract for publishing the Market MBulletin, which is awarded under competitive bids, has for several years been handled by the department of public printing, the weekly invoices being regularly analyzed and approved by this office. Prices for this work, it is only fair to state, are much lower than before this department was entrusted with the publication.

"Actual printing and material costs involved in producing this bulletin, based upon conservative Atlanta figures, amount to a sum which allows the printer less than a 10 per cent profit on his work and provide for no overhead or wastage charges. The invoice for the Market Bulletin for the current week amounts to $530.90, and the cost of production is nearly $500, according to estimates made in this office.

"While not concerned in the political fortunes of either Mr. Brown or Mr. Talmadge, this department resents the imputation that it has approved excessive bills for this or any other contract and feels that the public is entitled to this correction of the latter's statement."

Bessie Tift College To Open; Talmadge To Welcome Pupils

Forsyth, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—Extensive improvements on buildings and grounds at Bessie Tift college area being completed and a record-breaking attendance is registered for the opening exercises at 8:30 o'clock, September 15.

The welcome address to new students and teachers will be made by Hon. T. R. Talmadge, of Forsyth. He has been a trustee of the college for 37 years and has probably welcomed more strangers and visitors to Forsyth than any man in the town. Mr. Talmadge has been a deacon in the Forsyth Baptist church for over 30 years and was chairman of the Monroe county board of education for 27 years. It is fitting that he should in behalf of the trustees and the good people of Forsyth welcome the newcomers to this beautiful little city.

Mr. Talmadge's many friends appreciate and enjoy his unbounded enthusiasm in behalf of his brilliant son, the Hon. Eugene Talmadge, who is a candidate for commissioner of agriculture.

The city of Forsyth has furnished three resident trustees who have served more than 35 years each in the persons of Judge O. H. B. Bloodworth, of the court of appeals, whose mother-in-law, Mrs. Laura C. Dunn, and whose wife and daughters, four in number, have all graduated at Bessie Tift college; J. J. Cater, Sr., who had five daughters to graduate at the college and whose granddaughter has recently enrolled for next year, and T. R. Talmadge.

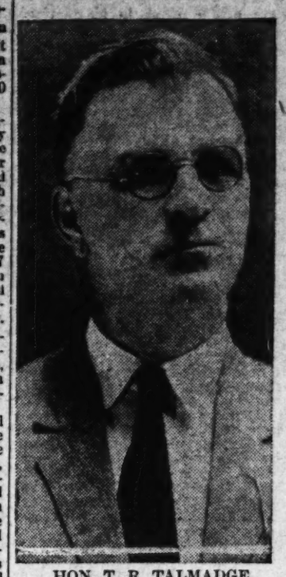

Many others have served faithfully and efficiently for years but these three are the oldest in point of service of any members on the board. Forsyth is proud to honor many families who have greatly honored the city by their long residence in it. The Cabiness home of this city has been in the family for over 100 years. Here the parents of H. H. and T. B. Cabiness and other distinguished members of the Cabiness family were reared.

Stevens Was Friend.

Another family that has been a great blessing and an honor to the institution is the Stevens family. Mr. Banks Stevens, who recently passed away, was a lifelong friend and benefactor of the institution. Mr. Stevens' daughter-in-law, Mrs. John T. Stevens, is not only a member of the board of trustees but is its secretary. Another is the Ponder family. Captain J. M. Ponder, who died recently in his eighty-second year, was for many years chairman of the board of trustees of the college and erected what is known as Ponder Hall in which the offices of administration are located. Captain Ponder's only daughter married another resident trustee of the college, Congressman Rutherford.

Another great friend of the institution and former trustee is C. A. Ensign, who until compelled by ill health to resign was an active and efficient member of the board of trustees. His friends are happy to see him improving and able to enjoy the fellowship of those who know him.

Other local trustees who have rendered great service to the institution in recent years are T. J. and H. H. Hardin, father and son, respectively. These good men have been active merchants, and the latter is president of the Citizens Bank of Forsyth. As one studies this list of leading citizens of Forsyth who have served in official capacities he will easily understand that Mr. Talmadge has a delightful task assigned to him in speaking words of welcome in behalf of the Forsyth community.

Bessie Tift college was organized in 1847, chartered in 1849, and in 1851 W. C. Wilkes became its president. Dr. Wilkes became its president. Dr. Wilkes was a great educator, and a few years later established Brenau college. Prior to the civil war Dr. Wilkes had gathered about him a very able corps of teachers, had a fine library and unsurpassed laboratories, and laid the foundations for a great and enduring institution. During those awful times from 1861 to 1865 the buildings were used as a hospital for Confederate soldiers, many of whom were buried in the local cemetery.

Other distinguished men, such as S. G. Hillyer, R. T. Asbury, Moses McCall, J. E. Powell, W. H. Lane, S. C. Hood, C. H. S. Jackson and J. H. Foster, have served as presidents. One year, 1897-98, Mrs. C. D. Crawley was at the head of the institution.

Farm Is Added.

One of the latest additions to the college equipment is a farm of 173 acres adjoining the campus property, which is being used as a dairy farm, and the Jersey herd from this farm is now producing 60 gallons of milk per day and will furnish 75 to 80 gallons throughout the school term, thus giving the highest grade of milk and butter for the students.

A very cordial welcome is extended to the friends of the institution throughout the state to attend the opening exercises.

WOODRUFF RUNS FOR TWO TERMS

Albert J. Woodruff, candidate for one of the places on the state public service commission in the democratic state primary, issued a statement Saturday in which he explained the situation in connection with the two terms for which he is offering as a candidate.

Mr. Woodruff said he was running for both the long and short term, made vacant through the death of the late Paul B. Trammell. Mr. Trammell had virtually one more year to serve of the present term and this is called the short term. It expires December 1, 1927. Mr. Woodruff said he is running for this term and has no opposition.

The long term of Mr. Trammell begins December 1, 1927, and for this term Mr. Woodruff is also running. He said he wanted to emphasize this statement that it is this term for which there is a contest. Mr. Woodruff is unopposed for the short term, but is opposed for the long term and his name appears twice on the ballot. He pointed out that it will be necessary for the voter to vote for him twice in order to assure the vote being cast for him in the long term.

"Wherever you see the name of Woodruff on the ticket make your mark after it and that will solve the problem," Mr. Woodruff said.

George B. Lankford is running for the unexpired term of the late James D. Price. This is for five years, as Mr. Price had not begun to fill his new term when he died. He had been elected to the new term, which began last December, but never lived long enough to serve in it. Orrin Roberts, of Monroe, was named by the governor to fill this unexpired term and whoever is elected to succeed Mr. Price in the primary will begin to serve this unexpired term of five years immediately after he is elected and qualified.

ALLEGED INTERLOPER HELD TO GRAND JURY

W. B. Morris, the name given by a 17-year-old youth found hiding in a vacant home in the vicinity of the burglarized C. D. Jones residence, at 92 Flat street, was held for grand jury action Saturday under a bond of $3,000, on charges of burglary. The arrest was made early Saturday morning by Call Officer J. L. Hughes.

Police were called to the Jones home when an intruder, who was discovered by Mrs. Jones prowling about in her room early Saturday, and who sprang upon Mrs. Jones in an attempt to throttle her screams when she tried to awaken her husband, fled from the home as Mr. Jones got out of bed. When apprehended the alleged interloper complained of "blank spells," which made him unconscious of what he did under their influence, the reports stated.

EDUCATION PLEA MADE BY GEORGE

Waycross, Ga., August 28.—"Place a junior college within easy radius of every boy and girl," United States Senator Walter F. George urged before his audience at Piedmont institute in Waycross, Friday.

"Education, next to the spiritual is the really vital problem of our people. That is why it is gratifying to note the progress being made by Georgia in this line. Just before I left Washington I was told by the war department that a Georgia military school—Riverside Military academy in Gainesville—ranked second among all such schools in the United States. It is second only to Culver and Culver has ten million dollars of endowment. It has students from 22 states and two foreign countries. We are proud of this.

"In Georgia the educational problem is changing. When I graduated from college the problem was insufficient and inadequate high schools. Today we have more high school graduates than our colleges are able to accommodate. The problem now is not to produce high school graduates but to take care of the yearly growing number of such graduates.

"There are two remedies. We must more junior colleges. The provision have more colleges and we must have of junior colleges is particularly needed in South Georgia. The junior college is a practical method of carrying these high school graduates farther on the journey of education. We need to build junior colleges close to the high schools.

Must Provide College.

"We must remember that the education of the average person is completed within a short radius of his home. We cannot take the average person away to college. We must bring the college to him.

"A man's life is largely controlled by his objectives. The development of the community and of the section rarely will pass beyond the objectives set by them for their futures. We must plan to have more educational facilities. We must make more junior colleges an objective.

"I believe strongly in state education. In no other way can the vast majority be educated through the common school grades. But as strongly as I believe in state education just so strongly do I recognize its limitations. The object of the state is and must be political. Emphatically is this true in the United States where church and state are separate and must be kept so. We cannot then look to state education to train its graduates other than as political units.

"But this is not sufficient. We need an education that will stress moral and spiritual values. Unless we impart to education more than is permitted within the limitations of the state we will reap as did the Germans. Statistics prove this need. Of the leaders in our country the great majority have come from small institutions where the pupils were in direct contact with big-thinking, big-living and spiritually-minded faculties.

"The problem is not alone education but the right type of education. The nation cannot survive without morality. Unless we have spirituality we cannot have the proper message for the world. Hence I am in favor of the private institutions, of the church institutions, where moral and spiritual values are emphasized. Such institutions counsel the state institutions to approach them in purpose and result.

"The placing of a junior college within easy reach of every boy and girl, the location of standard colleges at strategic points, is worth the supreme effort of our state. We must train for leadership if we are to have leadership. What we are to be must be wrought out in the school. The church and the school are the blockhouses from which we will advance to conquer new territory for our civilization."

BROWN ANSWERS TALMADGE CHARGE

J. J. Brown, commissioner of agriculture, made public a copy of a letter he has written his opponent, Eugene Talmadge, in which he denies he is using improper and unjustifiably campaign methods, as charged by Talmadge.

Commissioner Brown's letter follows:

Your favor of August 21 received. I notice that you say since the day of our joint debate at Elberton I have been pursuing improper and unjustifiable campaign methods, largely by the distribution of circulars and campaign literature in which I continue to make and deny charges which have been already thrashed out in detail and covered to the entire satisfaction of the audiences who heard us both at McRae and Elberton. You state further that I am in my more recent circulars and literature entirely disregarding the ground covered in each and both of those debates and diverting the truth.

In reply beg to say that I am issuing no circular and bringing no charges against you that were not brought face to face with you at McRae and at Elberton. You say that these charges were thrashed out in detail and covered to the entire satisfaction of the audiences who heard us both in this you are entirely mistaken. At McRae you did not answer or pretend to answer the charges brought against you by a grand jury of your own county in which the grand jury of Telfair county and court injunction charged you with cheating and defrauding Telfair county while you was county attorney for that county. You know that your speech, which was recorded by a court stenographer of high reputation, and which is now a matter of record, shows that you did not undertake to explain the charges of the grand jury, but on the other hand you would call on some friend of yours in the audience to know if they believe that you would defraud Telfair county, and of course receive an answer to your own liking. And after you had called on several people in the audience and had them answer your question as you wanted them to answer it, you then said, "Now, Mr. Brown, there you are." But that did not satisfy the people.

You are either guilty of what the grand jury of Telfair county and those who prayed for the injunction against you to stop you from further defrauding the county, or you are not guilty, and amid all the interruptions and discourtesies shown me at McRae you have not answered to the satisfaction of the intelligent hearers, and you cannot answer this indictment.

Your speech at McRae, as recorded, shows that you charged four oil inspectors of Fulton county with being guilty of a very heinous crime, that of holding back the state's money and allowing me to use it in my private bank account. I stated to you then that it was as false as false could be, and it is no less false today than it was when you uttered it. On the very next day the auditor of this state, S. J. Slate, in letters to those inspectors who had been charged with such an outrageous crime, stated unequivocally that these individuals had never been short a dollar of the state's money and that this money collected by them never passed through the bank account of the commissioner of agriculture but went direct to the state treasurer.

You had a chance at Dawson and at Elberton to retract these false charges that you know are false and that the people of this tsate know are false, and you did not have the moral courage or the manhood to do it, and from newspaper reports you are continuing to repeat these falsehoods. If I am guilty of that charge and have used the state's money in my private bank account I should be prosecuted and impeached, and you know if your statement was true I would have been prosecuted long ago. Now how could you have the face to ask me to meet you again on a level on the same platform and listen to you make a charge that you know is false, that I know is false, that the state auditor knows is false, and that the state treasurer knows is false.

Since you have had a gentleman's chance to set yourself right before the people of Georgia and refused to do it, I now look upon you as nothing more or less than a character assassin and will never lower myself and embarrass the intelligent voters of my state by meeting you on a platform again.

For your information, as well as that of the people of Georgia, I refer you to Georgia laws of 1923, Page 328, Part 2, Title 5, County Matter, headed: "Telfair Commissioner's Office Abolished." No. 88, and you will find an act to repeal the then present local law cerating the office of commissioner of roads and revenue of Telfair county, which I cannot quote here in full for want of space, but which is a matter of law that all may see. It is a fact that your conduct, and that of your ally, who was elected as an independent and as a bolter from the democratic primary, was such that the people of Telfair county, through their representative, abolished the place you held in order to get rid of you. These are truths that are eternal, and you did not meet these charges at McRae or Elberton, and you can never meet them or refute them because they are true. The same is true of the infamous charges that you made against the character and the integrity of the commissioner and the four oil inspectors mentioned in your McRae speech.

Colonel Talmadge, you may think that your tactics such as you used at McRae will elect you as commissioner of agriculture, but on September 8 you will find that the people of Georgia are not going to trust a man with the important department of agriculture who stands today, and will forever, stigmatized at the hands of his own grand jury for a trust that he betrayed when he was attorney for their county.

(Signed) J. J. BROWN.

Hits Wood Charges.

James D. Weaver, campaign manager for J. J. Brown, issued a statement denying a charge by J. O. Wood, candidate for governor, made in a speech delivered by Wood at Forsyth.

"Mr. Wood is quoted as saying that when J. J. Brown went into office there were only 16 oil inspectors and now there are 187," Mr. Weaver said. "This is as accurate as Mr. Wood usually gets. When Mr. Brown went into office there were 165 oil inspectors already appointed. Records show this."

GEORGE WELCOMED BY BAXLEY VOTERS

Baxley, Ga., August 28.—(Special.) More than 600 men and women voters of this section packed into the courthouse here at noon to hear an address by Senator Walter F. George in which he reviewed his record and based his appeal for reelection on his service in the senate.

Approval of his record was voiced in applause which frequently halted his speech and he waited for the noise to subside before continuing.

He was introduced by Colonel Wade Watson, prominent local attorney, who lauded the achievements of the junior senator and commended him to voters of Georgia.

Senator George was met at the county line before noon by several score citizens who formed a motorcade and accompanied him into Baxley where he became the guest of the mayor at the hotel here.

COMRADE OF CLARK PRAISES COURAGE

Tribute to the courage and bravery of Captain John W. Clark, candidate for state pension commissioner, is paid in a statement made public Saturday by James S. Dozier, of the Richmond Hussars, Troop A, Cobb's legion of the Georgia cavalry, during the war between the states. Mr. Dozier's statement follows:

Colonel John W. Clark and I left Augusta with the Richmond Hussars, July, 1861, and went directly to Yorktown, Va. We remained at Yorktown until ordered to evacuate by General Joseph E. Johnson, who deemed the situation unsafe.

Clark was afterwards detailed for duty as aide with General Thomas R. R. Cobb, with whom he served until General Cobb was killed at the battle of Fredericksburg. He then returned to his regiment, Cobb's legion, and remained with them at the front, on the firing line, until General William M. Browne appointed him aide-de-camp.

There was no better soldier in the Confederate army. He was always loyal to his military and all other duties. He and I served in the same company all during the war, and I know from personal knowledge these facts as set out.

His record since the war has been an enviable one. He has served his country, his county, his city, and is now very efficiently serving his state.

I cannot conceive of how any southern man, or any descendant, man or woman, of a Confederate soldier, can vote against one with the record that Colonel John W. Clark has made, and I feel sure that he will be overwhelmingly reelected as commissioner of pensions.

Talmadge Resents Brown's Charges in Warm Reply

Eugene Talmadge, candidate for commissioner of agriculture, issued a statement Saturday in which he takes exception to charges by his opponent, J. J. Brown, that he (Talmadge) seeks to destroy the state bureau of markets and the state market bulletin.

Talmadge, in his reply to Brown, reiterates charges made in speeches that the bureau of markets as now operated by Brown is bankrupt and that it has exhausted its appropriation. He promises, if elected, to improve and expand the bureau of markets and to continue to publish the state market bulletin.

Following is the Talmade statement:

"Commissioner of Agriculture J. J. Brown has issued a statement replying to the charge that the state bureau of markets is bankrupt, in which he says:

"'The statements that are being issued by Eugene Talmadge that I have bankrupted the bureau of markets is false.

"'The last general assembly cut out of the appropriation bill $25,000 from the farmers' fertilizer tag tax that was allowed by law to support their bureau and if the market bulletin should be discontinued in case of Talmadge's election it would be due solely to the fact that the enemies of the department of agriculture succeeded in keeping this $25,000 out of the appropriation bill, and members of the house like Jud Wilhoit, of Warren county, and Jeff Warren, of Washington county, who fought so hard to destroy the bureau of markets, are now supporting Talmadge, and it was Jud Wilhoit who interrupted me at Elberton and was told by the chairman at that meeting that he was not from Elbert county and unless he desisted he would be carried out of the crowd by policemen. It was just this type of men in the general assembly who have led the fight against the department of agriculture and who are now undertaking to put Talmadge on the people of this state for their commission.

Brown's Charges.

"'I charge here and now that if Eugene Talmadge is elected and carries out his pledge to the people of destroying the source of revenue from which the market bureau is operated, it will destroy the market bureau and the market bulletin. As long as I am commissioner of agriculture, and should I be elected on September 8, which I confidently believe I will, I will be able to finance the issuing of the bulletin in spite of the fact that its enemies cut from the appropriation $25,000 of the farmers' money that the law says shall go to the bureau of markets.'"

Replying by wire to his headquarters to the foregoing statement by Mr. Brown, Mr. Talmadge said:

"I made the statement several days ago, when I again called on J. J. Brown to meet me face to face with the people in the joint debate in Atlanta which he dodged after asking for it, that he has made the state bureau of markets insolvent. I repeat now that he has.

"In his speech at Elberton, Mr. Brown made the statement that he now has the matter of the $100,000 appropriation in process of friendly adjudication in the courts and expects to get full appropriation despite the act of the legislature. He said if he is successful he can go on, if he is not, he will have to stop.

Talmadge Gets Record.

"I made it my business to find out, as soon as I got back from Elberton, what the financial status of that bureau is from the state's records. Mr. Brown gave the public the tip that the bureau of markets was broke, and in investigation I got a member of my headquarters to make, proved that it is. When Mr. Vance went to the records in the office of the comptroller general, he found the bureau of markets was credited January 1 with the full amount of the state appropriation, $75,000. Two weeks ago the records showed Mr. Brown has spent all of his appropriation, except less than $3,000. The average monthly bills of the bureau of markets is in excess of $3,000, therefore, the only asset the bureau has is below its liabilities, with five more months to go on the year for which the general assembly made the appropriation.

"Brown raised this point himself. He drew attention to the bankrupt condition of the branch of his department. Records in the offices of the state auditor and the comptroller general show he is right, that the bureau of markets is broke.

"There is a common report that Brown's department has sought an opinion which will permit them to defy the act of the legislature and get the old appropriation of $100,000 anyway, and I can't but take it that this is the friendly adjudication in the courts to which Mr. Brown referred to his Elberton speech, since the court records in Fulton county do not disclose any case filed by him in defiance of the general assembly, though his department has sought such an opinion.

Defends Legislation.

"In respect to his slurring reference to the gentlemen in the general assembly who exercised their constitutional right to pass the law which controls, I desire to say that while those gentlemen are entirely capable of taking care of themselves in the light of Mr. Brown's slurs, his effort to individualize this action as that of Messrs. Jud P. Wilhoit and Jeff W. Warren is just about as sound as any of the others of the crooked political statements Mr. Brown so habitually issues.

"This fight has been more overwhelmingly won that any political battle in this state in many years. Brown and his cohorts realize the fact and they are desperate. So desperate that they are stopping at the uncleanliness of nothing to try to stop the tide. They have planned for their eleventh-hour schemes to try to turn the flood which is sweeping them away and Georgia to a purer day of government. I ask that Georgians be on the lookout for the Brown method of crooked political propaganda at the last hour. I ask them to bear in mind that I have insisted that J. J. Brown be man enough to meet me on the stump and face the people of the state in every congressional district; that he make in such joint debates every charge he has or can think of where I can meet them with him before the people.

Insists on Debate.

"I have insisted tht he meet me in Atlanta, the third place he himself selected for a joint debate, and he has not had the stamina and backbone to do it. It is not his method of conducting a campaign. His is the method of the gossip-monger; the kind which shuns the full truth and the test of daylight exposure. It is that method which he is planning now to employ in the last hours of the campaign, but it is too late. Georgia has awakened to Brown and the Brown brand of political chicanery and trickery. Voters are going to make sure on September 8 that he isn't again allowed to squander the funds of one branch of his department, or any branch of his department—for he does continue to refer to the department as his—for his own political ends. They are going to end the day when he can dominate the filling of seats in the Georgia legislature, in the state capitol and even our representatives in the seat of the national government."

City Control of County Funds Urged by L. N. Huff

Mayoralty Candidate Excoriates Ragsdale and Gordon in Lengthy Statement Explaining Platform.

City control of county finances, erection of a civic university on the "unsightly stretch" between Marietta and Spring streets and Cain and North avenue, reconstruction of the sewerage system adaequate for a city of 1,000,000 persons, and opposition to any relief to the Georgia Railway and Power company constitute main planks in the platform of Dr. L. N. Huff, candidate for mayor of the city to succeed Mayor Walter A. Sims.

Dr. Huff launched a scathing attack on methods of the Southern Bell Telephone company and of I. N. Ragsdale and Robert A. Gordon, two of his four opponents in the race for the mayoralty post in a statement issued Saturday afternoon. He also hit power company methods and declared that the "propaganda of the power company regarding its alleged inadequate earnings" is misleading because common stock is now selling at from $125 to $150 a share.

He scored what he termed the reign of petty politicians over city affairs by "dictation of councilmanic committees," and pointed out that he will stand solidly behind each department head in the event of his election.

Portions of Statement.

Excerpts from Dr. Huff's statement of his platform follow:

"The city of Atlanta constitutes an overwhelming majority of the county of Fulton, both in population and taxable values. Yet the city exercises no voice or control in the expenditure of county revenue, except as the board of county commissioners are willing to take notice of the city's needs.

"It is true that the county in recent years has shown a disposition to pay a part of the cost of public improvements inaugurated by the city, but these expenditutes are a bagatelle in comparison with the millions of dollars expended by the county in construction of concrete roads in remote, uninhabited sections of the county for the benefit of property owned by county commissioners or friends or kinsfolk of county commissioners.

"There are stretches of road costing $20,000 a mile running mile after mile through territory without a human habitation. These roads were not built to serve a public necessity, real or imaginary, present or prospective. If you wish to know why they were built, go to the county tax books and run down the ownership of the property abutting them.

Charges Private Profit.

"It seems incredible that so many millions could be collected out of the pockets of taxpayers in the city, where public improvements are desperately needed and carried away and spent in wild, remote, uninhabited wilderness, for private enrichment. It is beyond belief that this robbery of city taxpayers could be committed, and go on year after year, without criminal prosecution of the guilty officials.

"Why has it been necessary for Atlanta in recent years to increase the city tax assessments, increase the city tax rate, increase the city water rate, and issue millions of bonds?

"Because a surplus of county revenue, over and above county operating expenses, raised by taxation of city property, has been expended in construction of magnificent boulevards through private property for private enrichment. Instead of being expended for public improvements inside of the city, where the people live and where the revenue is collected.

"The city of Atlanta should control the expenditures of Fulton county.

"Bills should be drawn and presented to the legislature at the next session, establishing such control. Inasmuch as the city furnishes an overwhelming majority of the population, and an overwhelming majority of the revenue, the justice of such legislation cannot be disputed.

"Of course it will be fought bitterly by county commissioners and kinsfolk and friends of county commissioners and real estate brigands having lands scheduled for artificial enhancement at the public's expense.

"But the great body of city taxpayers burdened by high taxation will get justice from the legislature if their case is properly presented and if they will back it up.

"Herein lies the solution of Atlanta's finance problem, and I ask your earnest consideration of the same.

"It is contrary to human nature for any capable, self-respecting man or woman to function in any job under a multitude of bosses—yet that is the impossible handicap we impose upon the heads of all city departments.

High School Problem.

"We have a girl's high school, brand new, costing a great deal of money, located in a place so remote and inaccessible that one almost needs a guide to find it. People are taking their daughters away from it, which was to be expected. Only those in its immediate vicinity are going to patronize it. For their purposes it is fine. For the balance of the city it is a grotesque impossibility. Its enrollment is shrinking and will doubtless keep on shrinking—as a high school.

"Our new boys' high school is but little better, as to location, and its enrollment is likely to drop off, and continue dropping off, for the same reason.

"Mr. Ragsdale is decorating the city with cards, dodgers, posters, and circulars, proclaiming his great ability to give us a 'business administration.'

"We have recently been furnished a demonstration of his 'business administration' as chairman of the finance committee of the Fulton county commissioners.

"He succeeded so well in that capacity that Fulton county, the largest and richest in the entire southeast, is virtually in the humiliating position of a bankrupt business in the hands of a committee of its creditors.

Status of County Finance.

"The clearing house banks, I am reliably informed, are sitting in judgment upon every expenditure made and every check drawn by Fulton county, (outside of actual operating expenses), in an effort to drag this great and rich county out of the morass of debt into which it was plunged by Mr. Ragsdale and his esteemed colleagues of the county board, with whom he says the city must maintain relations of 'friendship and cooperation.' (In other words, if the city, which furnishes the population and revenue, expects to get any consideration at the hands of this august body, it must approach them respectfully, with its hat in its hand, bowing and scraping, mealy-mouthed and watery-eyed).

"No wonder 'Uncle Ike' resigned from the county board. He would be better off politically, and the county would be better off financially, if he had resigned the same day he took his seat.

"Mr. Gordon's sudden reappearance in our fair city, and his sudden reentrance upon the political stage thereof, are somewhat bewildering.

"If memory serves correctly, he recently resigned the office of alderman to which the people had elected him, and sold the business his fellow citizens had prospered by their patronage, and shook the dust of Atlanta from his shoes, and rolled away to Miami to throw in his lot with that bright jewel of the tropics.

"We were under the impression that Mr. Gordon had found a better place to live, and a better place in which to do business, and a better field for politics or public service.

"But now it appears that the sand was too hot, the glare too dazzling, the mosquitoes too bloodthristy, the business outlook not so bright and the political pickings somewhat meager.

"So that Mr. Gordon is back in the city he deserted, among the people he abandoned, and celebrates his return by running for mayor.

"Operating in Miami with a nerve as bold as that, Mr. Gordon might have drained the Everglades and built a concrete bridge to Bimini."

SAM A. NUNN SPEAKS FOR GEORGE CARSWELL

Cartersville, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—That George H. Carswell already honored with the second highest office in the state as president of the Georgia senate, is eminently fit as a man and citizen for promotion to the office of governor and that his entire public record qualifies him well to serve in that capacity, were among the assertions here this afternoon of Sam A. Nunn, of Perry, Ga., Mr. Carswell's campaign manager.

"I feel that I have been given exceptional opportunity here today to say of Mr. Carswell some things that he could not speak of himself," Mr. Nunn told his audience. "I speak in the character of his campaign manager, but I ask that you believe me when I tell you these words are the words of an old friend, of one who has known Mr. Carswell long and intimately and who knows him under stress and fair weather.

"No better authority upon the character of a man could be found than the opinion of his homefolks. They know him best of all. Mr. Carswell's campaign really began with a meeting in his home town. It was a rousing meeting. Mr. Carswell spoke a few minutes, in a sort of dedication before his homefolks to the high purposes of his campaign. The ovation they gave him when he finished was wonderful. The love and esteem in which every man, woman and child holds him reveals the kind of man he is.

"It is remarkable that Mr. Carswell's political opponents have been compelled to admit by their silence the lack of anything to criticize in his record. The only charge that has been uttered against his is that he burned some ballot boxes.

"That charge, of course, is easy to answer. The answer is that it is untrue. I have here several affidavits from members of the democratic executive committee of Wilkinson county in 1918, at the time of the Vinson-Watson race for congress in that district, when the alleged burning of votes took place. Let me quote from one of them, or as many more as you like. I have here the affidavit of J. H. Pennington, sworn to before N. H. Bacon, notary public in Wilkinson county, August 17, 1926.

"Mr. Pennington swears, after preliminaries, "I took part in the consolidation of the returns at Irwinton, Ga., on the next day after the election. After we had consolidated all the returns, some member of the committee asked what we would do with the ballots and election papers. Someone suggested that it had been a custom for several years to burn them, we destroyed these papers in the same manner. This was done by the executive committee without being influenced by anybody."

UPSHAW REVIEWS RECORD OF WORK

Fairburn, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—Declaring that he had tried to steer clear of personalities during his four campaigns, Congressman W. D. Upshaw brought his race for reelection to Campbell county this afternoon with an address here which was listened to by a large crowd.

Mr. Upshaw began his speech by paying tribute to the people of Campbell county who he said "had given him an increased majority at each election."

"I have tried to steer clear of personalities during my four campaigns," he declared, "and have never engaged in personal mud-slinging. I actually made six speeches in Douglas county last week without even mentioning the name of either of my opponents, but such flagrant charges against my efficiency have been made by both of my opponents on Campbell county soil that it is difficult to proceed with answering these specific charges. For instance, right here in Fairburn Mr. Steele last March began his campaign by declaring, 'Upshaw has done nothing but ride his hobby of prohibition oratory to the neglect of all other official duties to his constituents.'

"Now that statement is either true or untrue, and nobody knew that was untrue better than Hon. Laurence Camp who introduced Mr. Steele that day, for at my coming-out party, in my second campaign, Mr. Camp arose and said: 'I am for Mr. Upshaw's reelection because of his prompt and efficient attention to business.'

"I call you to witness," said Mr. Upshaw, "that both of my opponents have continued to make these charges in face of the fact that all over the district I have continued to ask every crowd I have addressed for a show of hands from those who have come to me for service, either by letter or in person, and failed to receive it. Many hundreds of people here in Campbell county are testifying every day to their neighbors that they have come to me for every conceivable phase of official service and have received that service with satisfactory promptness and efficiency.

"My opponents have, also, continued to charge that I have never raised my voice for farm relief legislation. In refutation of that charge I hold in my hands the copy of the Farmers' National Magazine, showing my picture as one of the twelve on their honor-roll, selected out of 435 members—an honor roll, I remind you, of those who have been counted leaders in agricultural legislation. But, better than that—we are honored this afternon with the presence of Campbell county's first citizen—indeed, one of the first citizens of Georgia and the nation, Charles S. Barrett, first and only president of the Farmers' National union, who testifies, that he has told me many times, that he is absolutely satisfied concerning my attitude and activities on farm legislation.

"Mr. Barrett not only gives me this high testimony, as he smilingly nods approval now, but he testifies again to the truth of the introduction, which he gave me at the big Tom Watson rally at Union City, in these actual words: 'Ladies and gentlemen, I introduce to you the hardest working congressman in Washington, W. D. Upshaw.'"

Reviews Record.

Congressman Upshaw reviewed briefly his line of official activities in Washington, answering a number of charges of his opponents, and showing the telegram from the clerk of the house of representatives, telling of five pension bills that he had introduced and passed through both branches of congress, besides several claim bills that have actually been paid to the beneficiaries in Georgia.

"Before such evidence from the clerk of the house of representatives it is as wicked as it is foolish for any opponent to make the statement and continue to make it that I have passed only one pension bill. It is only a type of the general misrepresentation that has been hurled at me by both of my opponents until the people are growing more and more disgusted every day because of such methods of campaigning. I am proudly conscious that I have never misrepresented an opponent in my life, and God helping me, I never will."

Before Mr. Upshaw spoke, E. M. McGee, for many years secretary of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, made a brief speech telling how he had spent the greater part of his time in Washington for several years and found that Mr. Upshaw was always on the job, exerting his influence among his colleagues.

Congressman Upshaw was introduced by Dr. M. D. Collins, for several years county school superintendent who declared among other things "I am for Will D. Upshaw's reelection, first of all, because of what he is; second, because of what he does, and third, because of what he stands for. Since he has been in congress I have written him more than 3,000 letters in behalf of disabled soldiers and many other people who needed official help, and he has answered letters, and performed duties with a remarkable promptness and success."

Griffin Citizens Indorse Gordon In Mayor's Race

Citizens of Griffin, Ga., the former home of R. A. (Bob) Gordon, candidate for Mayor of Atlanta, sent to his campaign headquarters Saturday an indorsement signed by the judge of the superior court, several former mayors of Griffin, bankers, merchants and other business men. The statement which testified to Mr. Gordon's standing while a resident of Griffin as a young man, more than 20 years ago, follows:

"We, the undersigned citizens of Griffin, Ga., take pleasure in certifying to the high moral character and business ability of Robert A. Gordon, of Atlanta.

"Mr. Gordon was born and reared in this community, and engaged in business in Griffin for many years before moving to Atlanta, and he always enjoyed and deserved the confidence and esteem of the people of this section. Bob, as he was affectionately known to his friends and associates here, was whole-souled, big hearted, and always ready to help those more unfortunate than himself. Since his leaving Griffin, we have observed his business career with interest, and we can recommend him to the voters of Atlanta with the assurance that he will fill the high position he seeks with credit to himself and honor to the great city of Atlanta."

Monroe Crop Cut.

Forsyth, Ga., August 28.—(Special.—With an increase in acreage, but due to damage by pests, the total yield of cotton in Monroe is expected to run 1,000 bales less than last year when 4,500 bales were grown. Farmers have been hard hit for six years. Other crops are fair.

Sims Presents Platform In Race for Congress

Declaring that he is the only candidate with a plank in his platform opposing the world court and against contributing to the support of the same, Mayor Walter A. Sims, a candidate for congress from the fifth congressional district, issued a statement to The Constitution Saturday in which he says he believes the people of the district will refuse to elect to office any candidate who will not work for constructive legislation that will directly benefit the district.

"I am well pleased with my status in this race," said Mr. Sims, "and with reports that I am receiving daily from the four outside counties. After covering these counties during the past week, I am confident of results. The people of the fifth congressional district are greatly interested in keeping America free from any foreign entanglements, and out of the world court. I am the only candidate who has a plank in his platform opposing the world court and against contributing to the support of same, although one of my opponents is trying at this late hour, to get on the band wagon. People of this district are also interested in farm relief which I have always advocated so strongly in every one of my addresses. Unless the farmer can secure higher prices for the products he raises and markets, and the surplus crops can be taken care of, he will not get any relief.

"I am also in favor of congress appropriating sufficient funds to aid the farmer in eliminating obnoxious weevils, fleas and insects that are devastating his crops.

"I favor a bill permitting civil service employees to retire on a pension after 30 years service. This pension fund is being created by the employees who contribute 3 1-2 per cent of their salaries to the fund.

Labor Regulation.

"Labor as well as everyone else is interested in conserving the nation's greatest asset, namely, the people. I have always favored all just laws looking to the welfare of the children that are employed, in factories and sweatshops. No one, however, should attempt, and I know of no effort to do so, to regulate farm labor and household domestic service and although some politicians are having it appear that this is so. I am not in favor of this sort of regulation, neither is organized labor.

"My opponents are both devoting most of their time and energy to a discussion of prohibition. If there was anything settled by a constitutional amendment, the 18th amendment settled it. If not, what amendment or additional legislation would either of my opponents propose? I am, however, in favor of enforcing the present law and appeal to the people to respect and obey it.

"The south, and especially Georgia, is destined to be more densly populated in the next decade, since the people in the colder nothern regions are seeking a milder climate in which to live. Therefore, we should set about at once and make ample provisions for all federal buildings, extension of road improvements, and vocational training in order that this influx of population may be properly cared for.

Aid to Industries.

"The possibilities of the natural resources of our state are abundant. Every possible aid should be extended to induce industries to come here and help us develop these resources, and my record in the past as mayor of Atlanta, in bringing new industries to this section, should, I believe, and will commend itself to the thinking people of this district. I do not claim credit for all the improvements that have been made in Atlanta during my tenure of office. I do claim, however, to have had a part in bringing them about, and in the past six months the city of Atlanta, Chamber of Commerce and the industrial bureau of the same organization, in cooperation with the laboring and business people, have brought more than 70 new industrial organizations here.

"Up until a few years ago the federal government was supported by what is known as an indirect tax system. That is, the collection of duties on imports and exports and such other indirect methods were sufficient for the support of the government. During the world war many additional bureaus and employees were necessary, and as a result an income tax was levied upon the people. While I favor obtaining sufficient revenue to properly operate the government, I am in favor of reducing as rapidly as possible and finally repealing entirely, the income tax.

"I strongly favor foreign nations paying their respective debts to the American people. Give them time but insist that they pay. If it is right for an individual to pay his debts, it is no more than right to expect a group of people forming a nation to pay their debts.

"No one is more interested in securing for the disabled veteran than I am, everything to which he is justly entitled. Additional hospitalization is absolutely necessary. More attention should be given to reclaiming the wounded and afflicted soldiers.

"My record as mayor of Atlanta, I believe, I can modestly state, is one of continued progress and advancement. More improvements of every kind have been made in Atlanta in the past four years than any other period. I have gone forth over the country at my own expense, advertising the advantages Atlanta offers as a manufacturing and distributing center. The citizens of the fifth congressional district are in close touch with the progress and development of Atlanta. They are to a large extent familiar with my connection with same, and I invite comparison of the records of my opponents as to their achievements.

"As representative in congress I shall ever strive to render the people of the district the same faithful, constructive and conscientious service that I have rendered as mayor of Atlanta during the past four years."

Women Campaigners For Upshaw Guests At Friday Reception

The woman's division of the Upshaw campaign committee entertained the chairman, Mrs. Marvin Williams, and the secretary, Mrs. Amelia Woodall, and their associate members at an informal reception Friday night at the Upshaw campaign headquarters on the second floor of the Kimball House.

A musical program was rendered by several well known local musicians, after which reports were read from committees working in various sections of the district.

The feature address of the meeting was given by Mrs. W. L. Reeves, president of the McLinden Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Congressman Upshaw, after a day of speaking in Rockdale county today, gave a short talk.

A telegram was read from the chairman of the Upshaw campaign committee of Rockdale county, which said: "Upshaw gaining daily in Rockdale, believe he will carry whole district."

One from Dr. M. B. Collins, Fairburn, said: "Campbell county's majority for Upshaw increasing."

Another from Mrs. J. J. Kirby, chairman woman's division, Douglas county, which was accompanied by a long list of names, said: "Douglas county getting stronger every day for Upshaw."

Still another, from Tom Giles, declared: "Douglas county will give Upshaw good majority."

25 Killed in Hurricane, Red Cross Announces

WAR DEPARTMENT AIDS LOUISIANA STORM VICTIMS

Entire Crew of Point Au Chine Fishing Camp Is Wiped Out by Swirling Waters.

SIX OTHER PERSONS BELIEVED DROWNED

Body of Mrs. Theis Recovered and Searching Parties Seek Other Members of Tugboat Crew.

Washington, August 28.—(AP)—Twenty-five persons are dead as the result of a hurricane which hit Houma, La., the American Red Cross headquarters here was advised tonight, by P. E. Seidler, representative in that vicinity, who appealed for aid.

Grover Crane, a disaster relief expert, has been ordered by the organization to proceed from Tennessee to the stricken area and the war department has authorized the use of government blankets and cots to be sent by truck from New Orleans.

William P. Simpson, chairman of the New Orleans chapter of the Red Cross in a telephone message to headquarters here, urged immediate relief measures.

LOUISIANA STORM TOLL INCREASES.

New Orleans, August 28.—(AP)—Seventeen persons were known to be dead tonight from the tropical storm which swooped up through southern Louisiana Wednesday night from the Gulf of Mexico.

The entire crew of the Point Au Chine fishing camp was drowned when the swirling waters of the Gulf of Mexico rushed upward over the bayou indented marshlands, driven by the gale and abetted by the rushing rains. Four bodies, three creoles and one Indian, were found on the prairie lands near Montegut and seven others were discovered by a naval seaplane circling over the marshlands late this afternoon. Among the dead were said to have been Claude and Charles Dupont, of Houma.

Six Believed Drowned.

Six others were believed to have been drowned when the tugboat Patton was lost in the Mississippi near Convent, La. The body of Mrs George Theis, wife of the captain of the tug, was recovered and searching parties were endeavoring to find the bodies of the other members of the crew and her husband.

The parties for which the seaplane was searching throughout the day, a group of prominent residents of Thibodeaux, including the entire family of Fredie Daigle, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Beattie, Ava Tabor, Mrs. L. C. Tabor and C. Preston Pugh, returned to Thibodeaux after having been lost in the marshes of lower Terrebonne since Thursday.

The bodies of the fishing crew were found by a seaplane, piloted by Julius Dupont, a former football star of Louisiana State university, and a brother of the two missing Duponts.

Fought for Lives.

The four bodies found on the prairie indicated that the men had made a desperate struggle for their lives. The fishing camp to which they had repaired in seeking safety, however, was shattered by the wind, only a few sacks being found on the spot by the rescue party.

Great Horse Show To Be Held in Fall At City Auditorium

POLITICAL FEVER JUMPS AS RACERS ARGUE FOR VOTES

Congressional Candidates All Voice Confidence in Primary Result—Heated Charges Freely Made.

Political temperature of the fifth congressional district and Atlanta mounted Saturday as races grew under prolonged hammering of 22 candidates for various plums to be picked in the state and city primaries set respectively for Septembr 8 and 22. The meeting at which the warming up was noticeable took place at a barbecue at Mozeley park in the seventh ward, which was sponsored by the seventh ward delegation in city council.

Alderman W. Guy Dobbs, presided and his colleagues, Councilman Wylie Moore and J. T. Osburn, occupied places on the rostrum.

Probably the most interesting phase of the speaking was that in which seekers of the congressional toga from the fifth district bared the records of their opponents and lauded their own qualifications for the post.

All three of the candidates prophesied victory—and of all they said only one thing is sure, two of them will be disappointed on September 8, the date of the primary, for the constitution provides that only one representative shall be sent to Washington from this district.

Upshaw vs. Sims.

The first of the trio to mount the rostrum was the incumbent, William D. Upshaw. He unfolded for public inspection his record of the past seven years and declared that the reason he has not been able to accomplish more for his people is that he was a democrat during a republican administration. Sharp criticism of the attack which has been launched against him by Walter A. Sims, candidate for the same post, was contained in portions of his address, and he charged that the congressional information bureau which furnished his record to Sims was "unreliable."

Mr. Sims was the next to mount the platform in a bid for votes from the fifth district, and he mercilessly assailed the records of Upshaw and J. Leslie Steele, his opponents. The speaker poked fun at a bill which he credited to the congressman and which provided for the establishment of a motion picture censor board and that after serving two years those composing the board might retire on half pay.

"Mr. Steele and Mr. Upshaw have attempted to trade and barter the office of congressman and prevent you people from electing who you want for the place," Mr. Sims said. "This is borne out by publication of a letter from the congressman to Steele in which Upshaw said he would not oppose Steele. Upshaw and Steele have formed a coalition to pass the job down around among themselves and a vote for either one of these

Event To Rival Annual Grand Opera Season in Social Brilliance and Enthusiasm.

EQUINE BEAUTIES OF NATION COMING

Most-Famed Stables To Send Their 'Flowing Gold," Sensational Gelding, To Be Shown.

A magnificent horse show, which will challenge the brilliance and importance of grand opera as a social event, and rival excellence of anything of its kind ever attempted in Atlanta, will be staged here in the fall at the municipal auditorium, it was announced Saturday. The announcement was made by Frank Adair, P. C. McDuffie and Colonel W. C. Kendrick, who are the directing powers in the enterprise and who have been largely responsible for the success of past horse shows in Atlanta.

The show will last for several days, according to the committee on arrangements, which announced that the date of opening would be some time in October, when the elaborate preparations for the event have been completed and every detail arranged to insure its success.

In addition to the horse show program, local clubs are planning a round of social activity to last throughout its duration. Society of the whole south, as well as those interested in the exhibition of some of the country's finest horses alone, will be represented in Atlanta during the show.

To Show Famous Gelding.

Fine animals from the most famous stables in the United States will be entered in the show. Arrangements already have been made to show the sensational addition to Mr. Adair's stables—Flowing Gold. This chestnut gelding, purchased early this year by Mr. Adair, has proven to be one of the most sensational saddle horse performers in America today. He won the grand championship at the Ohio horse show at Carthage, Ohio, and is now being shown on the grand circuit in Kentucky. Flowing Gold is considered a likely contender for the grand championship at the state fair at Louisville this year.

Efforts will be made to complete all arrangements for the horse show early in October in order that owners in the southern circuit will show in

MEXICO HELPING ENEMIES, ASSERTS NICARAGUAN NOTE

Government Itself Charged With Financing and Supporting Filibustering Expedition.

AMERICAN CRUISER APPEARS ON SCENE

Reaches Bluefields, Lands Marines and Declares It Neutral Zone; Mexico Denies Responsibility.

NICARAGUAN PRESIDENT RECEIVES U. S. MESSAGE.

Managua, Nicaragua, August 28. The American charge d'affaires, Lawrence Dennis, delivered a communication from the department of state to President Chamorror this afternoon. The communication is described as "highly important."

Managua, Nicaragua, August 28.—(AP)—The Nicaraguan government has sent a note to Mexico declaring it has irrefutable evidence that Mexican authorities equipped, armed and manned with men in Mexico's military service an auxiliary ship of the Mexican navy, the Concon, which sailed from Salina Cruz on August 17 on a filibustering expedition to Nicaragua.

The note, which is signed by Foreign Minister Navas, says the expedition was arranged by Nicaraguan exiles and financed and supported by the Mexican government. It declares such action manifestly violates the principles which govern civilized nations and which Mexico has repeatedly proclaimed as a fundamental principle of its international policy.

A copy of the note was sent to the League of Nations and all foreign diplomatic and consular officials in Nicaragua. The government in sending the protest to the League of Nations said it desired to call the attnetion of the world to the alleged illegal acts of Mexico. It is reserving the right to make claims in the future against Mexico.

The United States cruiser Galveston has arrived at Bluefields and landed marines, declaring Bluefields a neutral zone. The inhabitants of the city were greatly relieved, as an attack by revoultionists had been expected.

FLORIDA SENATOR TO ASK CONGRESS TO GIVE UP COURT

Trammell, Democrat, Who Once Voted for Ratification, Wants To Withdraw From Body.

GOODING REGRETS FORMER VOTE

European Developments and France's Attitude on Debts Cause Change of Solons' Attitude.

Washington, August 28.—(AP)—Withdrawal of the senate's ratification of the world court will be proposed at the coming session of congress by Senator Trammell, democrat, Florida, one of those who voted for the resolution of ratification.

The Florida senator said today he had decided to make such a proposal because of developments in Europe, where an international conference soon is to convene under the auspices of the League of Nations to discuss the acceptability of the reservations by which senate ratification of the court protocol was qualified.

Recently Senator Gooding, republican, Idaho, announced that although he had supported the court, he now opposed it because of changed conditions resulting from the French attitude toward the war debts. Senator Trammell said he knew of several other senators who likewise had come to regret their support of the court, and would vote for withdrawal, but he named none of them.

Makes No Prediction.

Neither did Senator Trammell attempt to assess the full effect of the campaign waged by the court's opponents since ratification, or to predict whether a resolution of withdrawal would carry. The senate accepted the court, 76 to 17, or 14 more than the required two-thirds. Senators are in disagreement whether a simple majority, or a two-thirds vote would be required to overthrow the action already taken.

At the time the vote of ratification was taken, Chairman Borah, of the foreign relations committee, and other of the group of irreconcilables opposing the court, gave notice that the issue was not yet decided. They since have made good their threat to carry their fight to the country in a far-flung campaign in the newspapers and on the stump.

When Senator Trammell introduces the resolutions of withdrawal made public by him today it will go to Senator Borah's committee, a majority of whose members are opposed to the court. Presumably the first test of strength would come on the floor itself, should an attempt be made to get the proposal up for action.

Only Five Have Agreed.

Thus far only five small nations have agreed to the senate reservations, and more than a score of others who have membership in the court, including all the great powers, are withholding a decision pending outcome of the conference to be held at Geneva. In his resolution Senator Trammell said that "it is now deemed advisable to rescind" the senate ratification, since "the powers signatory to the protocol have not indicated their acceptance of the reservations and understandings" upon which ratification was based.

The resolution would direct the president to "withdraw all notes and communications" addressed to the nations holding membership in the court. This would cancel the circular note sent out by the state department setting forth the conditions of American adherence, and would leave the United States just where it was before American membership first was proposed.

Brewster Announces Plans To Wed Corliss in Mexico

:: "ENGAGED" TO MACON GIRL 6 YEARS ::

Miss Corliss Palmer, formerly of Macon, Ga., photographed in a white wig sometimes worn with formal dress in Europe.

Los Angeles, August 28.—(AP)—The Times says Eugene V. Brewster, wealthy film magazine publisher, expects to obtain a Mexican divorce from Eleanor Brewster, of New York, the day before Thanksgiving and to marry Corliss Palmer, formerly of Macon, Ga., whose entry into motion pictures he sponsored, within 24 hours afterward.

"Miss Palmer and myself have been engaged for six years and during that time we have sought constantly to find a place where we could legally set aside the obstructions put in the way of my divorce by Mrs. Brewster," the Times quotes Brewster. "At last we have found it and we will be married immediately after the divorce is secured."

The publisher disclosed that the state of Sonora in Mexico has been chosen for the projected divorce suit but refused to name the town. The complaint probably will charge that the couple has not lived together for more than five years. Brewster, it is said, will establisl residence in the Mexican state.

The interview was given by Brewster as he painted the second story porch of an out-of-town retreat which he occupies under an assumed name. He said the house affords a place to work and rest undisturbed. Miss Palmer lives in Hollywood with her mother and other children of the family, who recently arrived here to be with the former beauty contest winner.

A series of court actions and disputes have marked the Brewster marital history since Miss Palmer won a beauty contest held by Brewster's magazine.

Last spring Mrs. Brewster won an uncontested suit against Miss Palmer for $200,000 for alienation of the affections of Brewster. Since then court actions have been devoted to the attempt to collect the judgment.

TEXAS FLEA DOES HEAVY DAMAGE ALL OVER STATE

Constitution's Reports Indicate Total Crop Will Be Less Than Last Year.

PRICE PER POUND CONSIDERABLY OFF

All Crops, Except Cotton, Reported as Fine; Big Grain Yield Has Been Harvested.

That the cotton crop in Georgia this year has been cut considerably and the yield will be less than that of last year, is indicated in a survey of farm conditions made by The Constitution. Correspondents from all sections of the state report that heavy damage has been done to the crop, principally by the Texas or hopper flea. No section of the state appears to be entirely free of this new pest.

A singular thing in connection with the reports is that damage by boll weevils this year has been negligible. No correspondent reported the damage by weevils as being serious, while a number of counties reported that the weevil had not appeared at all. Some sections have been damaged by continuous rains, the reports show. The price paid is running from 5 to 7 cents per pound under 1925 prices, the price this year being around 17 cents compared with 22 to 24 last year.

The cotton resume indicates that the total number of bales grown in Georgia this year will be considerably less than in 1925 when 1,102,000 bales were grown—the first time the million mark has been reached since the advent of the boll weevil about seven years ago.

Some counties report the damage from pests as high as 50 per cent, although in most instances it was said that the acreage had been greatly increased. A saving grace of the situation appears to be that the crop this year was grown at the minimum cost, the farmers running on a close margin.

Other Crops Fine.

Singularly, while the survey shows the cotton crop is "off," it also shows that all other crops are fine. Practically every section of the state reports that the finest grain crop ever grown in the state has been harvested, while a similar fine crop is reported on corn. There has been a luxuriant growth of all crops this year, the survey indicates.

Due to the short cotton crop, it is indicated the farmers will not clear much money this year, but it is stated there is a feeling of optimism prevailing among the farmers.

With south Georgia marketing the best tobacco crop in its history and with all food and feed crops yielding abundantly, it is pointed out that the Georgia farmer is in good shape, notwithstanding the fact there appears to have been an overproduction of peaches and melons this year.

A resume of The Constitution's state-wide cotton report follows:

SOUTH GEORGIA CROP DAMAGED.

Macon, Ga., August 28.—(Special.) That the south and middle Georgia cotton crop has been badly damaged by pests, especially the flea, is revealed in reports compiled here. This insect, new to Georgia farmers, appears to have baffled all attempts to destroy him, before serious damage was done.

There is only slight damage reported from the boll weevil.

This section has flourishing crops of

GUNMAN IS SLAIN IN GAMING HOLD-UP

Robber Wanted in Two Cities Shot Down While Comrades Raid Gambling House.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution.)

Chicago, August 28.—Two policemen stepped into a cigar store at 641 West Madison street this evening, shot and killed the armed lookout of a robber band and locked his three companions in an underground gambling room with thirty-two patrons they had lined up.

The policemen were notified as they passed along the street that a stick-up was in progress in the gambling joint. As they dashed in the front entrance they met thelookout.

"Stick 'em up," he cried as he pointed a revolver at Detective Samuel Dessent. The latter, whose pistol was drawn, pulled the trigger and the bandit fell with his lung pierced.

Dessent and his partner, Detective John Calkins, then closed the trap door leading to the underground gambling hall and kept the 35 men in until more police arrived.

The dead man, according to his comrades, was John Waters, 30 years old. He was killed instantly by the policeman's bullet.

The other robbers were George Abbiatti, who boasted at the station that he was once chauffeur for Samoots Amaunata, West Side bootlegger who was killed last summer; Samuel Seppesani and George Brennan.

Louis Glaser, who conducts the basement place which was fully equipped with cards and dice tables and bookmaking supplies, stated that between $200 and $300 had been taken from the lined-up patrons before the robbers were aware of the fact that they were trapped.

RADIO-ELECTRICAL SPACE IN DEMAND

Comparatively Few Booths Unsold for Exposition at Auditorium During Week of Oct. 18.

Only a few more booths are yet to be taken in the radio-electrical exposition, which will be held at the city auditorium the week of October 18, Foster B. Steward, general manager, announced Saturday. This condition, in comparison with the sale of booths of last year, he said, indicates the enthusiasm of dealers in radio and electrical supplies in making the 1926 show the finest ever held in the south.

During the past week 23 booth spaces were sold, leaving only 24 spaces yet to be sold, said Mr. Steward. There were 32 booths taken during the first week of sale. Mr. Steward said that he expected the few remaining booths to be taken this week.

A list of dealers who contracted for booths during the past week follows:

French Battery company, 83 South Forsyth street; Serv-El corporation; Bona Allen building; Mellen Battery company, 239 Ivy street; Miller-Blankenship Electric company, 129-31 Peachtree street; Kelvinator Atlanta, Inc., 25 Houston street; H. C. Biglin, 138 Marietta street; Southern Lamp division, National Lamp Works, 540 Hurt building; Splitdorf Electrical company, Newark, N. J.; Edison Electric Applian. Co., Inc., 184 Spring street; Murphy company, 902 Georgia Savings bank; Magneto Service station, 520 Peachtree street; James K. Polk, Inc., 181 Whitehall street, and Fulton Electric company, 65 North Pryor.

FLORIDA AIRWAYS BUYS 3 PLANES

New Craft, To Carry Four Passengers, Go Into Atlanta-Tampa Mail Service.

Detroit, August 28.—Major Reed M. Chambers, president of the Florida Airways, Inc., Saturday announced the purchase of three airplanes from the Stinson Aircraft corporation, of Northville, Mich., to be used on his company's airline between Atlanta and Tampa, Fla.

The planes will be of the four passenger cabin type. They will be equipped with two hundred horsepower, air-cooled, Wright motors and fitted out

$3,000,000 PLANT AT SANDERSVILLE TO MAKE CEMENT

Large Tract of Land Bought Near City Upon Which Cement Will Be Manufactured.

Sandersville, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—Five hundred acres of land between Sandersville and Tennille were purchased this week for the establishment of a cement plant that will cost approximately $3,000,000, it is announced by the promoters.

The Georgia Portland Cement company is the name of the firm promoting the plant. The officers are J. L. Hankinson, president; John C. Hagler, vice president; J. M. Lyons, second vice president; J. C. McAuliffe, secretary, and H. M. Beall, treasurer. All of these men are Augusta citizens.

It is stated that the plant will turn out 3,000 to 5,000 barrels of cement a day and that there is enough material on the tract purchased to keep the plant running for 60 years. The lime rock, which will be utilized, is said to be abundant on the land purchased.

Heavy machinery has been purchased, the firm announces, and will be installed as rapidly as possible.

On account of the fact that there is such an immense demand for cement for all kinds of construction work, including the building of permanent roads, there is a steady demand for all that can be produced, and the product of the mill can be sold as rapidly as it can be turned out, it is stated.

The announcement of the cement plant to be erected at Sandersville is the second big industry to choose Georgia for a location this week. A big cotton mill to cost several million dollars, it was announced this week, will be erected at Gainesville.

It is also reported that announcement will soon be made that another plant, to cost several million dollars, will be built in Georgia.

'AID OR GET OUT,' SLEUTH IS TOLD IN CHOIR MYSTERY

Governor Moore of New Jersey Issues Instructions to Chief of Middlesex Detectives.

Somerville, N. J., August 28.—(AP)—Ferd A. David, chief of Middlesex county detectives and a center of controversy since State Senator Alexander Simpson assumed charge of the reopened Hall-Mills murder investigation as special deputy attorney general, received a new blow today when Francis Monaghan, assistant prosecutor of Middlesex county, said that David's attitude and statements were approved neither by him nor John A. Toolan, prosecutor.

David was on the Middlesex county detective staff four years ago when the bodies of the Rev. Edward W. Hall and his choir singer, Mrs. Eleanor Mills, were found in Decrusey's Lane near New Brunswick. He was active in the original investigation although the bodies were across the line in Somerset county.

Simpson charged David with changing his statements from time to time and last night asked Governor Moore to take action against the detective for "obstructing justice."

A missing gold brooch which has caused much discussion during the present inquiry was located yesterday. It was David's inability to account for the whereabouts of the brooch that was directly responsible for Simpson appealing to Governor Moore.

The governor communicated with Mr. Monaghan and requested that David either co-operate with Simpson or get out of office.

Diary Tells of Girl's Love For Youth Accused of Death

:: LOVER'S IMAGINATION AIDS HIS WOOING ::

Cleveland, August 28.—(AP)—The diary of Dorothy Elizabeth Kirk, revealed today, told of her love and affection for Ermil "Frenchy" Balanescu, 21-year-old medical student, who is accused of manslaughter in connection with the mysterious death of the girl last Sunday.

When arraigned in police court today, Balanescu entered a plea of not guilty and his bond was fixed at $3,000. The case was continued until September 6. He is charged with administering drugs to her which caused death.

Ermil's part in the love tragedy was brought out when detectives found Dorothy's diary and letters which Balanescu had sent to her.

Reference to Balanescu is first contained in a few lines in the diary under date of March 4.

Day by day thereafter, the diary shows, her love increased for him, though they quarreled at times and often she found it hard to understand his moods.

Dorothy often displayed pride in her lover in her references to his commissions as medical delegate to different parts of the country and the researches in science which he is undertaking—all just imagination in the mind of Balanescu, in the detectives opinion.

Detectives compared these references to "Frenchy's" letters. In the letters Ermil sought to woo the girl by pretending he was a medical student employed by a downtown hospital and told of trips prominent physicians had sent him on.

He also, under cover of various noms de plume, including a "Dr. C. Wade," wrote the girl and told of incidents that were intended to swell her opinion of her lover, detectives say he has admitted.

ATLANTA SCHOOLS TO OPEN SEPT. 7

Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of Atlanta public schools, Saturday issued the following information and instructions relative to the opening of schools for the 1926-27 term:

The Atlanta public schools will open Tuesday, September 7 for the children. But the opening of school for the entire teaching force will be August 31, Tuesday next. All teachers assigned to particular schools will report at 9 a. m. to the school to which they have been assigned. All unassigned teachers will report to the Walker street building to Miss Mary W. Postell in charge of the elementary schools, and H. Reid Hunter, in charge of the high schools and junior highs.

The faculty of the Central Night school and Fulton Bag and Cotton Mill Night school will report to their respective principals at the school buildings Tuesday afternoon, at 5 o'clock, August 31 for organization.

The faculty of the Opportunity school will report at the Opportunity school building, 304 W. Mitchell street, at 9 a. m. Tuesday, August 31, and will continue in session during the week. All of the night school faculties will report at their respective places.

Students who are interested in night schools may enroll any afternoon next week between the hours of 5:30 and 8 o'clock at the respective night school locations, Central Night at 138 South Pryor street; Fulton Bag & Cotton Mill at the community house; Tech High Night school at Tech High school building. The various negro night schools will meet in their respective school buildings.

The faculties of all schools have been arranged and principals have been assigned. There have been a few changes in principalships this year. On account of the illness of Miss Laura Wood, principal of Lee Street school, Miss Rusha Wesley has been assigned acting principal of that school. Miss Lillie Wurm, former principal of Calhoun school, has been assigned principal of Moreland school on account of the illness of Mrs. O. I. Black. Miss Sally Long, former principal of Williams Street school, has been assigned principal of Calhoun school. Miss May Taylor, former principal of Walker street school, has been assigned as principal of the Williams Street school.

The splendid activities of R. R. Ritchie have resulted in working over practically all the school desks in the entire city and painting and retinting of the walls of many of the elementary and junior and senior high school buildings. Much valuable work has been done on the buildings and grounds, and the principals and teachers will find conditions very much improved.

Every effort has been made to arrange children in such a way that the smallest number of double sessions possible may be held. All indications point to a record making enrollment but the administration is taxing itself to care for the children of the city. Hundreds of teachers have availed themselves of the opportunity to study this summer and are coming back better prepared than ever during the history of the school system. The new teachers who have been selected are an exceptionally fine group. The increased salaries paid Atlanta teachers has made Atlanta teaching positions attractive to the best talent from all parts of the country. All indications point to a prosperous year in the school system.

A total of 30,842 white children already have been enrolled in Atlanta public schools for the 1926-27 term, it was announced Saturday from the office of M. E. Coleman, chief of the statistics bureau. This is a larger number than the grand total of all those registered for last year and registering continues at the rate of about 150 daily. If this is continued, a gain of more than 3,000 is expected, school officials announced.

WAR LORDS THREATEN RULE OF WU PEI FU

Pekin, August 28.—(AP)—Marshal Wu Pei Fu, overlord of several provinces of central China, by virtue of military power, is fighting today against a possible realignment of other war lords which threatens to overthrow him. A new partitioning of China appears possible by military chieftains who have divided China's provinces among themselves since the empire was overthrown in 1912.

Wu Pei Fu, who aided Marshal Chang Tso-Lin in overthrowing the Pekin government in April and recently led their combined forces against the Kuominchun, so-called national armies of that fallen power, is personally attempting to rally his troops far to the south to prevent the capture of Wuchang and Hankow, his Hupeh province capital. Chang Tso-Lin, formerly his enemy and more recently his ally, is doing nothing to aid Wu Pei Fu, nor is he continuing the pursuit of the Kuominchun, driven back from their base at Kalgan, near the Mongolian border.

Hard pressed by Cantonese forces dominated by bolshevist influence, as are the Kuominchun, Wu Pei Fu has appealed to the powerful Marshal Chuan-Feng, for aid. Sun, formerly a lieutenant of Wu, now controls five rich provinces for his own benefit and has announced his intention to hold his own without risking it by aiding Wu. In addition there have been intimations that Sun, if not actually friendly to the Cantonese government, is at least not hostile to it.

Haverty Company Opens Two Big New Branch Stores

New stores of Haverty company—upper photo shows the Fort Worth store and (inset) its manager, A. C. Branch. Below is the Little Rock store, soon to be opened, and the manager, E. V. Markham.

The Haverty Furniture company announces from its general office here the opening of two new stores, the Haverty Furniture Company of Fort Worth, which opened June 21, and the Haverty Furniture Company of Little Rock, which opened on August 28.

These two additional stores now bring the total of Haverty stores to fourteen, there being two in Atlanta, and one each in the following cities: Savannah, Charleston, Columbia, Asheville, Birmingham, Montgomery, Memphis, Little Rock, Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston and New Orleans.

The Haverty Furniture company started business in 1885 in a little store in Atlanta. The first year's business amounted to about $10,000. The total business of the Haverty stores in 1926 will run between five and a half and six millions of dollars.

The manager of the new Fort Worth store, A. C. Branch, has been connected with the Dallas store for the past eighteen years. E. V. Markham, manager of the Little Rock store, has been connected with the Haverty Furniture company of Memphis for the past 10 years, leaving the position of assistant manager at Memphis to take the position of manager at Little Rock.

The present plan of the Haverty organization looks toward the establishment of one of its stores in every important city in the south. The definite plan for the present is establishing six additional stores, or a total of twenty within the next two years.

A feature of this organization is that each manager in charge of a store is an interested partner in the business. It being a policy of the Haverty organization not to place a man in charge of a Haverty store unless he has been proven over a period of years and unless he is regarded by the general officers as being worthy of being associated as an interested stockholder.

The company has a policy of employing young men, preferably college men, putting them in training and developing them to the fullest extent of their abilities.

Women Escorts of Dry Agents Denied Expenses by McCarl

AMOUNTS OF TIPS AND FEES FIXED

Washington, August 28.—(AP)—The government will not pay for the expenses of women companions of prohibition "informers" gathering evidence, Comptroller General McCarl ruled today.

Horace H. Harden, of Denver, Col., claimed $25 for the expenses of a woman companion, asserting it was necessary that he be accompanied by a woman in order to gain admittance to a roadhouse he was investigating. McCarl refused the payment but approved an expense by Harden of $27.75 for the purchase of liquor and $2.05 in street car fares in accordance with Harden's agreement with prohibition officials.

WASHINGTON FIXES AMOUNTS OF FEES.

Washington, August 27.—(AP)—Amounts which may be expended for tips and "fees" for cleaning one's self or having one's clothes cleaned, are among the items listed in a comprehensive compendium of travel regulations being published for the benefit of those who travel at the government's expense.

This detailed pamphlet, now stirring the presses of the government printing office, measures 4x5 3-4 inches, and with its cover and index, comprises 58 pages. It is the work of the federal traffic board, assisted by representatives of all federal departments and establishments and is made authoritative in an executive order by President Coolidge.

Advance Orders Given.

In addition to giving specific advance instruction to potential authors of government expense accounts, it contains numerous definitions of related subjects, answering such questions as how much is a customary and reasonable fee? It is documented with rulings on various fine points by Comptroller General McCarl, the realistic official critic of expense accounts, and includes the new treasury order telling how to get traveling funds in advance by filing a bond "to indemnify the United States."

Tips to waiters—the book decrees—must not exceed 60 cents a day, while "fees" for bellboys and maids at hotels are limited to 30 cents a day. Telephone charges are taboo, but the traveler may bathe daily at a cost of 50 cents or less if a bath is not provided with his hoom.

Laundry must be held within $1.40 a week, but $1.25 additional may be spent for cleaning and pressing, "Fees" expended in foreign countries are to be regulated by what is "customary and reasonable." The phrase is defined as meaning not more than $1 a day.

How to Pay Porters.

Baggage porters at hotels, stations and residences may be given 15 cents for the first piece of luggage and 10 cents for the remainder. But those who carry the traveler's burden at landings and wharves are allowed 25 cents for each piece. Porters in chair and parlor cars are rated at 25 cents a trip, and in sleeping cars, at 25 cents for each 24 hours or fraction thereof.

Stewards on river, lake or bay vessels rank with sleeping car porters, as far as fees are concerned, but on ocean and coastwise steamers their services may be recompensed with a sum not exceeding 10 per cent of the minimum first class commercial passage rate. An allowance of $2 a trip is made for steamer chairs and $1 for rugs. Taxi fare is permissable, if necessary.

Under recent legislation, the per diem subsistence allowance is increased from $4 to $6 in the United States, and from $7 to 8 abroad. If the traveler in the United States prefers not to take the flat rate, his itemized account may show as much as $7 a day, instead of $5 as heretofore.

France Erects Church in Honor Of Joan D'Arc

Doremy, France, August 28.—(AP)—The Basilica, or church which Charles VII vowed he would build if Joan D'Arc succeeded in driving the English out of France as she promised more than 400 years ago, was consecrated here at the birthplace of the national heroine today.

King Charles VII failed to fulfill his promise but it was not forgotten and today the little village where the Lorraine girl was born is gay with bunting and flags for the ceremony which began with ecclesiastical pomp today. The church was 33 years in building. It is ornamented with frescoes of the chief events in the life of the peasant girl who has attained the dignity of a saint of the church of Rome. The main altar is considered a work of art worthy to rank with any in the nation's churches.

The church faces the little house on the hill where Joan D'Arc was born and overlooks the valley of the Meuse where American troops fought so well for the delivery of France from foreign occupation.

BANK CLEARINGS SHOW DECREASE

Bank clearings in the United States for the week ending August 26, as reported by telegraph to Bradstreet's Journal, New York, aggregated $8,267,772,000, against $8,626,187,000 last week and $7,892,802,000 in this week last year.

Canadian clearings agergated $232,393,000, against $245,082,000 last week and $208,786,000 in this week last year. Following are the returns for this week with percentages of changes shown:

Fight In Senate Seen Over Smith And Vare Seats

Washington, D. C., August 28.—(Special.)—Loss of as few as two or three republican seats in the senate may give the insurgents the balance of power and enable them through a combination with the democrats to muster a majority against the seating of successful senatorial candidates who are accused of expending excessive sums in their primary campaigns.

Such a situation is entirely possible, senators believe, provided it is held that a majority vote is sufficient to bar senators-elect whose offense is chiefly the magnitude of their campaign funds.

Republican leaders who are prepared to resist any efforts to prevent the seating of Frank L. Smith, republican nominee in Illinois, and William S. Vare, republican nominee in Pennsylvania, contend that a two-thirds vote will be necessary. In support of this theory they point to the provision of the federal constitution which says that 'each house may determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly conduct, and, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a member."

Lorimer Case Precedent.

While it is conceded that a two-thirds vote is required to "expel" the Lorimer case furnishes a precedent for declaring an election "invalid" by a majority vote. Senators who are already active in attacks upon the Smith and Vare campaigns insist that a majority vote will be sufficient and that the action can be taken when their certificates of election are first presented and before they are permitted to be sworn in.

The vote by which William Lorimer was expelled from the senate fell one short of two-thirds. A majority vote was ruled to be sufficient at that time under the language of the resolution invalidating his election. It provided "that corrupt methods and practices were employed in the election of William Lorimer to the senate of the United States from the state of Illinois, and his election was therefore invalid."

Mr. Lorimer had served through one full congress and part of a second before the action was taken.

In the Newberry case, the senator from Michigan resigned after two years of service, although he had been declared "duly elected and entitled to hold his seat" by the senate resolution adopted ten months before. Newberry's resignation was presented shortly after the 1922 election when insurgent republicans gained the balance of power in the senate and might have been able by a coalition with the democrats to reopen the Newberry case and put through by a majority vote a resolution holding the Michigan senator's election to be invalid.

Quick Action Forecast.

In the case heretofore investigations of charges made have not taken place until after a senator has taken his seat. This term with a complete record of primary campaign expenditures as already disclosed before the Reed senatorial committee, the right of Smith and Vare to their seats presumably would be challenged before they are permitted to take the oath.

The Lorimer case took place before the days of direct election of United States senators. Bribery of members of the Illinois legislature was charged. Use of money in a primary or election campaign was not involved.

The question of excessive expenditures in primary campaigns has been involved twice heretofore, in the Newberry case and that affecting the late Isaac Stephenson, senator from Wisconsin. The Stephenson, like the Lorimer case, was before the days of direct election of United States senators. Mr. Stephenson was elected senator by the Wisconsin legislature but was accused of spending excessive amounts in the advisory primary which was held six months earlier.

In both the Newberry and Stephenson cases, the senate held by majority vote that there had been no violation of law by the accused member and confirmed the validity of his election.

At the time of the Stephenson primary in 1908 there was no federal law nor state statute in Wisconsin limiting either primary or final campaign expenditures. Senator Newberry was indicted and convicted under the federal corrupt practices act of 1910, which limited senatorial candidates to a total expenditure of $10,000 in their primary and final campaigns. The supreme court of the United States subsequently set aside Senator Newberry's conviction on the ground that the law was unconstitutional insofar as it attempted to limit primary expenditures.

No Limit Set by Law.

Because of the supreme court's decision, congress in enacting the corrupt practices act of 1925 did not attempt to make it apply to primary campaigns. Hence, there was no law limiting expenditures in effect during the Smith and Vare senatorial contests. In seating these men the senate must decide whether or not the huge amounts expended were on their face excessive and whether the mere size of the campaign funds indicated corruption sufficient to invalidate the election. The propriety of the acceptance of contributions from public utility magnates by Mr. Smith also will be an element to be weighed in the Illinois case.

Amounts expended by both Smith and Vare were greatly in excess of the and Stephenson cases. When the sums which figured in the Newberry number of votes cast is taken into consideration, however, the amounts expended per vote were smaller. This fact will be used by the Smith and Vare adherents in support of their contention that there is no basis whatever for invalidating their elections, no evidence of any corrupt acts or of violations of any law having been presented. The large amounts expended, they argue, were necessary under the direct primary system in order to make an effective campaign. Not only is a reform measure, the direct primary, responsible for the situation, it is contended, but another reform, woman's suffrage, has doubled the size of the vote and consequeptly made it necessary to spend twice as much money on literature, postage and other similar items.

Vare Spent Most.

In the Stephenson case the amount expended was $107,793; in the Newberry case, $195,000; in the Smith primary campaign, $300,882, and in the Vare primary campaign $800,114.

Of the four, the Smith expenditures were the smallest per vote. Mr. Smith received about 600,000 votes and his expenditures averaged 50 cents per vote. Vare, with a vote of 596,928, spent an average of $1.34 per vote. Mr. Newberry, with only 114,963 votes, paid out an average of $1.69 per vote, while Stephenson, with 56,909 votes, expended $1.89 per vote.

In the Newberry case, the senate, while holding the Michigan senator to be entitled to his seat, condemned the use of excessive amounts of money in campaigns.

"The expenditure of such excessive sums in behalf of a candidate, either with or without his knowledge and consent," said the senate resolution, "being" contrary to sound public policy, harmful to the honor and dignity of the senate and dangerous to the perpetuity of a free government, such excessive expenditures are hereby condemned and disapproved."

The minority report in the Newberry case held that "illegal and corrupt practices were employed in the primary and that Truman H. Newberry violated the corrupt practices act and the primary act of the state of Michigan."

A minority report of the senatorial committee which investigated the Stephenson case declared that "the methods employed at the primary were corrupt; that they were against public epolicy; that they were demoralizing in character; that they directly contributed to destroy the purity and freedom of the election; that they violated the fundamental principles at the basis of our system of government, and that they are not to be tolerated by the senate of the United States as a means of procuring a seat in that body."

The Smith and Vare cases may be decided largely on partisan lines. T herepublicans will be in a much more precarious position in the senate than was true either at the time of the Newberry case or the Stephenson case. The democrats are likely to line up almost solidly against Smith and Vare. The insurgent republicans of the La Follette group also will do so. The outcome will depend on losses suffered by the regular republicans in the November election and also upon the attitude of a number of independent republicans outside the La Follette group.

Methodist Churches Meet To Further Move To Build Paine College Library

Upper Left, the late Dr. George Williams Walker, who founded Paine college and served 26 years as president. Upper right, boys' dormitory, Epworth Hall, built by the Epworth league workers of the Methodist church, south. Lower right, the girls' dormitory, known as Bennett hall, built by the Woman's Missionary society of the M. E. church, south, and lower left, Haygood Memorial hall, built in honor of Bishop Atticus G. Haygood, who wrote "Our Brother in Black."

At Wesley Memorial church this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock and under the direction of the M. E. Church, south, and the C. M. E. church, a unique meeting will be held in behalf of the movement to establish the George Williams Walker Library of Paine institute, Augusta.

Dr. George Williams Walker, son of a distinguished South Caroling family, consecrated himself to the movement to establish better relations between the white and negro races and he gave 26 years of his life to the presidency of Paine institute, established by him for the education of the negro. When he inaugurated this movement he had the hearty support of Bishop Hagood, which was continued by Bishop Candler up to the time of the death of Dr. Walker.

Under Dr. Walker's direction this institute has taught approximately 10,000 negro boys and girls and its graduates are scattered throughout the country. Of the thousands who have left the institution not one has been convicted of crime.

At this afternoon's meeting at Wesley Memorial church 50 Jubilee voices of three negro churches will sing melodies, and addresses will be made by Bishop R. E. Carter, of the C. M. E. church, and by Dr. R. L. Henry, of Augusta, and Bayne Gibson, of Atlanta, both members of the M. E. church, south. Dr. Marvin Williams will act as master of ceremonies and Rev. J. A. Martin, editor of Sunday School Literature, of Nashville, will also participate in the exercises.

Long before Dr. Booker T. Washington made his famous speech in Atlanta in 1895 upon interracial cooperation, Dr. George Williams Walker was working to educate the negro and to harmonize conditions between the races in the south. Coming from Wofford college, Spartanburg, S. C., to Paine college in 1882, just 17 years after Lee's surrender, sunny, cultured, representing the best blood and traditions in the south, in his 36th year, not a worn-out preacher but one whose life was to be made and spent in a new and most trying field, he took up for the Southern Methodist church and the two races where Bishop William Capers left off.

Although it was not a popular work at the time, this southern man became a missionary to the negro and headed the first and only school of its kind in the United States—where southern whites and blacks attempted to work out a serious problem through the church and the schoolroom.

After serving Paine college for more than a quarter of a century upon his death, white and black shed tears while Bishop Candler stated in his funeral oration: "It was left for George Williams Walker to bring together the white and black people in this southland."

It is in his honor that the two races propose to build a $75,000 memorial library at Paine college, Augusta, with which the name of Dr. Walker will ever be associated.

Tobacco Sales Nearing Close, Says Westbrook

Athens, Ga., August 28.—(Special.) The 1926 tobacco crop grown in Georgia will total 40,000,000 pounds, which will sell for a total of $9,750,000, according to Dr. E. C. Westbrook, tobacco specialist of the State College of Agriculture here.

"There have been 5,500,000 pounds sold this week," says Dr. Westbrook, "which brings the total sales this season to approximately 39,000,000 pounds, which has sold for $9,500,000. I estimate there will be 1,000,000 pounds more to sell.

Dr. Westbrook's estimates are regarded as authentic as his figures for the 1926 crop made for The Atlanta Constitution, barely missed the final report. He estimated the 1925 crop at 50,000,000 pounds for a total of $7,000,000, whereas the totals were 49,000,000 pounds with a total of $7,110,000.

Dr. Westbrook devotes all of his time to the tobacco district during the selling season and is in close touch with the situation. Tobacco has been profitable to the growers this year he states.

"Most all of the tobacco markets have closed this week, there remaining a few still open to clear up the sales next week," said Dr. Westbrook today.

"The 1926 crop has been profitable because the growers cut down the acreage and specialized on growing a fine grade of high-priced tobacco, rather than a large number of pounds which might sell for a low rate," he said.

MEXICAN BOYCOTT HURTS BUSINESS

Mexico City, August 28.—(AP)—The Calles government and the Catholic episcopate are still deadlocked over the question of the church laws and meanwhile business languishes more and more. The Catholic party is endeavoring to make the economic boycott, or buyers strike, more severe for there is a distinct increase in the number and variety of the propaganda leaflets being distributed in support of the boycott.

The government continues to arrest all men and women caught distributing these leaflets but nevertheless the distribution continues quite widespread.

Upon the surface everything seems tranquil but what is under the surface—if anything—only time can tell.

DEPARTMENT CLANS HIT BY CARSWELL

Statesboro, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—George H. Carswell, candidate for governor, addressed the voters of Bulloch county this afternoon at the courthouse in Statesboro. His address was well received.

A considerable part of his address was devoted to an appeal to the voters to destroy the political power of the machines operating through the various departments of the state government, with special emphasis given to the highway and agricultural departments.

His record as a friend of education in Georgia came in for part of his address. He attacked Mr. Holder for using his political power as head of the highway department, claiming that the allocation of imaginary highway mileage was held back by Mr. Holder as the whip to drive the 49 1-2 miles were to be allotted and that more than 100,000 Georgians had attended road meetings with the department in various counties in Georgia with the hope and expectation of receiving part of this mileage.

Mr. Carswell argued that the fair thing for Mr. Holder to have done was to resign his position as chairman and contested with the other candidates upon the merits of his cause saying that the people of Georgia had never yet been driven to vote for any man for governor by the promise of something that should be awarded upon the merits of every project.

The impression made by Mr. Carswell was favorable and it is conceded that he has a strong following in Bulloch.

Hangman Uses Hands To Break Neck of Victim

(Copyright, 1926, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Cracow, August 28.—A scene recalling the days of the Spanish inquisition and one of grisly torture was enacted yesterday at the hanging of a man named Jellinski for the murder of a young factory girl.

The condemned man was led to the public gallows screaming and swearing at the morbidly curious throng. Jellinski loudly refused the last rites of the church as the formally attired executioner, spatted, wearing white gloves, a cut-away coat and a white tie, passed the rope about his neck. The executioner's assistant, also attired like a diplomat, then pulled the trap, but one rope suddenly broke.

The immaculate executioner grasped the limp body of the man and broke Jellinski's neck with his own gloved hands as the hysterical, shrieking mob looked on.

When the gallows was dismantled, the mob rushed forward to get pieces of rope for souvenirs. The police dispersed the mob, saving the executioner and the gallows only with difficulty.

HEAT IN CHICAGO CAUSES 2 DEATHS

Chicago, August 28.—After more than a week's respite from high temperatures, the middle west is sweltering again under a new heat wave.

Chicago suffered today as the mercury climbed above the 90 mark, causing two deaths and several prostrations.

At Milwaukee, the hottest August 28 in 50 years was recorded, with the temperature at 93.

Temperatures ranging between 90 and 98 were reported from Missouri, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska and the southwest. In Iowa heat has caused one death and four prostrations within the past 24 hours.

NACOOCHEE INSTITUTE TO OPEN WEDNESDAY

Sautee, Ga., August 28.—(Special.) The 23d session of Nacoochee institute, the Presbyterian mountain mission school located at Sautee, will be opened with a special service in the newly-constructed auditorium-arbor, Wednesday morning, September 1, at 10 o'clock.

Rev. John K. Coit, for over 17 years superintendent of the institute, will preside at these exercises and introduce the new workers to the patrons and friends of the school who have been invited to attend.

Miss Aline Clayton, of Atlanta, will enter upon her 12th year of service as principal of the academic department of the school. Associated with her will be the following members of the faculty:

Eugene P. Mallory, professor of English and head of the boys' department; Miss Annie Cameron, of Atlanta, history and mathematics; Miss Alice Lennon, of Cooperstown, N. Y., assistant principal and instructor in high school, Bible and science; Miss Macie McGinn, of Charlotte, N. C., teacher in Latin.

In the lower grades will be Miss Anna Lee Jones, of Zanesville, Ohio, and Miss Mary Belle Taylor, teachers in junior high school; Miss Mabel Carson, of Commerce, fifth and sixth grades; Miss Grace Tyson, of Salisbury, N. C., third and fourth grades; Mrs. E. P. Mallary, primary and second grades.

Miss Evelyn Simpson will again be in charge of the institute library, a large part of which was saved from the recent fire which wiped out both high school and grammar school buildings and the science laboratory.

The school sessions of these grades will be held in the former boys' dormitory, Hodgson hall, while the boys have been moved into Yonah Lodge, the former girls' dormitory.

The boys' department will be of practically the same force as in former years, but the girls' department has been cut down to the number which may be housed in the various cottages and Hoyt home. The boys will be required to earn their tuition by work on the institute grounds. The girls have been admitted only after scholarships have been secured, it is stated.

Robert Bunyan Miller will be in charge of the industrial and farm work of the institute with especial supervision over the boys' labor. Mrs. L. A. Simpson will again be in charge of the kitchen and dining room, and will also take over the duties of house matron of Yonah Lodge.

Yonah Lodge has been remodeled somewhat during the past summer, a main feature of which is the large terrace built by W. L. Hillhouse, former industrial missionary of the Presbyterian church in the Belgian Congo.

Miss Martha Rhea Little will again be a member of the working force, with a desk in the administration office and having charge of the glee club and extension work.

Georgia Bankhead Highway To Seek Travel for Route

Athens, Ga., August 28.—(Special.) Committees have been named by the North Georgia Bankhead Highway association to promote travel over that section of the transcontinental highway through South Carolina and north Georgia. These committees will begin functioning at once and will put on an advertising campaign that will extend into the east, north and middle-west.

Appointment of these committees followed a meeting held here which was attended by representatives along the route from Anderson, S. C., to Decatur. C. C. Thomas, president of the association, in announcing the personnel of the committees, stated that the work allotted to each would be launched at once and that the advertising campaign would begin as soon as the folders, maps, etc., were off the press.

Following are the committees: Budget committee, M. J. Abney, Athens; Dr. W. I. Hailey, Hartwell, and C. M. Ferguson, Winder.

Routing and motorcade, Sam Bowers, Royston; G. D. Ross, Winder, and Judge W. L. Hodges, Hartwell.

Highway maintenance, A. N. Alford, Hartwell; W. H. Dyar, Royston, and H. Q. Sammon, Lawrenceville.

Publicity, Louie L. Morris, Hartwell; J. W. Barnett, Athens, W. A. Bradley, Winder.

To secure cooperation of Greenville, S. C., and cities north on Bankhead highway, J. A. Mitchell, M. M. Patterson and J. H. Anderson, Anderson, S. C.

"Cousin Fred" Leaves To Address Meeting On Cooperation Plan

"Cousin Fred" Houser, secretary of the Atlanta convention and tourist bureau, left Saturday for Buffalo, N. Y., to attend the convention of the International Association of Convention Bureaus. Mr. Houser, one of the founders of the association, will deliver an address before the convention on cooperation between convention bureaus and hotels and general public.

"Selling the Convention Bureau to Atlanta," the work undertaken this summer by officers and directors of the organization, will continue for several weeks. Addresses were delivered Friday before the Civitan club by President F. J. Paxon, William Candler and Secretary Houser, each showing how great a national advertisement is gained for Atlanta by showing hospitality and friendliness to the thousands of visitors, and how much "new money" is left by visitors to be distributed through local trade channels.

"Of every $10 spent in a hotel by a convention guest," said Mr. Candler, "perhaps a dollar stays with the hotel—for a little while. The rest goes immediately to the butcher, the baker, the grocer, the laundryman, the employees, the coal dealer, the electric light company—just as the dollars you earn go in various channels. The man who says conventions benefit nobody but the hotels hasn't stopped to think."

JUDGE HIGHSMITH PUSHES CAMPAIGN

Baxley, Ga., August 28.—(Special.) Judge J. P. Highsmith, of the Brunswick circuit, who is opposing Judge Alex W. Stephens for judge of the court of appeals, upon his return home this morning for a day, after several weeks' absence in other parts of the state, was greeted by a number of his friends.

Judge Highsmith expressed himself as highly pleased with his tour of the state and says he has been into 130 counties and expects to go into the remaining 20 within the next few days.

Textile Conference Held at Charlotte; W. J. Vereen Presides

Charlotte, N. C., August 28.—(AP)—Plans for the further development of the recently organized Cotton Textile institute, which is expected to lead the cotton manufacturing industry out of the present depression, were made here today at a conference of leading textile men of the south.

W. J. Vereen, of Moultrie, Ga., chairman of the institute's membership committee, presided.

Discussions of the conference related largely to the enrollment of spindles and the outlining of a campaign to add additional members to the institute.

Mr. Vereen declared that for success, the institute should include practically all of the nation's 32,000,000 spindles. In his report the chairman said 18,514,414 spindles were enrolled in the organization on August 26. This includes 10,295,880 spindles in the south, he said, while the others are in New England.

Among others attending the conference were James P. Gossett, of Wilmington, N. C., president of the American Cotton Manufacturers' association; George P. Harris, Atlanta, vice president of the American Cotton Manufacturers' association, and John A. Law, Spartanburg, S. C.

FLORIDA EDITOR, FORMER ATLANTAN, VISITS RELATIVES

M. E. Brewster, of Hastings, Fla., editor and manager of The Hastings Herald, and a former resident of Atlanta, was visiting here Saturday as a guest at the home of Police Lieutenant T. D. Shaw.

Mr. Brewster obtained his first knowledge of a newspaper when he completed his apprenticeship in the printing department of The Atlanta Constitution, 14 years ago. Since then he has risen rapidly in the profession until he now heads a thriving Florida newspaper.

Mrs. Shaw, hostess to the former Atlantan, is a cousin to Mr. Brewster's wife, who accompanied the editor on his visit here. After spending the day Saturday in Atlanta, Mr. and Mrs. Brewster planned to leave for Florida today.

WILL COME, IN TIME.

Elsewhere in today's Constitution is an admirable argument for the capitalization of motor revenues for the building of a complete system of paved highways in Georgia.

It is written by T. J. Cooper, of Sandersville, and is without political significance as applying to the present campaign for governor.

The fact is, the Georgia highway problem is not, and cannot properly, be made an issue of relativity in this campaign.

It should have been. It ought to be the ringing, virile, foremost and invincible issue in every county today from the coastal plains to the remote passes of the Blue Ridge. But it is not because the special session of the legislature in February-March of this year refused to submit to the people even the question of whether or not they wanted to issue state instead of county bonds for state highway paving, and whether or not they wanted a connected, coordinated system of highways instead of a patchwork of alternating paved and mud stretches as at present, and as there will be until a state-wide instead of a county unit system is adopted.

The argument of Mr. Cooper is the argument The Constitution has repeatedly and consistently made for years, and will continue to make until the people of Georgia sweep prejudices aside, adopt a sound and sensible system of business administration, and bore with augers instead of with gimlets, with less expense, less exhaustion, less tax upon resources, but with infinitely more beneficial results to all the people.

Every thinking man in Georgia knows that this state—the great Empire commonwealth of the southeast, with unsurpassed natural resources above and below the ground—is behind other states in the south, and other states in the union in relative wealth, in the proper development of her highways and her schools.

The plain, unvarnished facts as to paved road mileage, connected links, connected county seats, school expansion—including university and normal school expansions and maintenances—all disclose the backwardness of Georgia, and it is a poor friend of the state who takes the position that we should hide the facts and fool the outside public.

The best friend of Georgia is that citizen who sees the weak spot and tries to strengthen it, who sees the leak and tries to stop it.

According to the statistics of the United States department of commerce, the total Georgia revenues for 1925 exceeded $22,500,000—greater than those of any other state in the southeast. And yet there are less than six county seats, out of 161, connected with paved highways in Georgia, and less is appropriated in total to its system of higher educational institutions than any other state in the union.

And yet we are told to dismiss the thought, and speak only of Georgia's potential opportunities.

We have annual revenue sufficient from our motor taxes to capitalize a bond issue sufficient to complete within the next five or six years the entire system of paved highways as provided for in the assembly of 1921—that is to say, to pay the interest, provide the legal reserve as a sinking fund, and provide further a building surplus greater than we now have. Instead, under the whip of political prejudice, we have encouraged a system of county bonding that is based directly on ad valorem taxation, and as a result, with an actual funded indebtedness approaching that contemplated by the state, at rates of interest from 1 to 2 per cent higher, we have the obligations without the highways, and we have a disconnected county unit system that shames the state. There are more than 60 counties in Georgia whose digests will not legally meet local highway bond issues to carry out their required part of the program under the system now in operation. It is wrong. It is destructive. It is anything but progressive.

In an editorial the other day we stated frankly that it will be 1930 before we can get any benefits from a state-wide highway bond issue. It is true. And due to the failure of the special session of 1926 to submit a proposed amendment this year. Had this been submitted and approved the legislature of 1927 would have passed the enabling act, and in a year from today we would have had the bonds validated, sold and the funds working. But the failure put us at least four years behind, as any analyst of the situation will disclose, and took the issue out of the present campaign for governor. There is no sense or good purpose in stifling facts.

The state will come in time to a realization of the fact that only by adopting the modern method employed by progressive states, can she keep abreast of the time in the all-important work of highway construction and educational development.

"CHICKENS COME HOME."

Chickens have a way of coming home to roost. Try as we may to change their custom—for sometimes it is embarrassing—we cannot do it. That is a fitly applied illustration, too, for many things that the public cannot overlook. For instance, a year or so ago we referred editorially to the intolerable condition of the Atlanta-Macon highway between Barnesville and Forsyth.

At the time the editor of The Macon Telegraph was a member of the state highway board, and we recall very distinctly how he called us to account for commenting on the Barnesville-Forsyth road conditions. He waxed as eloquent as emphatic in its defense. He even declared that he had driven his own high-powered car over the stretch of road complained of at a rate of a mile a minute, and that it was so smooth and sweet that a glass full of water would not have lost a drop by the jostling had it been placed upon the intake to the radiator, or something of that sort.

Now comes the application of the story about the chickens coming home to roost, for in The Macon Telegraph of August 27, edited by Mr. Anderson, who made the "record run" in his own car a few months ago, and who then pawed the earth and challenged our reference to a situation that sorely needed repair, appears an editorial reference to this same Barnesville-Forsyth stretch that is something of a classic. It even tells of how a farmer has made a fortune for two years pulling cars out of the mud, and how he is unable to keep plow lines sufficient for his home use on account of the demand for tow cables. It tells of a family in a sedan "ditched," and brought within the shadow of death, and then laments at the complacency of Barnesville and Forsyth—difficult to understand in the face of such a condition.

Says Editor Anderson, who a few months ago compared this road favorably to the paved streets of Heaven, or something of the sort—

"That two cities should consent to be joined by a perilous strip of slippery red mud when a paved highway is in existence over almost the entire distance is something that passes the understanding. Explanations have been offered but they imply a selfishness so profound and a corrupt influence so potent that they seem quite incredible."

But there is a serious and a significant thought in the connection, and one that we have emphasized consistently for all these years—that is, the old philosophy that a chain is no stronger than its weakest link. Here is one of the leading highways in Georgia connecting two great cities. It is only a hundred miles in length. Much of it is paved. And yet, because of this weak link between Barnesville and Forsyth all of it is discounted—and with most travelers all of it is condemned. Again is accentuated the demand—the necessity for connected paved highways. And unless they are permanently paved they are not worth their upkeep as a rule.

ON THE WRONG SIDE.

According to official government figures just released, the aggregate value of imports to America for the seven months ending with July, 1926, was $2,640,861,376, as compared with $2,389,404,944 for the corresponding period of 1925.

The value of our exports during the seven months ending with July, 1926, was $2,576,292,379, as against $2,702,980,285 the corresponding period of 1925.

In other words, our trade balance is not only on the wrong side of the ledger, but is growing in an unfavorable manner.

It is needless to discuss the reasons. The high protective tariff that destroys international reciprocity is one. The lack of proper American cooperation with overseas nations is another.

We may discuss the "wisdom" of our republican tariff laws, and of our international policies from now until dooms day but nothing can destroy the lesson of cold, black, bleak figures.

We are on the wrong side of the trade situation and always will be until we change our policy to one of international cooperation rather than international obstruction. When we are forced to buy from other nations more than we sell then there is something wrong. It is an inexcusable situation.

THE TALLULAH ROUTE.

The Constitution has been officially advised that there will be a great celebration at Sylva or Franklin, N. C., on the 15th of September in commemoration of the completion, with concrete paving, of the North Carolina end of the Asheville-Franklin-Tallulah-Atlanta highway. It is said it will be perhaps the largest road meeting ever held in the south, and is being conducted under the official auspices of the Asheville Chamber of Commerce and various other road and trade organizations along the route from Atlanta to Asheville, including the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

It is understood large delegations will attend from Atlanta, Gainesville, Cornelia, Clarksville, Tallulah and Clayton and other points, and this is as it should be. Every effort ought to be made to push the completion of the Georgia end of this scenic highway as rapidly as possible. There is not much to be done, provided by coordination the state highway department would do the wise and businesslike thing and connect up the missing links. The road from Clarksville to Tallulah must be built and the Rabun county stretch must be completed. Work has been proceeding on this, slowly but with at least the gratification that it is among the contracts already let.

The Asheville-Franklin-Tallulah-Atlanta route is a beautiful mountain highway. The Tallulah section is gorgeous with its great falls, lakes and canyons—the most picturesque of Georgia's mountain scenery. The Habersham stretch is not only beautiful but interesting as traversing the great apple belt. The Rabun stretch, passing through the wonderful Clayton mountain range, and the Dillard valley, which is unique in its picturesqueness, combine to make the Georgia end of the route especially attractive. The Carolina end from the Dillard valley through Franklin and Sylva abounds in mountain beauty.

The Tallulah route from Atlanta to Asheville is around 45 miles nearer than any other Atlanta-Asheville route.

It is gratifying such interest is being taken in this great interstate scenic highway. North Carolina has completed with concrete her entire end without a break. It is a pity Georgia has not! It is up to this state to see that Georgia's end of the route is paved through to Atlanta at the earliest possible moment.

TRUTH THAT HURTS.

Some time ago a statement emanating from interested "officials" as to the efficiency of prohibition enforcement in Georgia was challenged by The Constitution. That challenge was subsequently more than verified by official figures as to arrests for drunkenness—which, of course, only touches the surface in so far as relating to prohibition violations.

Now B. C. Sharpe, prohibition administrator for the area comprising the Carolinas, Georgia and Florida, challenges the same statement, which it appears took on an official status, and was rendered to General Andrews, who is in charge of the enforcement of prohibition throughout the United States.

It was "officially" reported that his territory was getting as dry as the Sahara desert, and upon it General Andrews planned to extend the zone system, relying upon its success as outlined in the "official report" referred to.

Mr. Sharpe, who is necessarily more in direct, working touch with the situation than any other man, takes the direct opposite view of the conclusions of the "official report" and says frankly that instead of conditions getting better they are getting worse.

Washington dispatches say that Sharpe is liable to be fired for his frankness—that is, on the charge of insubordination.

It would be the irony of fate to discharge a prohibition administrator because he has the courage to tell the truth instead of attempting to fool the Washington authorities with a lot of bunk that everybody knows is as ridiculous as it is political.

Prohibition enforcement has not improved in Georgia—and possibly not in the other South Atlantic states. As heavy a tide of home hooch seems to be running as ever before. The embargo against imported liquors does not seem to be effective, as thousands of cases of supposed imported liquors are probably sold daily in the southeast. The news stories of only a day or two ago told of a great rectifying plant in Atlanta making synthetic liquor and marketing it under supposed foreign labels.

There has never been any improvement in prohibition enforcement in this part of the country and as long as the peaches and the apples ripen, and the merchants sell sugar and meal, and the appetite for alcohol remains unquenched it is doubtful there will ever be any improvement under our present laws and enforcement methods.

It is possible that General Andrews wants to have only good reports, and that Sharpe has overstepped the bounds of official diplomacy by telling the truth, but it is unthinkable that he is to be put on the slides merely because he had the courage to tell the brutal facts instead of sugar-coated fancies.

RIGHT KIND OF "RELIEF."

There are two thoughtful communications in this issue of The Constitution bearing on the so-called "farm relief" problems—one from a Powder Springs dirt farmer, J. Arthur Westbrook, and the other from J. E. Conwell, also a dirt farmer and president of the Georgia Cotton Cooperative association.

Mr. Westbrook argues—and very correctly—that the farmer needs markets more than credit.

It is the position consistently taken by The Constitution through all of the congressional footballing of a problem used more for political expediencies than in the sincere effort to bring actual relief to the agricultural classes.

Practically every "relief" measure offered, and passed, has sought to involve the farmer further in debt. The basis of all the measures fought through the last session and finally killed was credit — farm credit—when as a matter of fact there is a system of federal farm loan banks already existing for long-term credits on realty security, together with community group indorsements, and another system of federal intermediate banks for short loans with which to cultivate, move and market crops.

The War Finance corporation was organized to rehabilitate agriculture, and the federal reserve system encourages financing agriculture through its member banks.

There is credit a plenty. Credit means debt and debts have to be voluntarily paid, or the securities must be yielded. Hence farm debt means that a farmer must be in position to make the money off his farm to pay it, or lose that which he had when he incurred it.

In the meantime credit—and the resulting debt—encourages extravagancies, wild-catting, and every other gold brick scheme under the sun.

The farmers who have found easy credit too often "fall for fakers" rather than to employ the money in building up their farm operations on a business basis. This is the unvarnished truth.

What we need is legislation to get the farmer out of debt, not further in debt.

Mr. Conwell indorses heartily The Constitution's position. "He has got entirely too much credit," he says, referring to the efforts, first of the politicians to get the farmer further in debt, and then of the schemers "to sell him something"—that is, to make him an easy-mark for profit.

The next congress should entirely reverse its position as to farm "relief" legislation, and by extending and expanding the markets, providing for the commodity surpluses, and inculcating in the farmer the rules of reason as tested in real, constructive, successful business, relieve" him of debt. That is his need—and it will be his only salvation.

If the weather man is trying to make up for any deficiency in rain, we're willing for him to forget it.

A literary exchange says it has been a great year for books. People are not only buying, but reading some of them.

When airplanes are thick in the sky, we'll probably "hear the heavens, filled with shouting," to the tune of "Don't park here!"

In the opinion of The Indianapolis News, "nothing makes a bathing beauty madder than to find only her head and shoulders were included in her newspaper picture."

Naturally, the bootlegger praises the stuff he sells; but the real test is when he drinks it.

Considering the political barbecues, the voters will at least get something out of the present campaign.

AT THE DOOR

BY FRANK L. STANTON

I.

No knocking of a traveler
Sheltered rest to win;
The Wind sleeps in the valley
Where the starry dreams begin;
The silent Dark's on vale and hill:
But . . . who seeks entrance still?

II.

It must be, in the darkness,
Where shadows ghostly seem,
To One who sits and listens,
The echo of a dream:
Who knocks . . . insistent at the door
That bars the black Night from God's poor?

III.

One knows who hears that knocking,
Refuge so rude to win,
Who fain would see what company,
Yet fears to call, "Come in!"
Better gray life, alone—unblest—
Than daisies o'er a dead man's breast.

KEEP AN EYE ON REED

His Eye Is Set on the White House

BY SAM W. SMALL.

In certain well-advised circles here in Washington it is understod that Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, is to be an earnest and bona fide contender for the democratic nomination for president in 1928. Any suggestion that he will be only a delegate gatherer for Governor Smith, Governor Ritchie, or any other man, is scornfully dismissed. Jim Reed is not the man to play second-fiddler to any one living. He is too self-contained, self-confident and ambitious to be anybody's Sancho Panza or Man Friday.

He Knows What He Wants.

Senator Reed wants to be president. He has wanted the job for a long time, but circumstances have not conspired in his favor as they seem now to be doing. He senses political conditions two years hence into which he can put himself and his principles with the greatest promise of success. The stars in their courses through the political firmament are fighting for him more potentially than for any other democrat on the field.

Jim Reed himself is a fighter. He has had to fight his way from the sod-grass of his boyhood to where he functions today in the front rank of the American senate. And there is an abundance of fight yet in him.

* * * *

An Old Bill Allen Democrat.

He was born November 3, 1861, in Mansfield, Ohio, and a inst any competitor from that commonwealth, democrat or republican, can boast a Buckeye birthmark. So much for that.

It was some years after the war between the states that young Reed could understand political talk, but when he began to "listen-in" he heard blue-jeans democracy of the "Old Bill Allen of Ohio" sort and became saturated with the color and convictions of that school. Hence it happens that he stands out today in the senate as the foremost exponent of all "the ancient and accepted" doctrines of original democracy—the democracy of Jefferson and Jackson.

* * * *

A Well-Drilled Politician.

While Reed was yet callow his family moved west to the fertile fields of Iowa and at Cedar Rapids, under competent lawyers, he prepared for the bar. He was admitted in 1885 and began activities just when the Iowans and other westerners commenced to feel the agrarian urge that soon after brought populism and Weaverism into the polical arena. In the study of that rising phenomenon Reed learned to distinguish the populistic complex from the icons of fundamental American democracy and the more devoted he became to Jeffersonian principles.

As his personal penchant for politics grew he looked for a field of endeavor more congenial and promising than the Iowa then dominated by Senators Allison and Wilson, and taking on under Larrabee the prohibition ideas of St. John of Kansas.

So Reed, in 1887, removed himself and his hopes to Kansas City, but possibly with no dream in his brain of ever occupying the seat of Cockrell or Vest in the senate of the United States.

* * * *

A Quick Catcher-On.

Why he hit on Kansas City for his habitat he has never told me, but probably, in his delvings into democratic literature, he had read the prediction of Senator Thomas H. Benton, who said in 1854, when the embryo town had 487 inhabitants:

"Here, gentlemen, where the rocky bluff meets and turns aside the sweeping current of this mighty river; here where the Missouri, after running its southward course for nearly 2,000 miles, turns eastward to the Mississippi, a large commercial and manufacturing community will see a great city on these hills!"

Anyhow, Reed went to K. C. and was promptly recognized and made prosecuting attorney of Jackson county, which includes the city. The writer knew the city well in those days and with Rev. Sam Jones held a great evangelistic campaign there during Reed's regime as criminal prosecutor.

* * * *

A Shirt-Maker For Nessus.

In those days, under the mayoralties of Wofford and Davenport, both Georgians by the way, Kansas City was about as "wide-open" as the maw of hell. It was the Sargasso sea of the mid-west and every devil and derelict of the region found an eddy in it.

But old man Nessus, who invented the sort of shirt that burns like a Spanish-fly plaster on the wearer's back, had an expert making that brand of shirts in the prosecutor's office.

In the three years from 1887 to 1900 Jim Reed tried 287 criminal indictments and convicted 285 of the foul birds that got entangled in his net. Only two of the buzzards got away scotfree—and that is a record that prosecutors all over America still have to shoot at!

* * * *

Independent as a Free Eagle.

After observing Senator Reed's performances for nearly 40 years and often disagreeing with him on public issues, I am sure that he is no hypocrite, no sycophant, no time-serving demagogue, but is a Decatur-like democrat who believes he is serving always for the best interests of the country and is for "my country, right or wrong!"

He entered the senate March 4, 1911, and has been twice re-elected by majorities of 25,000 and 43,000, and it may be safely said that he is more popular in Missouri today than at any period in his past career. That he can have the Missouri delegation to the convention in 1928 is beyond question.

Perhaps the only rival Senator Reed has as an independent actor in the senate is Senator Borah, of Idaho.

Senator Reed did not "go along" with President Wilson in all things and for that alleged "recalcitrancy" the machine democrats of his state tried to ostracize him, but he beat their plan and made them come to heel.

He is deadly opposed to making the democratic party one of opportunism, campaign expediency, or truculence to win favor with capital, communism, labor demagogy, agrarianism, or either paternal or maternal altruism.

He is a 100 per cent democrat and what that means with him will furnish an illuminating later chapter.

SOUL OF A ROSE

Do roses have souls? Pray tell me how Can aught so beautiful suffer death?
Nay! Look not down where the petals lie
Far strewn around by the wind's sharp breath.

A rose's soul seeks those who mourn,
Whose eyes are "holden" and cannot see
That He who recalled the silent one
Has saved Love's darling from ills to be!

But most of all—so the poets say
In ages of song and music's lore—
The rose was made for the lover's use.
Where crude words fail its soul says more.

So long may they bloom to carry speech
To lovers, to mourners and all who guess
Beyond their beauty the message sweet!
O soul of a rose! 'Tis yourr to bless!

Liquor Question To Be Predominant Issue In Forthcoming Congressional Elections

Washington, August 28.—(Special Correspondence.)—Until a few months ago it seemed as if the issue of the coming senatorial and congressional elections, and of the presidential election to follow, would consist of a group of economic aspects of the times which, in the aggregate, would constitute a revival of the "big business" issue of 10 to 25 years ago.

Nearly everything pointed that way. In the senate, Walsh, of Montana, who, with a few others, shares the intellectual leadership of the democrats, made many speeches and took other steps designed to lay the groundwork for a campaign about trusts and business combinations, their relation to politics, and the need of going back to a policy of restoring competition.

In the lower house, Congressman Cordell Hull, who bears the burden of the leadership of the democrats on the tariff, made many speeches looking to the assumption that that would be the coming question. In the Congressional Record were inserted many speeches and documents meant to be sent out to the voters under congressional frank as campaign material on the tariff. Defensive material was inserted with a corresponding purpose by republican leaders.

Twenty-six senators united in a demand on the department of justice and the federal trade commission for greater vigor in the investigation of the many industrial combinations being formed, and prevention or prosecution of them. Congressman Davey, of Ohio, a democrat, speaking on behalf of the independent bakers of northeastern Ohio, made an urgent and specific demand for investigation of two large new combinations of bakeries. Senator Walsh brought about an inquiry into the Aluminum Corporation of America. Senator Norris, of Nebraska; Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin, and other insurgent republicans crowded their share of the Congressional Record with jeremiads against what they called the electrical trust.

It was expected there would be added to this an expression of public resentment, by the voters at the polls, of several scandals in the area where big business and politics come in contact. A sign of the times, coming from a quarter closer to the man in the street than to the leaders in politics, was a paragraph in the humorous, literary and whimsical F. P. A. column of The New York World, which alluded to the delay in bringing to trial the men involved in the oil scandals of two and a half years ago:

"In July, 1924, indictments against Mr. Fall and Mr. Doheny were handed down, and some day something may be done about them. The oil scandal involved vast sums of money. In 1919 the American public, indignant because Eddie Cicotte and Joe Jackson, of the White Sox, took money for trying to throw the world series to Cincinnati, drove them out of organized baseball, where, in comparative poverty and obscurity, they are to this very day. If we were a psychologist we'd write an essay on "What Makes the American People Angry."

"The Baltimore Sun," with frank partisanship, almost angry partisanship, predicted the overwhelming of President Coolidge by a revival of what "The Sun" called "American idealism."

"Yesterday the president began his fourth year in his high office. What is ahead of him? Is the remarkable good fortune that has always been his in politics still to be his faithful servant? So far as ordinary political signs may be followed, the chances favor him. . . . The great business interests rejoice in him. His weakness in leading congress means nothing to them, for they do not desire him to enact legislation; they merely want a president who will prevent adverse legislation, and the veto should be, in the main, sufficient for that. . . . But Mr. Coolidge has one enemy far more dangerous than any of the politicians plotting against him. One day that enemy will strike what Mr. Coolidge stands for with overwhelming force, and it may strike in time to hit Mr. Coolidge himself. The enemy is the much-derided American idealism. Mock it as you may, condemn it out of its own mouth as the adriot can and do, it is a force in American politics that has not been extinguished. Sometimes blindly, sometimes foolishly, it has reared itself in invincible might in the past as surely as materialism has become dominant. The old progressivism was a vehement protest against the crass, arrogant and seemingly invulnerable materialism that followed the civil war, and, making allowance for its mistakes, it achieved greatly. . . . The time will come when this generation will realize that it must make its own fight, as the last generation made its fight against its own evils. When that time comes the Coolidge political philosophy will suddenly find its back to the wall. . . . An era in which special privilege stalks the land with conqueror's tread, in which corruption abounds, in which wealth seeks to buy office out of hand . . . in which foreign relations are attuned to the pawnbroker's doctrine that 'they hired the money, didn't they?'—such an era will not be unchallenged in a land still full of youth and aspiration. Mr. Coolidge will be luckier than ever if he leaves the stage before the storm breaks."

Evidence of concern about the tariff and other aspects of "big business" becoming the issue, came not only from those who wanted that outcome but from those who apprehended it. One of the country's greatest business periodicals, "The Manufacturers' Record," has fought and continues to fight for cancellation of the debts due us from Europe. Most of that demand, so far as it originates in America, is put on the ground of idealism. But "The Manufacturers' Record" frankly reveals an economic motive, a fear associated with the tariff. "The Record's" fear is not merely what would result from a reduction of the tariff; it fears the present tariff will not be high enough if Europe pays its debts. On the cover of its issue of August 19 "The Record" displays with the emphasis of black-faced type a statement from Edwin C. Eckel, of whom "The Record" says: "No engineer in America has had during the last ten years a larger opportunity for studying the whole condition of European labor and European wages as they will affect this country." Mr. Eckel refers to the "heavy imports (into America) of European products, especially glass, pipe, cement, iron, pottery, steel, etc.," and continues:

"The phenomenon—for it is that—has not passed unnoticed, but it has not been given much public discussion for various reasons. It is easy . . . with our usual easy confidence in American destiny to assume that it will pass away very soon. It is, however, a matter of more than temporary importance to all of us. As a matter of fact, given an impoverished Europe and a rich America, we would naturally import goods heavily until we had spent a good deal of money and Europe had made some—a period which might be measured in years. But when we consider the various war debt settlements, it is clear enough that the pressure of imports will last for sixty-two years of such payments, and that it will automatically increase as time goes on. . . . Until 1990 then, unless our present debt plans are changed, we may fairly expect to have heavy import balances in such goods as can be produced or made more cheaply abroad than here. . . . When the products are manufactured goods, competitive with our own, we will have to meet the pressure by reducing wages and salaries to the European level, by a scaling down of living conditions and incomes for all Americans of every class, or by raising our tariffs to an absolutely prohibitive level. . . . No professional politician is likely at the present time to advocate any one of three possible remedies. . . . So we must fairly assume that nothing at all will be done about it until things get much worse." . . .

A sentiment on the part of business that feels not only the need of the present tariff, but even the need of a higher one, provides the other side of the demand for tariff reduction by democrats and insurgent republicans; and the two views together compose adequate material for a worthy political contest on an economic issue.

As regards the status of the trust question also, big business had its own convictions and apprehensions, sufficient, again, to provide the opposition for the question the democrats and insurgent republicans tried to raise. In Commerce and Finance for August 18 is a statement of the need for stabilized markets, and the devices used to achieve that purpose but avoid collision with the existing anti-trust laws:

"The fact is that left entirely alone the law of supply and demand is ruthlessly and unnecessarily destructive. . . . Thus the phenomenon of what may be called 'managed markets'. . . Take copper, for example. Today, in the meaning outlined, it may be called a 'managed market.'. . . Leaders of the industry, which was long regarded as destined to alternate periods of inordinate plenty and unreasoning depression, have apparently succeeded in finely balancing supply and demand . . . Theoretically, of course, copper still enjoys a free market. The industry is not controlled by any great copper trust. . . . Actual agreement between the big copper companies of this country to hold down production in the interest of higher prices, would, of course, run counter to the anti-trust laws. But if the same end is reached without such an agreement, no law is brought into play. . . . Another evidence of the trend toward 'managed markets' is the present attempt of large oil companies to adjust the supply to the current demand." . . .t

Those contradictory views composed the materials on which the political issue for the coming senatorial and congressional elections, and for some years to come, was expected to be based.

But apparently, almost certainly, things are not destined to turn out that way. The liquor question is going to dislodge the economic one. Every practical politician knows that as campaigns crystallize firmly, by the time the two or three weeks before election arrives there is always one issue. Many voters may be able to carry more than one issue in their minds and balance consideration of one against the other; but voters in the mass focus on one issue and cast their ballots on it. The fight of the wets for reconsideration of the present status of prohibition has put the drys on the defensive, and both groups are going practically to ignore other issues.

How far this tendency can go is illustrated by the senatorial contest in Illinois. It was revealed that the republican candidate, Frank Smith, who is chairman of the public utility commission, had received campaign contributions of more than $150,000 from three heads of public utilities who benefit by his official decisions; and that his democratic opponent, George Brennan, had received $15,000 from one of the same sources. Under ordinary circumstances, that would have constituted a determining political issue. Recurrent agitations to compel either Smith or both Smith and Brennan, to resign their nominations came from high-minded leaders of thought, such as Julius Rosenwald. But the general public, not through cynicism, but through the working of a familiar political psychology, would ignore the campaign contributions and vote on the other issue. Smith is an outstanding dry, Brennan an outstanding wet. There was a clear contrast on the question most to the front of the people's minds. The voters by election day would forget the scandal of contributions; the drys would vote for the dry candidate and the wets for the wet.

Prohibition is the leading issue locally in several states, and also nationally. As the national issue it is made concrete in the division of the democratic party into two head-on groups, the wet one represented by Governor Smith, of New York, and the dry one, if not represented, at least symbolized by McAdoo. In the republic party prohibition is made the leading issue of the situation in New York, not only because elections in New York as the largest state are often in a sense national, but because the coming developments in New York seem bound to affect the national position of the republican party. If the republican senator, Wadsworth, wins his reelection, as he seems destined to at this stage, he will become a most important figure in the party. By custom and the nature of the situation he will be the leader of the big New York delegation in the coming republican national convention (two years from now to name President Coolidge's successor. In that role Senator Wadsworth would have a large part, possibly a determining part, in saying whether or not Coolidge shall succeed himself, or if not, whoever else is to be the republican nominee. A republican nominee who gets his nomination as in any conspicuous degree the beneficiary of Senator Wadsworth would to some extent take on the senator's wet color. For the republican party nationally there are odd possibilities inherent in what is now going on within the republican party in New York.

In any event, it seems clear that for the present election and for the presidential one two years from now, the economic issue is elbowed out of the picture by the liquor issue. Within each of the parties wets and drys contend for control. After control has been settled within each party will come to a fight between the two. If the dry element of the democrats is successful and nominates McAdoo or some other dry, republicans may find themselves put in a strange and perplexing position by what is now going on in New York.

On Being Adopted

BY CORRA HARRIS.
(For The Constitution.)

The following interesting article from the gifted pen of Mrs. Corra Harris, Georgia's most noted author, tells of her "adoption" by two young girls, Bessie and Trannie Raines. It is an unusual story on an unusual topic—just the sort of story that Mrs. Harris is best fitted to write. Photograph of Mrs. Harris with the two girls appears in the roto section of today's Constitution.

Grown people sometimes adopt young ones, make a great to do about bringing them up properly and get much praise for the same, although they have had the advantage of these youngsters from start to finish, because they are in the position of authority and can discipline them according to their will and purposes. But I suppose very few of us past 50 years of age have ever had the entrancing adventure in love and charity of being adopted by two happy young girls.

I have enjoyed this unique experience for five years. And never once during that time have they complained of what a difficult charge they had to keep, nor intimated the patience and diplomacy they have been obliged to practice without ceasing in the fine art of managing her (that is to say me!) as real parents sometimes do complain of their headstrung children. They have served and obeyed with passionate devotion. At the same time they have been invincible disciplinarians in the upkeep of my poor old vanities and courage. I would gladly lean back upon my years in a sort of shabby place, but never once have I been permitted to refer to myself as an "old person." These dear young liars cannot find a gray hair on my head. Not for a day am I allowed to give up, cease to "arrange" my hair, powder my face and look better and younger than I feel. They go on furbishing me. On 3 in so often they take all my frocks out on the sly and shorten them from one to six inches, though I belong to a generation of women who never took the least pleasure in the publicity of their nether extremeties. I long to retire into the fashionless philosophy of old age and have done with it, only to be told that it is impossible for such a woman to grow old. There is not to be found in any walk of life such accomplished flatterers as these girls are to me in the wit of their tenderness. I am forced to go about bedriggened with their admiration as a good old rag doll submits to unbecoming finery.

They are not my heirs, you understand, but I have fallen heir to their youth and faith and joyful affections.

HOW IT CAME ABOUT.

This state of affairs came about in the following manner: Thirteen years ago, when I came to live here, George Raines owned the farm next to mine and was my nearest neighbor. I took up my residence in this old cabin on top of one of my mountains, he was already living in his at the foot of one of his mountains with his wife and seven children. But there was little social intercourse between us, because the Raines were Hardshell Baptists and I was an exceedingly softshelled Methodist. Doctrinally speaking we were as far apart as the poles, and remained so.

Never-the-less I discovered poachers on the side of my mountain behind the study. Two very small girls with pipestem legs had made their playhouse there and carried on the most complicated domestic life in it for a number of years with their dolls. I have since learned that they took turn about being "Corra Harris," and whichever one was this outrageous person on that day was a very grand person, supposed to be brilliant, beautiful and famous! The little girl, however, who had a long brush of Titian red curls, snapping brown eyes and a turned-up nose was named "Bessie," and has since acquired the title of "Robin Red-head." The other, younger child, had dark straight hair, blue eyes, a pudgy figure and dimples. Her name was "Trannie," and she finally succeeded to the title of "Tine."

The years passed and I do not even know when they were forced into the bankruptcy of their childhood and were obliged to give up playing dolls for work in the fields. Neither one of them can remember when she first began to work in the fields, being so young.

Meanwhile their father died, leaving their mother and her seven young children to face the world with such courage as I have never seen surpassed. And my dear Faith and my sister passed away, leaving me alone in this house.

One morning after a year of this desolate silence a slim young spring slip of a girl with a mass of Titian red hair skewed up on her head came up the green-boughed road to my cabin and said with no ado at all that she had come to take charge of me, and what did I want her to do first!

ADOPTED AS A "ROBIN RED-HEAD."

With some such formula as this was I adopted by "Robin Red-head."

"She did everything that was left undone by other people on the place besides making my frocks and mending my clothes. But her most remarkable and intimate service was the reciting of poetry by the hour in the quaintest sing-song rhythm imaginable. Her taste, however, was lofty and she knows more classical poetry than any other young person of my acquaintance. She knew this stuff the first day she came up here, though how she came by it and the time to learn it is still a mystery to me.

She has been the busiest person I ever knew, yet she has found time to read hundreds of the best books in this house. She can do anything from climbing up to measure the roof of this house and getting it shingled again for one-third of the amount of regular contractor demanded for the work, to sewing a fine seam.

She had been the manager of this three hundred acre place for two years and has surpassed any most valiant efforts along the same line.

When the old colored mammy's strength failed two years ago, Trannie came up the hill to take her place and share Bessie's responsibilities. I had reached the age when it seemed I needed two of them to adopt me.

Trannie's duties were to cook, a dingy business, of which she was as innocent and ignorant as a sparrow, though I believe she was born with a genius for making biscuit.

I had one brief conversation with Trannie before she assumed control of my inner man. I asked her if she wanted to be a cook or an artist. I told her that if she preferred to be just a cook I would pay her a very modest salary because I should be obliged to show her and direct her, and that this would be hard on me since I had never cooked anything, and very expensive for her, since I would have all the responsibility of her failures.

But if she wanted to be an artist, there was a shelf full of cook books from which she might learn the art, and the sky alone was the limit of what she might achieve in the one universal profession. Also, since I was buying her art I reserved the right to praise or criticize any dish she produced. But if she choose to become an artist, with all the anguish, diligence and courage every art demands, we would be in the same class, as I had long devoted myself in a similar manner to the art of literature. I gave her three days in which to make up her mind.

TRANNIE'S WIT.

At the end of the third day she come in and announced in all seriousness that she would be an artist. I could write a fine comedy full of pathos in Trannie's wit. She has succeeded far beyond my expectations. But she sustains the same relation to that shelf of cook books that I do to modern school or primitive literature—that is to say one of violent animosity. She declares they were all apocryphal printed to confound and humiliate any one who follows their recipes or teachings. She pitches most of her information about cooking from the lady guests who come to this house, never dreaming the fate that awaits them of having Trannie as a disciple determined to extract as much information on her art as possible.

As in the case of Bessie, Trannie has added to her exacting labors as an artist may of the softest, most tender tyrannies which she practices on me. Day after day she achieves my comfort and peace without asking my advice. She has a recipe for arranging me for a hard day's work—where to lay my papers, the angle of light I should have, the blue and red pencils, the pen and ink. I find it easier to conform to it than to settle myself. She is never offended or dismayed if I turn over the ink pot on the white covers of my bed. If I do not seem to be working with my usual vehemence, she knows I must not have tea, but should be allowed a glass of iced coffee with cream and sugar. Otherwise I never get cream or sugar! How she finds out these things about me I do not know, for a had no idea tea damned me until she discovered the fact. She carefully weighs me twice each week and if I so much as gain an ounce she cuts out something that I dearly like, such as buttered biscuits, not because I mind losing my waist line, but because she, with no reason at all, is vain about my figure!

In short, when I may be presently entering my second childhood, I am living again somewhere within reach of those tender experiences of my first childhood, when love encompassed me about, and others thought and planned my happy days. This is a good fate to overtake one at the last, more restful sometimes than honor and fame. And I may be pardoned for revealing it, not only as a token of gratitude to these young guardians of my peace in this remote place, but because an older friend, and ever a kind one, Clark Howell, asked me to tell the tale to go with the picture he is publishing in today's rotagravure section of The Constitution.

SEABOARD TRAINS MAKE UNUSUAL RECORDS IN JULY

Assistant General Passenger Agent Pleasants, of the Seaboard road, announced Saturday that for the month of July passenger train performance for the entire system averaged 96.2 per cent. All trains between Richmond, Va., and Jacksonville, Fla., averaged 98.05 per cent on time, and for the Georgia division, which is from Monroe, N. C., to Birmingham, Ala., and includes Atlanta, 95.09 per cent on time.

The Family Silver

When the early Colonial settlers came to America they brought with them their family silver, taking considerable pride in its possession. This treasuring family silver has come down through generations and today considerable interest is centered in collecting magnificent pieces which may become family heirlooms.

The many beautiful designs in Sterling Silver now on display offers you an opportunity to select a design of individuality and distinction.

"It's Sterling—more can not be said."

Farmer, Lamenting Conditions, Asks For the Remedy

Editor Constitution: You are a good sport and always give space in your paper for the other fellow to express his views on things worthwhile, even if you do not agree with him.

We farmers have been advised, counciled and "daddied" so long by every demagogue that we are tired of it. The law of supply and demand has always governed the price of any commodity, and always will.

Our mountains are full of iron, but we are not going to get any cheap plows. We have a large carry-over of cotton, but our factories are not going to run day and night to spin it and dump it on the market at any old price.

A publisher would not be foolish enough to print thousands of copies of his paper after his customers were supplied and then tell the newsboys to go dump them on the market at a penny per dozen.

That is what we farmers are doing. I can go on the streets of our cities today and buy fruits and vegetables for less than it cost to haul them there. Eighty per cent of the farms under mortgage, hundreds going under the hammer for taxes; country banks closed.

One year we are advised that our salvation is in the hog and hen; next year it's cattle and silos, and the next it's cheese factories and creameries, and after we have lost all they will tell us to come again with peanuts or popcorn.

How long would a business man stand for such interference? Every piece of so-called farm legislation is rotten to the core. Congress pretended to offer us relief through the banks. But when a farmer borrows money, even without interest, under the present conditions, he only tightens the fetters that will hold him till he fills a pauper's grave.

It is not credit we need, it's a market for our produce.

The farmers of the United States are in but little better condition today than the Russian peasants were under a czar, or the peons of Mexico were under Diaz.

We would like to leave our children a legacy in the form of an education that would make them useful and patriotic citizens; but what will they think of a government that is the richest in the world that will allow conditions to exist that have deprived them of this privilege?

This year we have a bountiful harvest. It will be a great blessing to all except the man who produced it. It does not mean prosperity to him, as he will not get cost of production.

Our great statesmen travailed for months in congress trying to give us relief, and then quit with a gesture and said, "The problem is yours; help yourself." Then, let us apply the remedy, and the only one that is within our power: Curtail the output, like other industries do.

If this isn't the remedy—then what is it? J. ARTHUR WESTBROOK.

Farmer Wants Markets More Than Credits

Editor Constitution: The editorial in The Constitution on cooperative marketing has just been called to my attention.

I thank you. It is very timely and represents the true idea of cooperative marketing.

I also saw your editorial Sunday bearing on credits. You are absolutely right. The trouble is that everyone has been running after the farmer to sell him something or to loan him money—to make a profit out of him.

He has got entirely too much credit. Less effort to put him into debt and more effort to teach him business methods in handling his business and how to meet his obligations already incurred, would be better for him.

The constant work of The Constitution on such important problems to the farmer, has already helped; but the good that it has done is small as compared with the ultimate benefits that will result.

Men's Clothing Fill Two Floors At Muse Store

The rapid advance of Atlanta is evidenced in the announcement that the George Muse Clothing company is now devoting two entire floors of their spacious building to men's clothing exclusively.

The third floor has been remodeled and today presents a complete range of men's suits with two pairs of trousers at $25 to $45. This new expansion is connected to the regular second floor clothing department by a special stairway just being completed between the two floors.

The new floor also features the college department, showing the interesting styles of the university man. The college department is arranged at the Peachtree end of the floor, while two pants suits for men hold the first half of the floor as you enter.

In the past this floor was the boys' department and college department. The boys' department has been moved to beautifully appointed quarters on the sixth floor of the Muse building.

$1,000,000 BAND WILL PLAY TODAY AT SOLDIERS' HOME

Yaarab Temple's Million-Dollar Shrine band will give a special concert this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the pavilion on the lawn of the Confederate Soldiers' home.

The Rev. Sam W. Small, associate editorial writer for The Constitution and well-known orator, will be principal speaker on the program. Other features have been planned in connection with the concert.

Noble Leslie F. Phillips, president of the band, announces the following attractive program:

March, "Caesar's Triumphal," Mitchell; selection, "Fantasia on Old Kentucky Home," Balbey; fox trot, "You Gotta Know How to Love," Warren; vocal selections (a), "June Brought the Roses, (b), "Somewhere a Voice Is Calling," Miss Evelyn Black, soprano; novelty waltz, "Old-Timers' Waltz," Lake; fox trot, "The Pump Song," Lerner.

Intermission—15-minute address by Rev. Sam W. Small.

Part Two—March, "Stabat Mater," Losey; selection, "Grand American Fantasia," Theo Bendix; fox trot, "I'm Lonely Without You," Warren; vocal selection (a) "When You and I Were Young Maggie," (b) "I'll Forget You," Noble Paul W. Crutchfield; Spanish intermezzo, "La paloma," T. Reder; fox trot, "Honey Bunch," Morbach; dance Oriental, "Mlle. Modiste," Herbert; characteristic march, "Trombone Blues," Jewel; finale, "Dixie."

Invasion by 17-Year Locust Seen for Georgia This Fall

Periodical cicada, or seventeen-year locust, and maps showing areas most heavily infested in last visitation in 1919.

Swarms of "periodical cicada," better known locally as "17-year locusts," will sweep over certain sections of Georgia in vast numbers early this fall, according to dispatches received from government entomologists at Washington. The pests are scheduled to make their appearance this fall, according to the calculations of government experts. According to figures compiled by Haliard de la Parelle, state entomologist of Georgia, the locusts are not expected to come to Georgia in large quantities until 1936, but he said it is probable that they will appear this fall in limited quantities.

The 17-year locust is a peculiar insect, according to Mr. de la Parelle. It requires 17 years for the egg laid by the female to hatch, pass through the larval and pupal stages and become a fully-developed locust, according to Mr. de la Parelle, and it stands without parallel among the insects of the world in point of longevity.

"The appearance of the periodical cicada, or 17-year locust, often excites serious fears among those unfamiliar with its life history and habits, particularly those interested in the welfare of favorite trees and shrubs; but, on the whole, the anxiety is quite out of proportion to the injury likely to occur," Mr. de la Parelle said.

17 Years Under Ground.

The insect, in its larvae form, lives for about 17 years under the ground, according to the state entomologist. With almost exact regularity the insects emerge from the ground in countless millions in an area of many thousands of square miles. It sheds its pupal skin and attains maturity almost in the course of a single night.

"The periodical cicada becomes notably injurious only in the course of its egg-laying," Mr. de la Parelle said. "Soon after emerging from the ground the female begins to puncture the smaller twigs and branches of various trees and shrubs in which the eggs are deposited, the effect of which is to cause a considerable browning and dying of the parts affected. Decided marks of thier visitation soon appear. The final result is a general pruning, which in fruit trees and shrubs may be decidedly injurious; yet in forest trees, which are the receptacles of the greater part of the eggs, the more evident signs of injury disappear before the close of the season."

Mr. de la Parelle pointed out that the time of the appearance of the cicada varies according to altitude, but said the average shows that it appears more often during the last week or ten days of May every 17 years. He said no manifestation of the insect has been noted this summer, but said some of them appear every year, and that it is possible there will be an infestation in Georgia this fall, although not probable. He pointed out that the last appearance of the locust was in 1919, and adding 17 years to that date would mean that it is scheduled for its next appearance in 1936. Appearance of the cicada this year would mean that they belonged to another cycle which last appeared above ground in 1909.

Four Weeks' Visit.

When the locusts come they stay for three or four weeks. They usually come in sections, one large group remaining a week and followed later by other groups. The chief damage they inflict is confined to fruit trees and shrubs, according to information obtained from the state entomologist. Cats, dogs and poultry are their greatest enemies, and soon put the armies to flight.

In emerging from the ground the males precede the females several days, and they disappear somewhat earlier for this reason, and also for the reason that they are shorter-lived.

Localities visted by the greater number of 17-year locusts are shown in the map accompanying this article. This map was compiled after the last appearance of the insect, but it is by no means certain that they will visit again the same localities on the next visit, according to the entomologist. According to this map, the infestation on the last visit was confined largely to that part of Georgia lying north of Atlanta, this city barely being within the zone infested.

LOWER COTTONSEED RATES FOR GEORGIA

A reduced intrastate freight rate in Georgia on green cotton seed, that of a minimum flat rate of $15 a car, will go into effect Monday on the Atlantic Coast line, James A. Perry, chairman of the state public service commission, announced Saturday.

The reduction followed a complaint registered by the Georgia Cotton Seed Crushers' association with the public service commission, stating that the freight rate on cotton seed was too high. Mr. Perry presented the matter to the various railways, he said, the Atlantic Coast line being the first road to comply with the request. The other railroads are also expected to reduce the rate immeditely, Mr. Perry said.

The reduced rate on the Atlantic Coast line will be in effect while the green cotton seed is being moved, or until about September 30, Mr. Perry stated. The rate which heretofore applied to cars of 30,000 pounds of cotton seed was reduced one-third to a minimum flat rate of $15 a car. This rate applies to movement of cars to any point within the state, Mr. Perry said.

RELIEF FROM RAIN THROUGH WEEK-END SEEN IN ATLANTA

Weather that Atlantans can enjoy is slated for the week-end, according to A. H. Scott, assistant meteorologist at the Atlanta branch of the United States weather bureau.

"Slightly higher temperatures will be in evidence," he said, "but fair weather will prevail until Monday. There is little chance of rain in the near future."

The highest temperatures, he said, will be slightly above 90 degrees. The lowest mercury reading Saturday was 71 degrees and the thermometer had climbed to near 90 degrees by noon.

BEN HILL FARMERS TO VISIT DOUGLAS

Fitzgerald, August 28.—(Special.) Ben Hill county farmers and Fitzgerald business men will visit the Douglas tobacco markets next Monday, according to County Agent C. T Owens.

The high prices secured for tobacco this year on the local market are encouraging land owners in the county to prepare for larger acreage next season and a visit to the larger markets at Douglas is being planned to further inspire the home people.

Cars will be furnished by Fitzgerald business men and the A. B. & A. railroad will also have low rates from points along its line to Douglas on that date, it is announced.

UNUSUAL PLACES USED BY VENDORS TO HIDE WHISKY

Quitman, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—Makers and venders, particularly venders of moonshine whisky, are constantly thinking of new places to hide it and in the back yard of Sam Williams, a negro man, the officers found his supply in an innocent-looking tub of dirty suds.

Sheriff Clanton, Deputy Sheriff Varney and Chief Clanton the same night found a large quantity hidden in a tangle of weeds and vines back of Charlie Spencer's house. Charlie had neglected to join in the campaign to get weeds cut and an almost imperceptible path in the tall weeds, which seemed to have no objective, led to investigation and the discovery of two large jugs.

Sam Williams said he had to pay $5 a gallon for the whisky he sold and that he retailed it at $2 a quart.

PRINCE OF WALES LEAVES TUESDAY ON MOTOR TOUR

London, August 28.—The Prince of Wales will leave Tuesday for France for a motor trip of two or three weeks. He will travel incognito.

ENSIGN'S COMMISSION GIVEN ATLANTAN

Gordon Phillips McGowan, of 703 North Boulevard, received notification Friday that he would be commissioned as an ensign in the United States coast guard, according to information furnished by H. D. Brownley in charge of the coast guard recruiting office, 404 Austell building.

Mr. McGowan enlisted in the coast guard two years ago as an apprentice seaman and later was honorably discharged from coast guard cutter Modoc, at Wilmington, N. C., as quartermaster, first class. In June he took a competitive examination for a commission, such as is offered each year to members of the coast guard, and passed, receiving notification of his commission upon reenlisting at the Atlanta station August 25. He will go to New London, Conn., for duty.

SILVER CLOUD GROUP TO SPONSOR DANCE

Arrangements have been completed by Silver Cloud and Tonemah councils, Degree of Pocahontas, through the entertainment committee, for a dance Monday night at Gleneco Springs.

This being an invitation dance a limited number of cards of admission may be secured from any member of the dance committee or at the Red Men's wigwam, at $1 each. Ladies will be admitted free. One of the best orchestras in the city will furnish music for the dance and the proceeds will be used for new costumes for the two degree teams as they are expected to enter the contest at the next session of the great council.

Case for Road Bonds Strikingly Presented In Unanswerable Argument

Editor Constitution: The question of bonds for good roads is being discussed a good deal among the voters of this county in connection with the race for governor, and we hear a great many arguments pro and con. As I see it, no governor, regardless of his sympathies, can influence the issue very much, as he is not in a position to give more than moral support, and certainly none of the candidates have come out unequivocally for bonds. Regardless of who may be elected to fill that office, the people of Georgia ought to be given an opportunity to decide it at the polls.

North Carolina and Florida, pioneers in the good roads movement that is sweeping the south, have drawn the attention of the entire country to the wonderful resources of this section, and it cannot be denied that these two states have enjoyed a greater degree of prosperity than any other two of the southern group, thereby demonstrating for all time that population and industries naturally follow good roads.

There is no state in the union that has more to offer the investor than the state of Georgia.

Twenty-five years ago Georgia was easily the Empire State of the South, but she has lost that proud supremacy through lack of progressive leadership. The men who have aspired to manage her affairs have been actuated solely by the honors and emoluments of office and too ready to sacrifice principles and convictions to attain those ends. The breed of men who had "rather be right than be president" have long since passed into history.

Taxation has never been popular with a large class of people, and it is to those that the politician makes his appeal. The statesman undertakes to show them that no government can live, no country be prosperous and no people be safe without adequate revenue for all legitimate purposes. If some man were to rise up among us that would be strong enough to lead instead of being weak enough to follow we would have a network of good roads that would bring happy settlers to all of our waste places and pour the products of their labor into the channels of commerce.

It is needless to say that we are not able to hard-surface every mile of road in the state of Georgia, but we surely can hard-surface the principal highways leading through the state and connecting with similar roads from other states. Roads of secondary importance should be straightened where practicable, put on an easy grade and treated with gravel or a sand-clay mixture.

This plan would not give every man a first-class road to his front door and demagogues will take advantage of that fact to create opposition, but a man whose patriotism does not extend beyond his own freehold is a very poor citizen. If the people of the United States had been altogether guided by direct personal interest the great arid plains of the west would never have been irrigated.

What we really want is roads that are reliable in all seasons of the year, and in all kinds of weather, so that travelers on business or pleasure bent would not have to consult the weather bureau every time they contemplated a trip. With such roads they would never be bogged down after rains nor stifled with dust during the drouth.

I have no statistics available, but judging from personal experience, the people who use the roads most, and must pay for them, would save twice the interest on the bonds necessary to build them in operating expenses alone, not to speak of property damage and loss of life from unavoidable accidents. People could travel with more comfort and safety and save enough in time and gasoline to more than cover the additional price per gallon.

It is proposed by the advocates of bonds to follow the plan adopted in other states to raise the money to pay the interest on the bonds and provide a sinking fund to retire them at maturity. Other states do it by an extra tax on gasoline. Under such a plan only the users of gasoline would be affected and those who use it in cars and trucks would get more than value received for every additional dollar spent in this way. People who do not use gasoline have nothing to lose, while they have everything to be gained from living in a progressive state.

Our present revenue for road purposes is approximately ten million dollars annually, and it is claimed by the opponents of a bond issue that that sum is as much as can be handled economically, and that if we will adhere to the prevailing policy we can eventually build our roads without bonded indebtedness. Now, the trouble with that argument is that we are not building roads of a permanent or satisfactory character, and cannot do so with the means available. Besides the upkeep of such roads as we are building is out of all proportion to the original cost. It might also be added that it would take a good many years at the present rate to complete the work we are doing, whereas if good roads are beneficial to the people, the sooner they are built the better for all.

Neither is there anything in the argument that moderate sums of money can be spent with less waste and extravagance than large sums.

It has already been proven that large aggregations of capital under one management is more effective than in separate units. There is no earthly reason why the principle should not hold good in a road building scheme. We might have to smash every political machine in the state to secure men of the right caliber for this great work, but that ought to be done on general principles. And if the men we need cannot be found in Georgia, look for them elsewhere. This is a business proposition of the first magnitude, in which politics should play no part.

The bugaboo of a bonded indebtedness frightens a few timid souls who never stop to think that the right kind of roads is an asset that cannot be taken away from them; and one that enhances the value and increases their enjoyment of every dollar's worth of property in the state. It is true, as often stated, that many men now living will be dead before the last of these bonds would be paid and that a part of the burden will fall upon the shoulders of others who will grow up to take their places, but it would be better to leave these others a heritage of debt with good roads to counterbalance than to leave them with a clean slate with an endless cycle of mud and dust. They would pay tribute to our wisdom and prove their gratitude by building more and better roads. No state has ever been known to turn back when it has once launched upon a similar enterprise.

Second Baptist Church.

Services today at the Second Baptist church will be conducted by the Rev. John E. White, in the absence of the pastor, Dr. Carter M. Jones. Dr. White will preach at the morning service at 11 o'clock on "The Thrill of Jesus," and at 8 o'clock at night on the Lawn of the state capitol, when his object will be "The 100 Per Cent American." Dr. Jones will resume charge of his pulpit next Sunday on his return from the west, where he has been visiting during his vacation.

Hundred-Year War for Legal Reform

ENGLISH APPEALS ALWAYS INVOLVE THE MERITS

This is the concluding installment of an article by Professor E. R. Sunderland, of the law school of the University of Michigan, telling how England obtained her efficient system of legal procedure, and describing its chief features. In the present chapter Professor Sunderland explains how civil cases are not reviewed to find errors, but to determine what judgment justice requires, and shows how rapidly and effectively criminal appeals are disposed of.

In the final stage of litigations, the appellate review, the English rules are clearly founded upon the simple proposition that an appeal, in its formal aspects, should involve no technical difficulties whatever. The judgment record already exists. If the papers which make it up are filed in the appellate court office, and the appellee is notified of such filing, nothing more would be essential to a perfected appeal.

An appellate process reduced as nearly as possible to this degree of simplicity would be an unmixed economic advantage, for the only purpose served is the mechanical one of effecting the transfer with notice of the appellee, and every added restriction, requirement, or condition merely presents an obstacle and imposes a risk. Unnecessary friction always impairs a mechanical device.

The English practice in taking an appeal so successfully meet its theoretical aim that there is almost no way of making a mistake. Nothing is required but the ability to read and to operate a typewriter.

Bills of Exceptions Obsolete.

Bills of exceuptions became obsolete in England so long ago that some of the oldest men now in the law court offices never heard of them. Assignments of error have also gone the way of the cross appeal, the writ of error, and the other extinct monsters of the cave-dwelling period of English law. To perfect an appeal the English barrister serves a notice upon the respondents that he will move the court of appeal in fourteen days to reverse the judgment. He then files with the clerk of the court of appeal three typewritten copies of the notice of appeal and of the pleadings, evidence, and opinions below.

There are no abstracts, no condensations, or reduction to narrative form, to be worked out, wrangled over, and settled. The appellate record is merely a copy of existing documents. There are no exceptions. If the appeal is too late, the court can extend the time for good cause shown; if the parties change by death or otherwise, the court may order substitutions; if additional parties should be joined, the court may at any time order that they be notified; if additional evidence is needed in the court of appeal it may be ordered brought in, either by oral testimony or affidavit or deposition; if new points not raised below ought to be considered, the court may order or allow that this be done.

Case Reviewed on ts Merits.

The case is not reviewed for errors, but reviewed at large upon the merits, and to insure the broadest usefulness, the court of appeal is given all the powers of the trial court, and may draw inferences of fact and make any judgement or order that ought to have been made or make any further order that justice may require. The avowed aim is to enable the appellate court to completely dispose of the case so that when the appeal has been decided the litigation is at an end.

To an American the most remarkable thing about an English appeal is the total absence of written briefs. Everything rests upon the oral argument, and there is no time limit. The judges all participate actively in the argument, and whenever counsel makes use of any report, the usher places a copy of the same book from which counsel reads in the hands of each of the judges, so that the argument becomes a sort of round-table discussion. In this way the appeal is thoroughly canvassed by the court with the aid and in the presence of counsel, so that when the argument ends, the judges are in complete possession of all the facts and all the law.

Thereupon, in the ordinary case, the three judges whisper together for a moment to make sure that they are in agreement, although their views are already quite apparent from the discussion with counsel, and at once begin rendering oral opinions seriatim, in the order of seniority.

Appellat Judges Prompt in Decisions.

When they finish dictating their opinions they are through with the case, never to be troubled with it again, and the next appeal is called. It is rare that cases are taken under advisement. With appeals argued and decided in open court, with individual opinions expressed by each judge, there is no opportunity for the complaint so commonly made in the United States of one-man decisions in appellate courts.

Technical points of procedure are rarely urged in the court of appeal, because they are not favored. Only matters of substance interest the court. And it is probably because of this attitude above that technical objections are so rarely made below. In the year 1924 not a single case from the king's bench division was reversed for error in admitting or excluding evidence. Improper conduct on the part of counsel during the trial of a case is almost invariably corrected then and there by a caution to the jury from the judge, instead of being treated as an irrevocable error to be reached only by a new trial.

Appeals Are Easy to File.

The court of criminal appeal is a unique and interesting feature of the English judicial establishment. It sits about once a week as needed, and consists of three judges of the king's bench division with the lord chief justice as presiding judge. Appeals can be taken either from the conviction or from the sentence.

There are no formalities whatever in prosecuting the appeal. Blank forms of application for leave are placed in all prisons, and it is the duty of the governor of every prison to furnish any prisoner with blanks and instructions for filling them out. When completed the forms are sent to the clerk of the court where the conviction took place, and it is his duty to complete the appeal and take the proper steps to bring it on for hearing. The appeal is usually heard within four weeks after conviction.

Appeals Quickly Disposed Of.

A large number of appeals are disposed of without the appearance of counsel on either side. I once heard fourteen such appeals passed upon in 50 minutes. The cases were apportioned among the three judges, and in each case one of the judges, with the papers before him, stated the facts of the case, the grounds of the appeal, and the decision of the court.

One is impressed by the care with which every case is examined, and the entire freedom from technical features. No matter of form and no mistake in any procedural step is permitted to have any effect upon the prisoner's right to a hearing on the merits, and the worst that can happen is for corrections to be called for on the suggestion of the judges where they are deemed essential.

The English system of procedure has been largely adopted in all the British colonies, so that the administration of justice is now enjoying high popular credit in every part of the English speaking world except the United States. It is quite time that this country should seriously set about a thorough re-examination of the problems of judicial administration, with a view to emancipating it from the inherited traditions which have almost destroyed its vitality and power.

Georgian, Traveling Official, Gives Timely Advice

Editor Constitution: Friends have asked me from time to time to let them head from me in my travels. For near nine years I have been either traveling for the railroads or for the interstate commerce commission in the valuation of carrier lands, my home being in Macon, Ga.

Conditions in Georgia.

A short time ago I was in south Georgia for a few months, working from one side of the state to the other, and then a short time in north Georgia. Considering the conditions in that country for past five years, the people have done well, for many have sacrificed and pulled through a condition which had seemed hopeless.

Everywhere I found them complaining of high taxes and distrust of public officials. Many I found had been led by politicians into believing that to stop public improvements and congress would lessen the tax rate, and therefore against Georgia taking such steps for progress in keeping with other states, and that will induce industries and wealth into Georgia such as other states are doing, which is the only logical and possible means by which taxes can be lowered or ever has been lowered.

I also found in most every city or village one faction fighting another faction; and little cooperation for the common good. I found state politicians with knives at each other's throat and practically little cooperation for the good of Georgia.

Increase Wealth To Lower Taxes.

Office seekers in Georgia have one great hobby, one great conceivable scheme to get votes: Decrease taxes. But for nine years I have traveled from one part of this union to the other I have never known tax burdens to be lifted from people except by continual improvements and increased wealth. I have seen places where all improvements and prosperity stopped and taxes became a burden.

There is one way to make people forget taxes in Georgia, and but one.

What Georgia Must Do.

The onrush has started in southern states of industries going south, and Georgia must have her share. A few of such industries about Pittsburgh with the vast pay rolls scattered over Georgia means doubling the population in but a few years, and now towns become cities, farms double and treble in value and wealth so increase that taxes will sink into insignificance.

Let people run for public office and get it upon merit. Let statesmen be elected, for statesmen will not appeal to prejudice and to hatred or sacrifice the wealth and honor of the state for their own selfish ambitions.

When public improvements, prosperity and the wealth of the state are involved, let politicians of the state and individuals composing the different factions in towns and counties bury their hatchets. Then, and not until then, will Georgia come into her own and what she deserves. It is up to us, and the hour is now.

RODGERS TO SLEEP IN GRAVE OF HONOR

Washington, August 28.—Highest honors of the navy, in whose annals his name has been added to those of many illustrious forbears, will be paid to Commander John Rodgers when he is buried here in Arlington national cemetery Tuesday.

There will be a full military funeral for the aviator who escaped death by privation in mid-Pacific last year to plunge to his death in an ordinary flight such as army and navy fliers take every day, the navy department announced today.

The body of the commander will be moved tonight from Philadelphia to the home of his parents in Havre De Grace, Md., where it will remain until Monday afternoon. A service there will be followed by burial in the national cemetery here.

Tributes were paid to Rodgers today by naval officers under whom he served. Rear Admiral W. A. Moffat, chief of the bureau of aeronautics, in a message of condolence to the flier's mother, expressed hope that "you will find consolation in the fact that your son has added distinction to an already distinguished name." Rodgers was assistant chief of the bureau for seven months, and was transferred at his own request to active duty because he found an office job irksome.

Acting Secretary of the Navy, Admiral E. W. Eberle, who has known Rodgers since the commander was a midshipman at Annapolis, praised him as "an officer and a gentleman of rugged character and of sterling quality, an excellent seaman and a fine leader of men."

Colleagues of Rodgers today expressed belief that an unexpected air pocket or jammed controls caused his plane to fall into the Delaware river in the sudden crash that pinned him and his mechanician in the cockpit. The mechanic, Aviation Machinist's Mate Samuel Shultz, is critically ill in the Philadelphia naval hospital.

The navy will carry out the flight of the two new PN-10 planes which Rodgers had gone to Philadelphia to inspect and which he was to pilot to San Diego, Calif., by way of the Panama canal, in October. These planes are improved types of the plane in which the commander attempted to fly to Hawaii.

COTTON YIELD CUT BY PESTS

food stuffs and an overproduction of melons and peaches, the crops have been declared as not profitable to growers.

A summary of the condition of cotton in counties in this section follows:

Terrell, crop will be short fully 5,000 bales; Wayne, crop 3,000 bales short; Coffee, 2,500 bales short; Irwin, crop damaged by both flea and weevil; Ware, crop best in seven years; Augusta, 10 per cent increase in yield; Bulloch, 10,000 bales decrease seen; Burke, will make 40,000 bales, same as last year; Screven, 8,000 bales short; Wilcox, crop damaged 40 per cent; Turner, faces 25 per cent decrease in yield; Worth, acreage increased but yield will be cut 6,000 bales; Clay, farmers in good condition; Sumter, big cut in yield seen with crop not profitable; Crisp, farmers will make money this year; Bleckley, yield will be increased from 5,000 bales last year to 7,500; Stewart, 25 per cent damaged with lower prices; Lowndes, big yield is seen; Dooly, yield will be 10 per cent increased; Macon, crop set at 15,000 bales; Turner, yield will be increased 1,000 bales; Peach, all crops fine, cotton yield about same as last year; Bibb, 2,500 to 3,000 bales seen.

Flea Hits Madison.

Danielsville, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—Damage to the cotton crop in Madison county by fleas is set at 50 per cent with no appearance of weevils. There was a 20 per cent increase in acreage and it is estimated that the yield this year will be 10 per cent over that of 1925.

The corn yield will be 60 per cent better than last year. Farmers as a whole will lose money, few will break even, but no money will be cleared.

Half Crop in Elbert.

Elberton, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—On account of the damage by fleas, cotton farmers of Elbert say they will do well to get half a crop. Some stalks have no squares at all on them. Even at that the crop will be at least 50 per cent better than it was last year, about 12,000 bales.

Wheat and oat crops were the largest in the history of the county, most corn is late but promises to be fine, alfalfa is good with high price.

Newton Off 50 Per Cent.

Covington, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—Cotton in Newton county has been cut off 50 per cent by the fleas, with weevils doing very little damage. It is estimated the total crop will be 6,500 bales.

Corn, hay and bean crops are fine. Farmers will clear little money this year.

Good Crop in Banks.

Homer, Ga., August 28.—(Special.) Early cotton in Banks county is good but crop is late. There are no weevils, but the hopper flea has done damage. The yield will be about the same as last year. Farmers say they will make enough to pay for fertilizer and taxes with no profit.

Other crops are good, including a fine grain crop, which has been harvested.

Athens Section Fine.

Athens, Ga., August 28.—(Special.) Crops in the Piedmont section of Georgia are better than in 1925 due to the drouth last year. The largest grain crop in history has been harvested with kindred crops, corn, hay and potatoes also much better than last year.

Cotton crop is expected to double the 1925 crop in spite of flea damage.

Promising in Walker.

Lafayette, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—The cotton crop in Walker county is very promising. The flea did small damage with practically no boll weevils. Heavy rains have done some damage. The total crop will be around 7,000 bales compared with 5,000 last year.

Crop conditions give promise of being nearer normal than any year since 1920. There is a feeling of optimism among the farmers.

PELLAGRA CURED OR MONEY REFUNDED

Caliste Conant Takes Part In Tallulah Falls Fund

CALISTE CONANT HUDSON.

Caliste Conant Hudson, musical monologist, who has charmed audiences all over the country with her tuneful tales, will be a headline feature of the Fashion Review that is to be staged in the city auditorium on Tuesday evening, September 14, as a benefit for the Passie Fenton Ottley scholarship endowment fund of Tallulah Falls Industrial school.

Of striking figure and radiant personality, possessed of a rare and refreshing art, Caliste Conant stepped from Chicago society a few years ago and made for herself a unique place on the vaudeville stage. She followed her success with an unbroken series of triumphs extending over a period of five years, during which she scored time and time again as a big-time Keith attraction.

Triumphs Repeated.

From Chicago to the Pacific coast she held a place on the Orpheum circuit, bringing tributes from the foremost dramatic critics in the country. At the end of five years when she was at the height of her fame Caliste Conant left the vaudeville stage and the Keith banner to embark upon a new venture—a concert tour. And her triumphs were repeated. Wherever she appeared her genius was acclaimed.

Though she only recently came to the south her fame had come before her and success followed. One of her first appearances took her to Miama late in January where she achieved a new triumph at the Clyde Court apartments. Her sponsor on that occasion was Mrs. Caroline Snyder, and the list of patronesses included many names from Miami's blue book.

Praised by Critic.

Speaking of her performance Sara Hamilton, staff writer for The Miami Herald, said:

"Not often anywhere can people hear so good an entertainer as Caliste Conant Hudson, who gave a concert at the Clyde Court apartments last evening. Drawing character sketches in song while one plays his own accompaniment is not easy. It is musical tight-rope walking, for the slightest shade of wrong expression in tone or gesture is swallowed whole by the alert attention of the audience. But an act with dramatic songs—simple ones with humorous turns—can be made an art, we decided last night. Each number had vivid drama deftly handled—and the drama of Caliste Conant Hudson is perfect.

"We like the light that she throws on life. She sees the exquisite humor in the child who is proud of having the mumps. 'Skinny,' written by Mrs. Clare Briggs about her husband's cartoon hero, swaggered with awkward youth; 'Fairies Lullaby' told that the mind is made by fairies wings; 'Grandmother's Quilt' said in song that its patchwork of colors is like the queer assortment of events in life; the pathetic 'Chums' and the farcifal 'Woodman, Spare that Tree' sound too frail for print, when heard they wear true worth."

Tuneful Tale Teller.

A few years ago Caliste Conant became Caliste Conant Hudson, and shortly thereafter she came to Atlanta for a brief stay. Her husband's business took him east and Atlanta lost a charming woman—for a time. Recently the Hudsons returned to make this city their home and with plans for the Fashion Review just then taking shape Mrs. Hudson was asked to contribute her talent to the program. With the gracious manner that is inseparable from the woman she consented. When she was a mere slip of a girl she had appeared in the various benefits sponsored by Chicago society; she continued that practice when she was a Keith headliner, and she has appeared time and time again for some worthy charity during her brilliant career.

Mrs. Hudson refers to herself as a "tuneful teller of tales." That is the one descriptive line that the Keith and Orpheum theaters used in her billing. What she actually does is hardly expressed in the phrase. Her personality is radiant, her art supreme. She rings drama and poetry, humor and pathos out of words and music. She endows the song with her genius and the result is as irresistible and refreshing as April rain.

Gain in Franklin.

Carnesville, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—The Franklin county cotton crop is infested with fleas but the crop is much better than last year. It is estimated the total yield will be 15,000 bales compared with 10,500 bales last year.

All told, conditions are better than last year with the best corn crop ever grown here.

Fair Crop in Cobb.

Marietta, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—Crop outlook in Cobb county is fair. Heavy damage has been reported by the flea with weevil appearance negligible. The total yield is set at about 8,000 bales, a little less than last year.

Bumper crops of corn, oats, hay, alfalfa and other cover crops. Truck and produce crops extra fine.

Hall Prospects Good.

Gainesville, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—Farmers say crop prospects are much better in Hall county this year than last. The cotton yield is expected to be better than last year, there being little damage from pests. General crops, corn, hay, peas, etc., are the best in years.

Yield Cut in Polk.

Cedartown, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—Damage from Texas flea is estimated to cut the cotton yield in Polk county about half. The stalks look fine but are sparsely fruited. The total will be about half what it was last year.

Except for cotton, the farmers have good crops.

Fleas Hit Bartow.

Cartersville, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—Reports from Bartow county show fleas have done much damage and now the army worm is appearing. The yield is expected to be about the same as in 1925.

The grain crop was good and other crops are fine.

Gain in Wilkes.

Washington, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—The Wilkes county cotton crop is late but the yield is expected to be from 10,000 to 12,000 bales, compared with 8,000 last year. Weevil damage negligible with the flea "in our midst."

Other crops are fine and the county is in better condition financially than it has been in several years.

Good in Taliaferro.

Crawfordville, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—There is some complaint of the Texas flea in Taliaferro county cotton fields, but the yield will be better than last year. The acreage is about the same as last year.

Crops were made with less expense this year than heretofore, therefore they are in better condition.

Barrow Crop Hurt.

Winder, Ga., August 28.—(Special.) Flea damage left some cotton fields in Barrow county stripped and the yield promises to be about the same as 1925, with acreage about the same. The price is lower than in 1925.

Following the drouth of 1925, this year's crop was expensive and no money will be cleared.

Fleas Hit Whitfield.

Dalton, Ga., August 28.—(Special.) Due to damage by the Texas flea the cotton crop in Whitfield county will be less than last year. The stalks are vigorous but are not fruited.

There will be a splendid yield of corn and hay and other crops.

Coweta Hit by Flea.

Newnan, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—Texas flea has cut the cotton crop in Coweta about 50 per cent with slight damage from weevils. With increase of 20 per cent in acreage the yield will be cut about 20 per cent.

Largest corn crop in a number of years is in prospect, also hay and cane are fine. Farmers will just about break even.

Increase in Jackson.

Jefferson, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—Texas flea did and is doing considerable damage to the cotton crop in Jackson county. No damage from weevils. Acreage about same as last year with prospects of total yield being increased 15 to 20 per cent over last year.

Other crops good but indications are there will be small profits.

Small Crop in Upson.

Thomaston, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—Upson county will make a small cotton crop due to damage by Texas flea and slight damage from weevils. About 3,300 bales will be grown which is slight gain over last year.

Cane and corn crops are good.

Harris Crop Damaged.

Hamilton, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—The cotton yield in Harris county will be cut by both weevils and fleas. Corn is fine, potatoes, cane, peas, peanuts about normal.

Farmers expect to pay expenses but won't clear any money.

Crop Cut in Jasper.

Monticello, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—There was a 50 per cent increase in the cotton crop in Jasper county this year but the yield will be under that of last year, with price running six cents lower than 1925. Texas flea has done more damage than weevils.

Corn, wheat, peanuts, cane, pecans, oats and all other crops fairly good with abundance of peaches.

Crop Late in Lamar.

Barnesville, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—Lamar cotton crop is late and yield will depend on late crop, due to damage at first by fleas with weevil damage negligible. Flea damage is greater than weevil damage ever has been, farmers say. Slight increase in acreage with yield expected to be about some as last year, 4,000 bales.

Grain, corn, pecans and all other crops better than they have been in several years. Some improvement is seen in financial conditions of farmers.

Fleas Hit Madison.

Dallas, Ga., August 28.—(Special.) Due to flea damage to the early crop the cotton yield in Paulding is an unknown quantity yet, as the top crop will determine the yield. Acreage is increased over last year.

Other crops are good but farmers say there will be little profit in this year's crops.

Yield Cut in Fayette.

Fayetteville, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—Fayette county cotton is estimated damaged at least 60 per cent by fleas with no damage by weevils. There was an increase of about 15 per cent in acreage, but total yield will be cut about 25 per cent. The price is 18 cents compared with 24 last year.

Corn, hay, potatoes, peas are fine.

Butts County Crop.

Jackson, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—There was considerable increase in the acreage planted in cotton in Butts county this year, but damage from the flea has been heavy and opinions differ as to whether there will be an increase over 1925 in total yield, which was 4,700 bales.

Other crops are the best grown in years. The pepper crop is better than last year and the cannery will open in September. The county is in better condition than it was in 1925.

Carroll Yield Cut.

Carrollton, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—With some increase in acreage, but heavy damage from fleas, Carroll's cotton crop is expected to total from 20,000 to 25,000 bales compared with 31,000 last year. The price is five cents under last year.

With exception of cotton, all crops are good, but the money crop looks short on account of cotton.

Meriwether Hard Hit.

Greenville, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—Meriwether cotton has been badly damaged by the flea and while the acreage is increased over last year the output will be considerably less, probably one-third. The crop will not be profitable.

The county is growing the best corn crop seen in 25 years, with fair prospects for other crops.

Flea Hits Henry.

McDonough, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—The cotton crop in Henry county was increased in acreage more than 30 per cent, but damage by fleas will cut yield to about 10,000 bales compared with 9,500 last year.

All other crops such as corn, fruits and vegetables are as good as ever grown here but low prices for products will cut the money yield. The farmers will hardly break even financially.

GENEVA TO COUNT COMMERCE PLANES

Geneva, August 28.—(AP)—The troublesome problem of how to treat commercial aviation in any convention bearing on the reduction of armaments was settled finally today by the members of the preliminary disarmament conference, in a manner to satisfy the United States, Argentina and other countries of the western hemisphere and for the first time in weeks unanimity was reached on a question of first import.

The solution provides that while commercial aviation should be permitted to develop freely and unrestrictedly to the maximum commercial requirements of each country, its military value should be taken into account in framing any convention for the limitation of armaments, but that in so doing, particular attention should be paid to the regional aspect of the problem.

This embodies the principal for which the Americans have fought since the beginning of the conference, namely that reduction of armaments is essentially a regional problem and best treated as such.

Today's decision cannot be construed, it is believed, as interfering with the development of commercial aviation in the United States, since the American air service under no circumstances could be considered as a menace to Europe, nor European air forces a menace to the western hemisphere.

Should the principle be applied at the future disarmament conference, it will be for European countries to decide how far continental commercial aviation should be restricted.

The delegates also voted that in fixing methods for reducing land forces a distinction should be made between nations having conscription and those possessing standing armies.

FLORIDA AIRWAYS BUYS THREE PLANES

with brakes on the landing gear. Delivery of the machines, according to Major Chambers, will be made by September 15.

Major Chambers initiated what was said to be the first commercial airline in America last December when he purchased four single motor, all metal, eight-passenger monoplanes from the Ford Motor company and opened a line between Tampa and Miami. At that time he announced the proposed extension of the line to Atlanta.

Florida Airways, Major Chambers said, also has contracted for two triple engined Ford, all metal monoplanes for use on a proposed airline between Miami and Havanna, this winter. The cabin planes to be used on the Tampa-Atlanta run will be of the same type manufactured by Eddie Stinson recently which created considerable comment because of their "inherent stability." Stinson recently flew one of his planes from Cleveland to Detroit without touching the stick after taking off and before landing.

MAIL SERVICE TO START DURING SEPTEMBER.

Plans are under way for the definite establishment of a regular schedule of air travel for both passengers and mails between Atlanta and Tampa, Fla., it was announced Saturday night by E. K. Large, postmaster.

Mr. Large stated that the United States government had a contract with Florida Airways, Inc., covering the carrying of government mails on the proposed airline between Atlanta and Tampa and it was first intended to have the airline started in June. By an agreement with the airways company and the government, the date was postponed until August 1 and Mr. Large stated Saturday that his last communication from the heads of the postal department stated that the airline is scheduled to be opened in September.

A tentative schedule was mapped out some time ago which calls for airplanes carrying both passengers and mails to leave Candler field at 7 o'clock in the morning and arrive in Tampa during the late afternoon and another plane leave Tampa about the same time and arrive here late in the afternoon.

The proposed sched according to Mr. Large would not work out the same during the winter months as during long days during the summer months and negotiations are under way between the postal department and the Florid Airways to rearrange the proposed schedule of leaving and arriving at Candler field.

The contract with the government concerning the carrying of mails is virtually the same as that with the private owned railroads, it was stated Saturday night.

KIWANIS MEET SET FOR AUGUSTA

Waycross, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—The annual convention of the Kiwanis clubs of Georgia will be held in Augusta, Wednesday and Thursday, October 21-22, according to a call issued by State Governor Harry D. Reed from the offices of the organization in Waycross.

Judge Reed has returned from a conference with the Augusta club with reference to the program for the convention, and he states that Augusta is preparing to entertain 1,000 delegates and visitors. One of the biggest features of the convention will be a Richmond county barbecue.

Conferences will be held on agricultural development, child welfare, citizenship and other subjects in which Georgia Kiwanians are especially interested.

Among prominent Kiwanians who will deliver addresses are O. Sam Cummings, international trustee of Florida and J. Felix Harvey, governor of the Carolinas Kiwanis district. An address will also be delivered by Miss Rhoda Kauffman, secretary of the Georgia board of public welfare.

It is expected, Judge Reed states, that the Augusta convention will be the biggest and best ever held in Georgia, and will mark the great growth and influence of Kiwanis in Georgia during recent years.

The convention last year was held at Albany, and was regarded as a record breaker. Elaborate plans are being made for the 1926 meeting, and Judge Reed has expressed his appreciation for the efforts already put forth by the Augusta club.

Governor Reed also announces the recent appointment of Georgia Kiwanians on International Kiwanis committees. International President Ammerman, of Pennsylvania, has appointed Dr. C. C. Harrold, Macon, as a member of the committee on underprivileged child work; Robert H. Jones, Jr., Atlanta, as a member of the committee on the international convention program, and Dan G. Bickers, Savannah, a member of the publicity committee.

ASSERTS MEXICO HELPING ENEMIES

with Mexico, and Mexico has nothing to do with the League of Nations," said Foreign Minister Saenz today.

He referred to the announcement that Nicaragua has protested to the league against an alleged filibustering expedition sent to Nicaragua from Mexico to aid the revolutionists in the Central American republic.

Senor Saenz added that the Mexican government had no knowledge of any Mexican interference in the Nicaraguan revolution and said that if any individual Mexicans were there as revolutionists or munitions runners all President Chamoore had to do was to capture them and seize the munitions.

"It is entirely Nicaragua's affair, and the Mexican government had nothing to do with it," Senor Saenz declared.

The protest of Nicaragua to the League of Nations is the first Latin-American dispute to come before it, and has led to the question what the attitude of the league shall be toward controversies arising on the American continent. The covenant of the league prohibits the league taking any action which would affect the validity of the Monroe doctrine.

Mexico is not a member of the league, but advices from Geneva say that the secretary general of the league, Sir Eric Drummond, has sent copies of the protest to all members of the organization and Mexico as well.

It is provided by the covenant that non-members of the league shall be invited to accept the obligations of membership when a dispute arises between members and non-members.

GREAT HORSE SHOW PLANNED FOR ATLANTA

Atlanta on their way south. The Louisville show will be held the week of September 13, followed by the Nashville show and then the Memphis show.

The famous Minton stables, of Barbourville, Ky., also will show at Atlanta this year their entries, including the Feudist, Mountain Laurel, The Golfer, Mystic Dawn, Cumberland Knight, Sara Kathleen, The Target and Mountain Ivy. The Target is full brother to The Feudist and bids fair to rival the remarkable championship record of The Feudist. The Henry M. Hobbie stables, of Montgomery, will show Morgan Lee, said to be the finest five-gaited gelding in America. Opportunities of Atlantans and Georgians to see Flowing Gold and Morgan Lee compete against each other will be one of the star attractions of the Atlanta horse show.

Prepare Entry Blanks.

Entry blanks are being prepared to be sent to horse owners in Augusta, Savannah, Nashville and Memphis and from the interest that is being evidenced there is every indication of one of the best horse shows that has ever been held in this city, which in years gone by was famous the country over for the high character of horse exhibitions that were held each year. The remarkable success that was had at the horse show at Garden Hills a few months ago insures the high type of program that will be offered horse lovers of Atlanta and Georgia.

Miss Marjorie McLeod is secretary of the new organization and information regarding local entries can be obtained from her in the near future. She is in charge of the riding stables at Garden Hills.

Associated with Mr. Adair, Colonel Kendrick and Mr. McDuffie include Major Trammel Scott, Homer Thompson, Charles H. Black, Walter T. Candler, Frederic Paxon, A. J. Ryan, Fred J. Jeter, Miss Myra Scott, Al Thorwell, Charles H. Cox, Warren Toole, Frank Stewart, James L. Dickey and a number of other prominent Atlantans.

told today revealed, was marked by the inundation of the marshlands by giant waves rolling in from the Gulf of Mexico, overturning boats and sweeping away all before them.

Members of the seaplane's crew said they viewed many small boats grounded and overturned in the marshlands and fears were expressed that other bodies would be found as the search through the bayous and outlying sections continues.

TEN PERSONS DROWNED ON FELICITY ISLANDS.

Houma, La., August 28.—(AP)—Ten persons, residents of a fishing camp on Felicity islands, near Bayou Lafourche, were drowned in the waves from the Gulf of Mexico which submerged the island Wednesday night as the tropical hurricane swept in from the gulf. Two others, members of the same camp, still are missing and believed drowned.

Those identified were: Three members of a Noquin family, father, mother and a little girl; Claude Dupont, of Houma; two members of a Bouvier family from Bayou Lafourche; and four other unidentified men. Charles Dupont, son of Claude Dupont, and a man named Dupre still are missing.

Another family of Noquins from the same community told of taking refuge in a skiff which they tied to an oak tree during the storm. For a time during the night, they said, they could see the lights in the fishing camp as the skiff bobbed about, straining at the rope's end. Later, however, they said, the lights disappeared and when morning came the camp was gone.

Home Magazine Published By Avondale Management

Typical Avondale home on Exeter road, a part of the big development program.

A subject of warm appeal to human instincts is that of Atlanta's newest magazine, dedicated to lovers of home. The publication is "Homes and Home Ownership," published by the management of Avondale Estates, Atlanta's new suburban city.

This magazine, making its appearance Saturday, is filled throughout its 36 pages with photographic reproductions in color of beautiful home types, and plans of model homes, along with practical information as to selection of construction material, lighting and heating arrangements, landscape gardening, and financial statistics, most of the articles bearing the names as contributors of Atlanta business leaders in the respective lines.

Typical articles are "Use of Lumber in Home Building," by C. A. Matthews; "The Enduring Charm of Brick," by S. D. Mullins; "Healthful Home Heating," by E. Bunnell; "Lighting Your Home," by R. H. Scott; "Selection of Proper Roof," by George J. Lawler; "Importance of Good Paint and Painting," by Harold N. Cooledge, and "Glass as Used in the Home," by T. E. Winslow.

Operations of the Avondale home purchasing plan, with its economy of wholesale purchasing, planning and financing, are revealed in figures of practical helpfulness by John H. Byrley, general manager of Avondale Estates. Copies of the magazine are available without cost at downtown offices of Avondale Estates at 169 Peachtree street, or at the field office on the property.

POLITICAL FEVER JUMPS IN ATLANTA

means a vote for the other. They will combine in the convention to carry out their contract."

Predicts Steele Victory.

William Schley Howard, speaking for Mr. Steele, predicted a "rural landslide" for his protege, stating that Sims "just ain't running in the country districts." He declared he could not discuss the record of Congressman Upshaw because the latter "has been in the national house for about eight years and has no record—he hasn't done anything."

Next in line of fervor and importance came seekers of the mayoralty chair. Robert A. Gordon, candidate, warned his hearers of "infestation of Atlanta by a criminal element" which he claimed soon will so enmesh the city in its tentacles of crime and lawlessness that it can not extricate itself. He declared he will put down the rising and fast growing undesirable colony and purge the city.

Charles M. Ford, also a mayoralty candidate, lifted the screen from his record as an alderman from the tenth, and proudly displayed his activities in that post, predicating his claim for votes on the businesslike and progressive methods and achievements in that position.

J. Allen Couch, of the fifth, also seeking the mayorship, told of his long service in council as an alderman from that section of the city, and laid claim to careful consideration of voters for his fearless stand in all "matters pertaining to progress and prosperity."

I. N. Ragsdale, former member of council and Fulton county commissioners, who is in the mayor's race, made a strong appeal to voters, and told of his long service as a public servant.

Jack Power, speaking for Dr. Huff, hit "petit politics" in city affairs and declared that Dr. Huff "wears no man's collar and is free to give the city the advantage of his long and successful business activities."

Only two candidates for the legislature from Fulton county appeared on the speaker's platform—Miss Bessie Kempton and J. F. Gordy. Mrs. E. N. Gibbs, a candidate, was present but did not speak.

Mr. Gordy said he would refrain from making campaign "promises or pledges" because they are for the purpose of getting elected and are not intended to be serious. He said he has no platform, but appealed for support on his business ability.

Miss Kempton Speaks.

Miss Kempton paraded her record, stating that she was instrumental in a large degree for passage of the viaducts bill, permitting construction of the Pryor street and Central avenue viaducts. She also claimed much credit for the child labor bill, the firemen's and policemen's pension laws and the veterans' compensation act.

Miss Kempton was a member of the W. & A. commission appointed to settle the dispute with the city of Chattanooga and was a member of the rules committee of the house, one of the most important committee assignments of that body. She also held a number of other committee appointments.

John L. Cone and Judge A. W. Callaway, both candidates for the post of judge of the first division of the recorder's court, made strong speeches in their own behalf.

Judge Murphy M. Holloway, of the second division of the court, who is seeking re-election, declared that he will continue to serve the people of Atlanta and to protect the lives, health and property of law-abiding citizens."

C. Don Miller, Thomas Goodwin and Arthur Knowles, all seeking the same position, made able speeches in behalf of themselves.

Councilmanic Speakers.

Oscar Williamson, alderman from the ninth, who is seeking re-election, told of his close association and cooperation in all matters pertaining to public improvements and an equitable division of the city's finances looking towards a fair distribution of needed civic improvements. Alvin Richardson, also a candidate for the same place, spoke.

Foster Hunter and J. C. Murphy, candidates for alderman from the eleventh ward, also spoke. Robert F. Pennington, who is seeking election as alderman from the first and who is opposed by Dr. Fred Morris, told of his services as a member of city council.

Dr. Morris assailed what he termed the "teaching of the theory of evolution" in the school system and stated if he is elected alderman he will stop this. Mr. Pennington, who followed him declared he could best correct a "bad school curriculum in the school system by remaining on the board of education if such condition exists."

Dr. Morris recited a poem by request.

NEW YORK PLANS FIGHT ON CRIME

Rochester, N. Y., August 28.—One of the most comprehensive formulas yet devised for combatting crime was completed here today by New York Association of Federal and State Attorneys, before it closed a two-day conference.

The attorneys prepared seven propositions, including two constitutional amendments, which will be presented to the state legislature. The recommendations are:

Prohibition on sale of revolvers and pistols.

A constitutional amendment providing that trial jurors may acquit or convict on a 10-to-2 vote.

A constitutional amendment providing that trial by jury may be waived except in death penalty cases.

A statutory amendment providing that judges may pass sentence immediately upon conviction instead of exercising two-day discretionary power, as at present.

A suggestion to cut short by a year the time between arrest and final disposition of the case by speeding up preparation of trial records for the appellate court.

Abrogation of the rule that a thief's testimony against a "fence," the receiver of stolen goods, must be corroborated by independent testimony.

Insanity plea to be filed by defense counsel at the opening of the trial.

EIGHT ARE INJURED IN AUTO CRASHES

Four persons were seriously injured in automobile accidents Saturday and a third was slightly hurt.

The most seriously injured was Fred Bush, 7, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Bush, of 20 Austin avenue. He was struck down by an automobile at Euclid and Washita avenues and may have sustained a concussion of the brain.

He was taken to Wesley Memorial hospital, but doctors had not completed their examination Saturday night. They said he probably received several fractured ribs and concussion of the brain, with other minor injuries.

The driver of the machine which struck the child was W. J. McKinney, of Kirkwood, according to Police Lieutenant J. W. Barfield. McKinney was driving west on Euclid avenue and the child was playing with a toy wagon, Lieutenant Barfield reported. Suddenly the boy left his wagon and ran directly in front of the machine, the report stated. No case was made.

J. T. Langley, 65, of Marietta, was badly bruised about the chest Saturday afternoon when he became crowded between an automobile and a street car. He was treated at Grady hospital but no fractured ribs were discovered and doctors bandaged his chest and released him. He did not tell doctors any details of the accident and no report of it was made at police station.

The third person hurt in accidents Saturday was Mrs. J. B. Mitchell, 31, of Logansville. Her right foot was crushed Saturday afternoon when an automobile ran over it. She was treated at Grady hospital and released. No report of the accident was filed with police.

Ruth Harris and Viola Herndon, negro women, of 96 Griffin street, were seriously hurt Saturday afternoon, when the car Viola was driving overturned in a collision with another machine, driven by James Maloy, negro, of Raspberry alley, at Hilliard street and Auburn avenue. Maloy was not hurt. The two women were taken to Grady hospital for treatment. The accident was investigated by Patrolmen B. E. Moon and J. R. Jackson.

William A. Crawley, soldier, stationed at Fort McPherson, was struck down and seriously hurt Saturday afternoon as he was crossing Pryor street at Rawson street, by an automobile driven by Miss Ann Friedman, of 583 Washington street, according to police.

Crawley was taken to Atlanta hospital and doctors said he suffered a sprained back and lacerations and bruises about the head and face. Miss Friedman drove her machine on the sidewalk in an attempt to avoid striking him. In the car with Miss Friedman was Harry Adams, of Tampa, Fla. A case of reckless driving was made by Plainclothes Officer W. O. Hullard, who investigated the accident.

Three persons were badly shaken up in a collision between the machine in which they were riding and an Inman street car at Five Points. Those in the machine were J. E. Cox, driver; Miss Elsie Wilson and W. R. Marr, all of 362 West Fourth street. None of the three was seriously injured. The street car was in charge of Motorman F. M. Rudark and Conductor C. B. Smith, according to Patrolman W. D. Nash, who investigated the accident.

THREE ARE BRUISED INTO AUTO COLLISION

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Hartness, of 14 Kirkwood avenue, were severely bruised Saturday night when a truck in which they were riding was in collision with an automobile driven by C. J. Niblett, of 371 Washington street. Niblett also was severely bruised.

The police were told by Hartness that while driving on Kirkwood avenue, near Powell street, Niblett's automobile ran into the truck from the rear.

Charges of reckless driving were preferred against both men.

Roads Earn More In First 6 Months, New Reports Say

New York, August 28.—Railroads have had a most prosperous first half year and prospects are bright for a record net operating income for the year, according to earnings reports of various railroads and the monthly aggregate statements of the interstate commerce commission.

"Net railway operating income" is the balance after expenses, taxes and operating rentals available for fixed charges and dividends have been deducted.

If the net for the first six months bears the same proportion to the year's net as it averaged in 1925 and 1924, the total for the year, according to the I. C. C. reports, should be approximately $1,265,000,000, compared with $1,136,984,000 in 1925 and $986,717,000 in 1924. These figures are for class 1 roads and switching and terminal companies.

Railroads in the midwest are sharing in the prosperity. President Gorman, of the Rock Island railroad, who is completing a tour of northern Minnesota, where the road has large land holdings, was very optimistic in a statement at Duluth this week.

"Business Is Good."

"Business is good and is improving," he said. He pointed out that Rock Island had the largest month in its history in July with a net profit that established a new high record.

The Chicago, Great Western railroad, according to the railroad expert of Dow Jones' financial service, should earn this year $1,000,000 or more, after the necessary deduction, compared with $628,920 in 1925 or $601,508 in 1924.

The July statement of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad showed an increase of $4,996,762, or 24.3 per cent in gross revenues over the corresponding month of the preceding year. There is little doubt, the report indicates, that the Santa Fe will enjoy further gains in the remaining five months, as it is estimated that only about 50 per cent of the wheat crop in its territory has been moved.

July Shows Increase.

An increase of $276,610 was shown in the July report of the Illinois Central system's net operating income, which was $2,298,221 as against $2,022,611 in July, 1925. The road earned a net operating income of $15,876,909 for the first seven months of 1926 compared to $15,332,340, in the same period last year.

The Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis railroad, in July earned a net operating income of $1,434,369 against $1,266,512 in July, 1925. The railroad's report shows earnings of $9,486,900 for the first seven months against $9,278,327, in the same period last year.

While setting no new records for this year, the net of the Pennsylvania railroad for July was exceeded only by the month of June. Net railway operating income for July was $9,859,836, which compares with $10,022,236 in June, 1926.

Other carriers showing large increases in income were Union Pacific, with a gain of 37.5 during July over the same month a year ago, Norfolk and Western, Southern Pacific, which closed July with an increase in net of 43 per cent, and Great Northern.

Rogers' Hawaiian Flight

:: DEAD COMMANDER FAILED IN ATTEMPT ::

Was Last of Air Adventures

San Francisco, August 28.—(AP)—The Hawaiian flight of Commander John Rodgers and his crew of four was the third of a trio of historic air adventures by the military and naval forces of the United States, no less great than the other two ventures, although it did end in failure and near tragedy. The first was the crossing of the Atlantic by the naval sea plane NC-4, and second the circumnavigation of the globe by army airmen.

Commander Rodgers was fatally injured when his plane fell into shallow water of the Delaware river, near Philadelphia, Friday afternoon. His mechanic, Samuel Schultz, of Philadelphia, suffered a broken back.

In two great double motored sea planes, the PN-9 No. 1 and the PN-9 No. 3, built especially for this cruise, Commander Rodgers and Lieutenant Allen P. Snody, set out from a choppy lee mooring in San Pablo bay, an arm of San Francisco bay, shortly after noon on August 31, 1925, with Hawaii as their destination. As markers for the flight the navy had stationed a destroyer at each 200 knot point along the way.

Snody, commanding the PN-9 No. 3, was forced to descend because of a broken oil feed line when he was between the first and second destroyers off San Francisco; Rodgers had the flight to himself in the No. 1.

He was heard from regularly throughout the remainder of the day and most of the next day. With the near approach of the sub-tropical night on September 1, however, he flashed the nearest destroyer that he was going through a "hellish" storm and that his supply of gasoline was giving out. An hour later, he dropped his grent bird of passage into the sea and a black silence settled over him and his ship.

His dangling antenna, through which he had kept the world's attention on his feat, was submerged and rendered useless. Swift destroyers swept the seas in search of him and seaplanes spun out from Pearl Harbor and swept the skies. The flashing finger of the radio tried to search him out from a thousand sources. All of these efforts were in vain.

For nine days, he drifted through the storm, wind and calm, always, fortunately in the general direction of his goal. His water supply quickly gave out. He distilled sea water from a still that his mother had given him, using some of the ship woodwork for his fire. When a calm struck, he rigged up a sail from part of a wing cover. He was a dominant figure in his cockpit, spending all of his time there, almost constantly on watch, stealing but a few brief hours for sleep.

Radio operator O. G. Stanz managed to rig up a temporary radio but it did not carry to the closest ship. Once the doughty voyagers watched a big steamer glide by in full daylight. They yelled to it frantically but it went by them and lost its chance for undying fame.

Black forms slithered through the water—sharks. They could see them by day and hear them by night. They were always alongside, timing their speed with the drift of the ship, jowls dripping with expectation of a feast on human flesh; a feast that they were to be denied.

They drifted on to the west, past Oshu, which they saw in the mists but where they feared to land because of jagged shoals that would have ripped the bottom out of their cockle shell craft. After nine days, this drift brought them in sight of the tiny port of Nawiliwili, Island of Kauai. Before he could warp his craft into this haven a United States submarine which had been sent in search of him sighted the seaplane. The adventure was over. Hollow cheeked from lack of food and drooping from exhaustion the crew of five were quartered in the quaint little Hawaiian port while the world was given the story of their return from the valley of death.

Commander Rodgers wrote a vivid account of his flight which was sent over the wires of the Associated Press under his signature. His story dated Honolulu, September 12, 1925, had the distinction of being the first signed dispatch carried by the association. It was the only authorized statement made by Commander Rodgers given to the American public through the newspapers.

British Royalty Try Simple Life Amid Highlands

London, August 28.—With King George taking leisurely shots at the grouse on the moors and Queen Mary playing the role of housewife, the British royal family has settled down to a month's simple life in the Scottish highlands.

The king has invited six of his closest friends, all of them crack shots, to the house party in the Balmoral castle, but the queen has less companionship, spending most of her day walking around the castle grounds, visiting the school children and knitting.

The royal day is planned with an austerity which many other people might find irksome. Before 7:30 a. m. the king's pipe major, Forsythe, can be heard by the castle guests playing the "Cock o' the North" up and down the corridor outside the royal apartments. From that moment the castle bristles with activity.

Chicago Welcomes 'Messiah'

:: THEOSOPHISTS GREET KRISHNAMURTI ::

On Arrival With Mrs. Besant

Chicago, August 28.—(AP)—A quiet young Hindu, Jiddu Krish-Namurti from whom Theosophy awaits the great teacher's message to a modern world, came to Chicago today and met wit hall the grace of the orient the worshipful welcome of his followers and the amazed curiosity of mid-America.

Besieged by throngs of Theosophists who deluged him with garlands of flowers, and confronted by newspaper men and women eager to put on paper evidence of his investment with divine gifts, he had little opportunity for meditation even in the hotel—top bungalow where he sought refuge.

To those who asked, as others asked on Galilee's shores two thousand years ago, "from whence hath this man these things?"—he spoke in parables to explain his theosophical tenents and to interpret his position as the mouthpiece of the God whom theosophy calls the world teacher.

Krishnamurti is about 30 years of age. That age has been computed by the horoscope, for the date of his birth is not known and he may be a year or two older. A slight man, he has the typical facial cast of the Hindu and the same coffee-colored complexion, with a thatch of thick black hair. The occidental cloths he wears in England and America, are chosen with impeccable taste, for the sake of conformity, to avoid appearance of eccentricity, although he believes the loose robes and sandals of India more comfortable.

He is accompanied by Mrs. Annie Bessant, whose ward he has been since infancy and who relates that Christ told her that her charge would be His "physical vehicle." She leaves him, however, to interviewers, lest it be said that he leans on her for guidance in revealing his faith.

tonight they were honored guests at a reception which opened the fortieth American convention of Theosophical society. The society will go tomorrow to Wheaton, Ill., where Mrs. Bessant and Krishnamurti will lay the cornerstone for an American headquarters building.

The convention sessions begin on Monday, continuing for three days, after which the party will make a tour of the country, going to Minneapolis, Omaha, the Pacific coast and back through the south while Mrs. Bessant makes lectures. Krishnamurti has a farm at Ojai, Calif., where he may spend some days.

Increase Seen in Taylor.

Butler, Ga., August 28.—(Special.) Taylor county cotton crop is expected to exceed last year's by 1,000 bales, 8,723 bales being grown in 1925. The increase is caused by slight increase in acreage and absence of weevils and no serious damage by fleas.

Outlook is most favorable for all other crops.

Peabody Admits Coal Contract By Farrington

Chicago, August 28.—(AP)—Frank Farrington, president of District No. 12 of the United Mine Workers of America, which comprises the Illinois coal fields, has signed a contract to work for the Peabody Coal company, "when and if Mr. Farrington resigns as president of the district," Styresant Peabody, head of the coal company, announced tonight.

Mr. Peabody refused to comment on statements of President John L. Lewis of the international miners' union to the effect that Farrington's contract was for three years and at a salary of $25,000 a year. He added that Farrington's duties if he accepts the position will have to do with relations between the miners and their problems and the company.

MACHINIST SCHULTZ HAS HOPE TO RECOVER

Washington, August 28.—(AP)—Hope was held out tonight for the recovery of Samuel J. Schultze, aviation machinist mate who was injured yesterday at Philadelphia in the airplane crash which resulted in the death of Commander John Rodgers.

Rear Admiral Moffett, chief of naval aeronautics, was informed that Schultz suffered two broken vertebraes but that as yet there was no indication that his spinal cord was injured. A plaster cast has been applied and it is believed Schultze's chances are favorable.

MUSICIANS TO GET INCREASE TO $79

Chicago, August 28.—(AP)—Musicians in the seven Shubert theaters last night signed a contract for a salary increase from $72.50 a week to $79.

The two-year contract also provides for $97 a week for extra musicians, instead of $92.

'Smoking-Lounging-Gossip' Room for Women at High's

After about September 5, Atlanta women will have at least one place where they may smoke, far from the madding stares of those to whom a desire for the noxious weed is anathema or at least unusual. Their deveirs to the Lady Nicotine also will be surrounded with a beautiful setting of walnut woodwork and old rose and gray carpets and, best of all, with a plentitude of full length mirrors.

This haven will be provided when the J. M. High company opens its new and enlarged shoe department for women, boys' and children's shoes, which is now being installed.

The smoking-lounging-gossip room (they haven't decided yet what to call it—suggestions will be welcomed by the management) will be in the rear of the shoe department and will be furnished in the same style as the fitting rooms. It is being provided in keeping with the High policy of providing Milady and her sub-deb daughter with all the comforts when selecting the newest thing in brown shoes trimmed in snake and lizard skin—which, by the way, is what Milady and the S-D. D. will wear this season if they hope to be in style.

Plenty of Mirrors.

The S.L.-G. room is to have a plentiful supply of smoking stands and will provide a place where women may take the shine off their noses, or indulge in a quiet restful smoke. It will be luxuriously carpeted and the chairs will be of walnut, uphostered in old rose and gray.

The main department will contain about 3,500 square feet of floor space with the same motif followed in the furnishings. It will be carpeted throughout with a beautiful floor covering following the color scheme adopted for the department. The walnut woodwork extends about halfway to the ceiling and full length mirrors are placed in every available place.

Shoe Shine Stand.

Another feature of the new department is to be a five-chair shoe shine stand where creams, polishes and cleaning fluids for every conceivable shade of foot covering will be kept. The department will specialize in Dorothy Dodd shoes for women, boys and children. A new shipment of the latest models is now en route to Atlanta and soon will be placed on display. The department will open about September 5. It will be managed by T. V. Thrower, assisted by C. C. Gibbs, both of whom have been several years in shoe departments of Atlanta department stores.

Predominant modes for fall, Mr. Thrower said, will be patent leathers and browns trimmed in snake and lizard skins. Of course there will be the more conservative styles, he said, to suit every taste. The department will be new throughout and under new management, and is in keeping with the announced new High policy of providing only the best and the latest for its customers.

Convicts Scatter With But 6 of 25 Fugitives Retaken

Ionia, Mich., August 28.—(AP)—While all available prison and local officers sought 19 prisoners still at large after one of the most daring jail breaks in Michigan's history, made early this morning from Ionia reformatory. Six of those who escaped tonight again were in cells, having been recaptured.

Four were taken into custody this afternoon and this evening two more were arrested by Sheriff Henry J. Cook and two deputies in Nickel Plate, a village six miles northeast of Ionia. The men, William Dursee and William Vaughn, were unarmed and surrendered easily. Both were sentenced from Wayne county (Detroit) for automobile theft.

The capture of Dursee brought the number known to have escaped to 25. His name was not in the list issued this morning by prison authorities.

That many of the other 1,400 inmates of the prison did not join the 24 who got out was due largely to the courage of Ed Haight, deputy warden. Summoned from his home by an outer guard, Haight ran to the scene and arrived as a large group of inmates were coming through the main entrance. Firing his rifle over their heads, Haight forced them back into the prison. No one was severely wounded but several were slightly injured by flying glass.

Reported to Be Armed.

Contrary to earlier reports, only the leaders of the escaped convicts appear to have been armed. Where they obtained the weapons has not been determined. Only yesterday the periodical search of the institution for weapons was begun and was to have been completed today with inspection of the ward in which the outbreak originated.

While the men recaptured today disclaimed any knowledge of a plot, officials are convinced by the dispatch with which the break was carried out that it had been planned for weeks. Evidently by prearrangement a disturbance was created in one of the two prison dormitories. Guards attracted by the commotion were overpowered and stripped of their uniforms. Two of the five leaders donned uniforms and proceeded to the prison yard, where two more guards were overpowered.

Working methodically, they rounded up other guards about the prison until 20 had been overpowered and locked in a cell. With keys taken from the guards, the cells of other prisoners were unlocked. The leaders then went to the office of Roy Sypher, captain of the night guard, where they demanded keys to the outer gate.

Three of the men, Sypher said later, were in favor of killing him, but one of them, Russell Andrus, sentenced from Detroit, dissuaded them. "Let's don't kill him," Andrus said; "the captain always has been a pretty square shooter with us."

Guard Forced to Obey.

Instead of using Sypher's keys, the convicts forced him to order a guard to open the outer door of the administration building. Through this door the prisoners swarmed to the outer gate, where O. Johnson, a guard, was beaten with his own rifle. He was the first armed guard the convicts met. Inside guards are not armed. Before he could recover and sound an alarm, 24 of the convicts had fled, some afoot, others in automobiles they seized. Five machines were taken. Two of them, out of gasoline, were found later, one at Lowell, in Kent county to the west, and the other at Howell, in Livingstone county, east of here.

Besides Ford, Todd and Andrus, the leaders were Victory Chicky, sentenced from Grand Rapids for burglary, and Bert Rice, sentenced from Oakland county for automobile theft.

The men recaptured today were Napoleon Smith and Charles Smith, sentenced from Wayne county (Detroit) on robbery and burglary charges, and Samuel Glick, sentenced from Detroit on a robbery charge. The first two, who were not related, were captured in a wooded section, 19 miles north of here, while Glick was found in a swamp, four miles from prison.

Richard Anderson, sentenced to the reformatory from Kent county on a charge of burglary, was captured on the outskirts of Ionia at about 4 o'clock this evening and sent to join the three previously found. He said he had no part in the plot but had walked out when released.

Warden Charles H. Shean was absent in Detroit at the time of the

Burglars Active To Small Profit Saturday Night

Police and detectives are combing the city for a negro burglar who Friday night entered the home of W. E. Barrett, father of Police Committeeman Ellis B. Barrett, at 280 Jones avenue. The negro was surprised in the act of opening a large cedar chest, by A. T. Woodruff, a roomer in the Barrett home, who opened fire on the negro as he dived out of an open window.

Police are also seeking a bandit who attempted to hold up L. Morris, in his grocery at 54 West Humphries street, late Friday night. Instead of holding up his hands as commanded by the armed bandit, Morris ducked behind a counter, secured his pistol and began firing at the bandit who escaped in the darkness.

The drug store of W. V. Bass, 894 North Boulevard, was entered by burglars late Saturday night. After mixing a couple of soft drinks, the burglars escaped with a large quantity of cigars, cigarettes and candies, according to police reports.

Increase in Hancock.

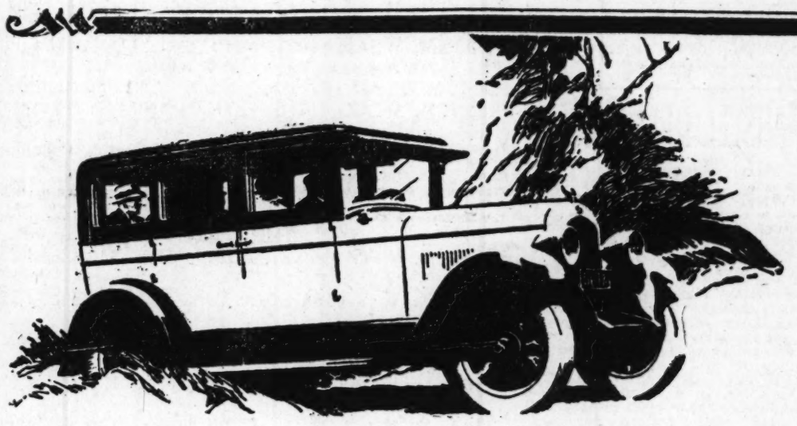

Sparta, Ga., August 28.—(Special.) With some increase in acreage and with little damage from pests, Hancock is expected to grow from 11,000 to 12,000 bales of cotton this year compared with 8,000 last year.

Indications are the crop will be profitable. The outlook is fine for a bumper crop.

Standardized Quality

Assures Chrysler Superiority of Performance and Value in the Lighter Six

CHRYSLER "60"

Chrysler Standardized Quality is a fixed and inflexible quality standard which enforces the same scrupulously close limits—the same rigid rule of engineering exactness—the same absolute accuracy and precision of alignment and assemblage—in the measurement, the machining and the manufacturing of every part, practise and process in four lines of Chrysler cars—"50", "60", "70" and Imperial "80".

THE sensational success of Chrysler—in each of four distinct car groups—must not be ascribed as due entirely to superiorities in Chrysler speed, Chrysler power, Chrysler smoothness and dependability of performance, Chrysler comfort or Chrysler smartness and beauty of appearance.

These superiorities are but the outward and visible signs of equally important superiorities in Chrysler design and workmanship.

For just as Chrysler has raised modern standards of design to new heights of excellence, so Chrysler has carried the principles of quality manufacture far beyond hitherto recognized limits.

Today in Chrysler plants precision manufacturing is coordinated with scientific engineering and perfected to a point where not only quantity but actually quality is standardized.

Ideal Manufacturing System

Certainty of Chrysler unsurpassed performance is thus built into each and every Chrysler model by this Chrysler principle of Quality Standardization.

In the lighter and lower-priced Chrysler "60" you have unit for unit the same Standardized Quality comprehended in the famous Chrysler "70" and the superfine Imperial "80"—

The same advanced features in materials, in craftsmanship, rigid test and inspection, in characteristics of dependability and long life.

It is because of this standardization of quality that the Chrysler "60" gives its sixty miles, and more, per hour; unprecedented get-away; gas economy of 22 miles and more per gallon; the smartness of Chrysler beauty; astonishing riding ease and roadability; the safety of Chrysler four-wheel hydraulic brakes; oil-filter and air-cleaner; full pressure lubrication; seven-bearing crankshaft; impulse neutralizer; road levelizers front and rear; roomy, luxurious bodies.

Advantages for the Buyer

Never before has the motoring public been offered such supreme quality and value—in the field of the lower-priced six.

For no other manufacturer has been able to achieve Quality Standardization with its inescapable advantages which enable even the inexperienced motorist to buy the highest-priced or lowest-priced Chrysler with the assurance that the value in each is unquestionable.

See the lighter six, Chrysler "60". Drive it. Convince yourself that nowhere will you find a six in the lower-priced field that can begin to compare with this great Chrysler achievement.

BOYKIN QUESTIONS 'MICKEY' HUGHES

Interest in the Donaldson murder mystery centered Saturday in the action of Solicitor General John A. Boykin in grilling "Mickey" Hughes, one of the first men arrested in the investigation into the assassination of the investigating ace of the solicitor's office.

In addition to Hughes several other witnesses were questioned at length by the solicitor who is at present conducting an intensive investigation of the statements made to him by Jack Lance, who has been identified as the "elevator stranger" who was seen with Donaldson at the hotel in which he was slain on the night of July 29. Lance is being held incommunicado in Fulton tower on a warrant charging murder, the first to have been sworn out in the probe.

Hughes was brought to the solicitor's office by special investigators from a Fulton county convict camp, having been assigned there by the prison commission which recently revoked his parole on a sentence of from three to five years for the robbery of the pharmacy in the Pershing Point apartments. Hughes was paroled in 1925 but after his arrest in connection with the Donaldson murder the commission revoked his parole.

Solicitor Boykin refused to divulge the nature of the information obtained from Hughes but it is believed that the conference between the two dwelt upon statements Lance has made concerning his activities in Atlanta on the night the murder was committed, and other details.

According to reports Hughes has been identified by employees of the Georgian Terrace hotel, in which Donaldson was shot down by an assassin who was ambushed in a clothes closet in a room on the third floor, as the man who registered for the room in the name of "W. B. Sands, of Macon."

REINHARDT COLLEGE OPENS SEPTEMBER 1

Waleska, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—Reinhardt college will open its 1926-27 session September 1, with a large attendance, it was announced Friday by President R. C. Sharp, who states that the S. C. Dobbs vocational school building now under construction will be sufficiently completed at that time for occupancy. This is described as one of the most solidly built structures for its purpose in the south. Other buildings, including gymnasium and assembly hall, will be started at once.

The program of the opening day will include invocation by Rev. Pierce Harris, special music under the leadership of the heads of the music departments of the college, speeches by President Sharp, Dr. Elam F. Dempsey, chairman of the board of trustees; Samuel Candler Dobbs, nationally known financier and patron of the college; Rev. Pierce Harris and possibly other alumni of the institution including Rev. Wallace Rogers, pastor of Trinity church, Atlanta, Ga.

Reinhardt college was founded in 1883 by Captain A. M. Reinhardt. Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Sharp, and other citizens of Waleska who were interested in bringing opportunities for advanced education to the youth of the southern Blue Ridge country. Pine Log mountain, which has been so often mentioned in the writings of the brilliant Corra Harris, dominates the landscape at Waleska, which is itself located upon an elevation that furnishes a view of mountains on every horizon. A beautiful and inspiring situation it has contributed no little to the development of staminate personality in the pupils of Reinhardt college and has made this student body noted for health and physical vigor. President Sharp has presided over the institution for more than 20 years.

Georgia Reduced Operating Costs Per Capita In'25

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.

Washington, August 28.—On several occasions in recent months President Coolidge has taken state and city governments to task for their extravagance and has urged them to follow the example of economy of the federal government.

They are making little headway in this direction. With few exceptions the cost of operating and maintaining state and municipal governments, as figured on a per capita basis, is still on the increase. Debts are still heavy. ning to whittle them down a bit.

The people must meet these costs by the high local taxes against which President Coolidge has complained. He pointed out that even though federal taxes have been slashed considerably there is still a heavy burden of local taxation.

The extent of expense is shown in reports to the department of commerce from the states and 248 cities throughout the country. This data will be compiled soon by the department and made public.

Of 39 states whose reports have reached here, only a dozen show a decrease in operating expenses on a per capita basis in the fiscal year 1925 as compared with 1924, and the per capita figure in all is much above that of 1917, which is taken as a measure by the department. Except in three states, the decrease is slight. The exceptions are Kansas, where the per capita cost was reduced from $22.17 in 1924 to $6.91 in 1925; Illinois, from $11.84 to $6.94, and Iowa, from $9.74 to $7.58.

The other states which reduced their operating costs per capita are Missouri, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, New Mexico, Alabama, Arizona, Georgia and Indiana.

The per capita cost was highest in Nevada, $28.75. This was almost twice as high as in the second state, another small one, Utah. The smaller states show the highest per capita cost. The inference that the most densely populated states should show the lowest ratio does not stand the test, as Georgia has the smallest per capita cost, $4.76. New York's figure is $14.96, Pennsylvania's $8.04, and Illinois, $6.94. Ohio, a populous state, has a low ratio, $5.16 which is second lowest. The per capita cost in Florida is low, $5.79.

Florida also is among the states with lowest per capita net indebtedness. Hers being 22 cents. This group is led by Nebraska, the state of former Governor Charles W. Bryan, which has no indebtedness other han outstanding warrants. Indiana's figure is 55 cents; Wisconsin, 67 cents; Kentucky, 99 cents, and Arkansas, $1.33.

There were only 14 states out of the 39 which raised sufficient revenue to meet all payments during the year, including those for permanent payments. This is a decided setback from 1924, when there were 21 states out of the whole 48 which had sufficient revenues to meet all obligations.

There is a bright side to the picture in the record showing that 23 out of the 39 states decreased their per capita net indebtedness. The total state debt, however, is still very high.

Trinx Jackson, Atlanta's Charleston Champ, To Arrive This Week for Engagement Here

Homeward bound after a triumphal tour as one of the stars in the Publix theatre production of "Charleston," Miss Trinx Jackson, of Atlanta, winner of the Charleston beauty tournament conducted at the Howard theater by The Constitution last May, will arrive in Atlanta to fill an engagement in this city, the week of September 5. Miss Jackson and the other members of the company will come here from Memphis, where they will play this week. They will arrive in time to present their show as a feature of the midnight performance to be given at the Howard at 12:01 o'clock Monday morning, September 6, one minute after midnight of Sunday, September 5.

While on her tour Miss Jackson has enjoyed a round of gaities and social affairs. She opened with the "Charleston" company in New York at the Rivoli theater, June 13, this engagement of twelve weeks being the first prize in The Constitution tournament. From New York, she went to Boston, Buffalo, Detroit, three Publix theaters in Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Dallas and thence to Memphis this week.

The Howard theater will present its second "midnight matinee" at 12:15 Monday morning, Labor day, September 6, the doors opening at 12:01, one minute after midnight, Sunday, September 5.

On the screen the theater will offer the Paramount picture, "You Never Know Women," with Florence Vidor in the leading role. On the stage the Boris Petroff-Publix theater production, "Charleston," will be presented. The cast will include Miss Trinx Jackson and a group of beauties who won similar contests in other cities in which Publix theaters are located. The usual Howard features including numbers by the Howard Symphony orchestra will be offered.

Arrangements have been made by the theater with the Black and White Taxicab company to provide adequate transportation after the midnight show.

While the visiting "Charleston" girls are in Atlanta they will be given a series of entertainments with Miss Jackson acting as hostess for The Constitution.

At top Mayor Louis Blaylock is shown welcoming the Charleston champions to Dallas on the city hall steps. Below, Dallas' world-famous kissing mayor, Louis Blaylock, in the act of officially welcoming Trinx Jackson, Atlanta Charleston champ, in his usual osculatory manner. The mayor of Dallas has the reputation of having kissed more pretty actresses than any other man in the United States and remarked after kissing Miss Jackson that "Atlanta girls are ok."

Four Applicants For Aerial Stunt Post Pass Tests

A quartet of "daredevils" was picked at Lakewood Amusement park Saturday afternoon by Captain A. B. McMullen from more than a score of applicants for the place of stunt man in the airplane and parachute exhibitions to be staged at the park on Labor day, Monday, September 6, and during the Southeastern fair, October 2 to 9.

J. P. McElween, 22, of 713 East Point avenue; "Aerial" Bartlett, 23, of 415 East Fair street; C. C. Atchley, 27, of 265 East Hunter, and A. B. Weathers, 29, of Knoxville, Tenn., were the four who passed the series of preliminary tests given Saturday.

Captain McMullen required all the aspirants for aerial honors to "shinny up" 40 feet on the flag pole on the stage in front of the Lakewood grandstand, to do handstands on the pole at a giddy height, to hang by their toes from the tight wire stretched 30 feet high across the race track from the grandstand, to stand on their heads on the round iron railing around the judge's stand and finally to jump, without parachute or any other mechanical assistance, to the ground from a height of 20 feet, the distance to give them the same downward velocity a parachute jumper has when he hits the ground.

Only four of the entire group of applicants passed this first series of "ground tests." Additional "water tests" are to be given Monday before any of them are permitted in the air. The men picked for the work will have to make a 30-foot high dive into the lake and swim 100 yards with their clothes and shoes on.

The one of the four who shows the best form in preliminary airplane tests Tuesday, to include some wing walking and balancing, will be permitted to make his first practice parachute jump Wednesday and then will make daily jumps until Monday, September 6, when he will make his first public appearance as an aerial stunt man in several of the simpler airplane manuvers. All four will be trained rigorously throughout the ensuing four weeks for the spectacular exhibitions to be given during the week of the fair.

11-MILE STRETCH IN MACON-ATLANTA ROAD TO BE PAVED

Macon, Ga., August 26.—(AP)—The Bibb county road board announced this afternoon that the Dixie highway from Lorain to Bolingbroke, 11 miles, wil be closed on Monday and traffic will be diverted to the old road, which parallels the present highway and which has been put in good condition as a detour. Paving of this portion of the Dixie highway will begin at once, it was stated, material having been assembled.

This is part of the link in the through highway from the Tennessee line to the Florida line, which is to be paved this year.

MONCRIEF TO PREACH ON BRUCE BARTON BOOK

"Is Jesus a Man Nobody Knows; And If So, Is the Church to Blame?" will be the subject for a series of four Sunday evening sermons at the Avondale Baptist church, beginning next Sunday evening. The Rev. J. Moncrief, Jr., pastor, will deliver the series. Mr. Moncrief said: "I have been reading and rereading Bruce Barton's book, 'The Man Nobody Knows,' and the sermon series has grown out of that reading."

H. W. FINCH OPENS COLLECTING OFFICE IN HURT BUILDING

Announcement has been made by Herbert W. Finch of the opening of an office in the Hurt building for the purpose of handling collections and adjustments. Mr. Finch has been identified in this business for the past twenty years, having started when he was about 18 years of age. For three years and a half he was connected with one of Atlanta's largest department stores in the credit and collection department; later was manager of collections and adjustments in a law office for 13 years. He served one year as president of the Association of Commercial Agencies of America.

Mr. Finch is a member of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, the Civitan club, and is active in fraternal circles. He will represent a number of nationally-known concerns.

SCREEN TEST FILMS NOW BEING EXAMINED

News was received Saturday by The Constitution that the recent screen test made under the auspices of this paper at the Howard theater by the Famous Players-Lasky company, are now being examined at the studios of the company in New York and that the results will be ready for announcement soon.

Work of developing the films has been completed and the detail work of picking out the best films screened here will soon be finished. As soon as the results are known they will be printed in The Constitution.

Nearly 1,000 people entered the contest which was one of the most popular ever staged by a paper in Atlanta.

Beryl—Jack and Edna are still very much in love with each other.

Bob—Are they?

Beryl—Yes. When she's away she writes letters to him whether she wants money or not.

MASSELL TO ENLARGE BIG LUMBER PLANT

An addition to the lumber mill of the Massell Lumber company of a two-story brick building to cost $50,000, was announced Saturday by L. I. Massell, vice president and manager of the company.

The building, which will add 20,000 square feet to the present plant floor space, making a total of 100,000 square feet, is to be erected on the strips of land at numbers 269 and 273 Simpson street, recently purchased for $10,000 from Mrs. J. M. Cantrell and H. Warner Martin, which property adjoins the present plant site on Jones avenue.

The new annex which will be used to handle the increased mill planing work makes the total investment of the Massell Lumber company plant worth approximately $200,000, Mr. Massell stated.

President Casts Trout Line Again As Season Wanes

Paul Smith's N. Y., August 28.—(AP)—With the trout season ending early next week, President Coolidge turned fisherman again today and went on an expedition in the heart of the William Rockefeller preserve, a few miles from White Pine camp, to try his rod and line.

In preparation for several hours absence, the chief executive spent the entire morning at the executive offices and before he left for lunch had cleared his desk of government business matters.

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Whiting, of Holyoke, Mass., personal friends, remained as house guests at White Pine camp today but there were no visitors invited for tomorrow and Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge will attend services at the First Presbyterian church of Saranac Lake.

A comparatively light engagement list confronts the president next week also, but two or three visitors having been invited for the next seven or eight days. The first among them will be Matthew C. Brush, president of the American International corporation, of New York city, who will be a luncheon guest Monday.

Mementos Found Of Historic Strife In Haynes Manor

Abundant proof of the historic interests attached to the Peachtree Heights section is being found as the development of Haynes Manor advances, according to officials of the development company.

Eugene V. Haynes, owner and developer of this section, is gaining quite a collection of sabers and bayonets which have been dug up in the course of excavations now going on for building purposes. The old breastworks are there for all to see, but Mr. Haynes expects that many more equally interesting mementos of one of the bloodiest battles of the sixties will be found as development, now rapidly proceeding, is carried through.

Apart from the historic interest of this region, there are other features that add to its attractiveness. Among others are the beautiful scenic views walks and concrete roads of Haynes more accessible by the paved side that have been enhanced and rendered Manor.

ROOSEVELT HITS COURT BACKERS

Fort Wayne, Ind., August 28.—(AP) Although the American people six years ago voted 7,000,000 strong against the League of Nations, that lesson has been forgotten by America's public servants, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt asserted in an address here tonight.

Defeated at one point league proponents shifted their attack, the speaker declared, and decided that if they could not "bring us directly into the league, they would bring us indirectly into it. They accordingly proposed that we join the league court."

Sedatives, he said, were administered in the shape of statements concerning humanity and assurances as to the non-identity of the court with the league.

"Realizing that even these measures would be ineffective if the situation were explained, the proponents of the court decided it must be pulled through," the colonel continued. "The country was saved from the league six years ago because the senate refused to adopt cloture and submitted the question of our entrance to the vote of the people. The advocates of the court did not intend to run any such risk; they applied cloture, cut debate short and jammed the league court through."

Persons who maintain that the court is not a part of the League of Nations were characterized by Colonel Roosevelt as "either insincere or obtuse."

Fight Is Launched On Conscription For Waging War

London, August 28.—Liberals from every country in Europe, except Italy, have signed a pan-European manifesto against conscription for war, the text of which was to be made public Sunday in the various European capitals. Among the well known signatories are Henry Barbusse, Romain Rolland, General Verraux and George Duhamel (France); Miguel de Unamuno, Professor G. Maranon and Dr. Luis Jimene de Asua, (Spain); Bertrand Russell, Lord and Lady Parmoor, Arthur Ponsonby, M. P., Norman Angell, Philip Snowden, M. P., and H. G. Wells, (England); Professor Albert Finsetin, A. Mendellsohn Bartholdy, General Berthold von Deimling (retired), Count Harry Kessler, reichstag, President Paul Loebe and General Major F. von Schonaich, (Germany); Annie Besant, (England); M. K. Gandhi and Rabindranath Tagore (India), and August Forel (Switzerland.)

The manifesto reads:

"During the war the people of all countries determined to throw off the yoke of militarism, and when peace came, the League of Nations was offered as the off-spring of this hope. It is our duty to see that the terrible suffering of the war does not recur.

"It is our belief that conscript armies, with their large corps of professional officers are a grave menace to peace. Conscription involves the degradation of human personality, and the destruction of liberty. Barrack life, military drill, blind obedience to commands, however unjust and foolish they may be, and deliberate training for slaughter undermine respect for the individual, for democracy and human life.

"By the universal abolition of conscription, war will be made less easy. The government of a country which maintains conscription has little difficulty in declaring war, for it can silence the whole population by a mobilization order. When governments have to depend for support upon the voluntary consent of their peoples, they must necessarily exercise caution in their foreign policies."

Mrs. Paxon Is Host To Business Women Of Second Baptist

Mrs. F. J. Paxon, president of the Business Women's league of the Second Baptist church, entertained the executive committee of the league at a 5 o'clock tea Saturday afternoon at the East Lake clubhouse.

About 50 members were present at the tea, which was preceded by an hour's social. Following the refreshments a business meeting was held in which officers were elected and plans for the work of the coming year discussed. Mrs. Paxon was assisted in entertaining her guests and at the business meeting by her husband, Colonel F. J. Paxon.

STATE TENNIS TOURNAMENT AT EAST LAKE MONDAY

Many Stars Entered In Title Matches; Juniors Also Play

BY BEN COTHRAN.

Play in the annual Georgia state tennis tournament will be called Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock on the East Lake court. Entry lists, which were supposed to have closed on Saturday, have been held open until Monday. All players who have not yet entered the tourney may do so before 12 noon Monday by registering at Spalding's on North Broad street.

Officials of the tournament decided Saturday to hold the junior events on Monday instead of Saturday as was previously announced. There were not enough entries Saturday to justify holding the events and it was held off until Monday in hopes that there would be more entries.

Much Interest.

The state tournament creates a great deal of interest in the southeastern section each year, and is drawing a number of stars from all over the state. And defending champion, "Hop" Owens, will be hard pushed in order to hold his title.

"Hop" has been hard at work for the past few weeks, however, and is in fine shape for the tourney. His continual practice and playing in various tournaments during the summer has put him in trim for the state battle.

Chief among the notables entered in the tournament is John Temple Graves, II, of Washington, D. C., holder of many titles and one of the leading players of the middle Atlantic district. Earlier in the summer Graves defeated Owens in a closely contested five-set match at Greenville, and if this pair meet again fans are promised one of the best matches seen here in some time.

There are others entered in the tourney who will also bear watching. Among these are Jack Mooney and Jack Simpson, two of the best players in Atlanta. Mooney recently won the 1926 cotton states title for the second time at Anniston. In addition to this pair there are "Mutt" Kennedy, former South Atlantic champion; Kels Boland, who recently won the tri-state tournament at Rome, defeating some of the best players from Georgia, Alabama, and Tennessee; Britt Knox, Z. A. Rice, Harry Gault, and J. T. Chambers, all of Atlanta.

Several members of the old guard will also be on hand and will furnish some stiff opposition to the younger crop of players. Chief among these are Ed Carter, Eston Mansfield, Nat Thornton, Dr. Ernest Cobington, Jake Orr and Chick Giles.

Junior Play Also.

This year will be the first time that a junior tournament has been run in conjunction with a senior tournament and should this event prove popular it will be held every year, and will help to develop the younger stars throughout the state. The junior tournament will afford tennis fans a chance to see such junior Atlanta stars as Bryan Grant, Bill Leide, Malon Courts and Syd Goldin in action. All have won names for themselves on Atlanta courts, and young Grant has recently returned from the Chicago tournament where he made a very good showing. Anyone who was under 18 years of age on January 1, 1926, is eligible for the tournament.

The following events will be held in the tournament:

Men's singles.
Men's doubles.
Men's consolation singles.
Ladies' singles.
Mixed doubles (provided there are enough entries for this event).
Junior singles.

Next Tuesday morning at the Druid Hills Golf club will see the beginning of another junior golf tournament for Atlanta boys under the age of 16. At present there are not many entries but Monday is expected to tell another tale, and a good crowd is looked for on Tuesday morning, when Harry Stephens, professional at Druid Hills, starts the boys off.

W. L. Reed, Atlanta youngster, who won the tourney last year, is not expected to be on hand to defend his title for it is generally believed that he has passed the age limit since winning last year.

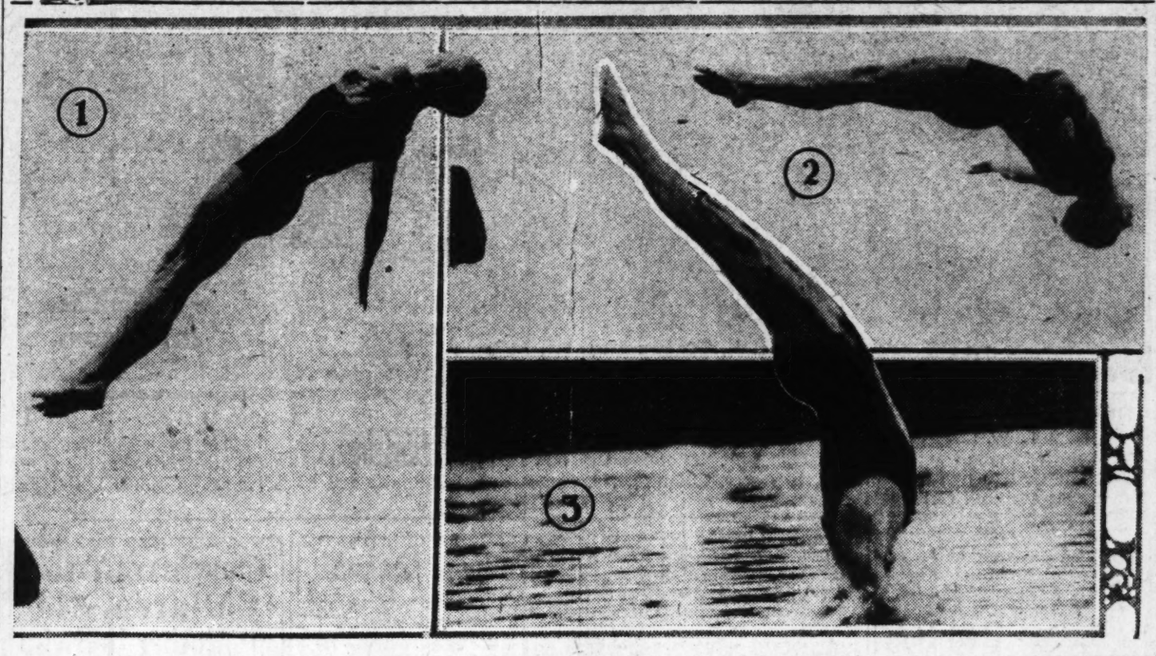

There is one sure entry in the tournament who is expected to make himself talked about and that is Billy Stephens, 9-year-old son of Harry Stephens. Billy isn't expected to win the tournament or anything like that, however, but he will certainly give a few Atlanta boys his age, and maybe older, a run for their money. He has had plenty of lessons from his well-known dad and has been doing very good in his practice rounds.

In all, about 40 or 50 entries are expected in the tournament. Among those already entered are William Gilooley, Jay Glenn and John Livingston, son of Jimmy Livingston, the Ingleside professional.

An entry fee of $1 will be charged and there will be trophies for the winner and runner-up in each flight. The championship trophy is donated by G. F. Willis. With this trophy goes a replica, to be the winner's for all time, as the big trophy is held only while the winner is champion.

Anyone wishing to enter the tournament may do so by calling Harry Stephens at Druid Hills. The course will be open for practice Monday morning, and all rounds will be played in the morning. It is not necessary to be a member of Druid Hills in order to enter the tournament.

THE PLAIN BACK DIVE AS IT SHOULD BE

The above photos of the three main stages of the third required dive in The Constitution's water carnival are particularly valuable to those who wish to perfect their form in this graceful dive. Kenneth Rogers, Constitution photographer, caught Bill Murray in three positions which clearly illustrate the proper form in this difficult dive. The first photo illustrates the correct position of the body in leaving the board. Notice how rapidly the horizontal position is being assumed after the take-off. This is necessary because of the lack of height and the reluctance of the body to make the backward turn. Bill Murray declares that the fault with most back dives is that the divers do not start the turn soon enough and fail to open up before striking the water. Photo No. 2 illustrates the supreme grace of this dive. Here the body is in the position of a swan dive except that it is inverted. The third photo shows the finish of the dive. Note that the body is still slightly curved to allow entrance into the water without a "slap."

Dave Young Breaks Two Dixie Records To Aid in Victory

Birmingham, Ala., August 28.—(Special.)—Compiling more than twice as many points as their nearest opponent, the Atlanta Athletic club won the Southeastern A. A. U. championships in the men's division at East Lake Saturday afternoon. The Pensacola Swimming club, purely through the work of the three Staff sisters, copped the championships in the women's division. As a whole, the Atlantans, men and women, outdistanced the field.

Final scores were as follows:

Men—Atlanta Athletic club, 37 1-2; Memphis Swimming association, 25; Birmingham Athletic club, 25; Montgomery Y. M. C. A., 12; Pensacola Swimming club 1 1-2.

Women—Pensacola, 17; B. A. C., 16; Atlanta, 11; Charlotte, 6; Memphis, Montgomery, 5 each, and Mobile 2.

Had Virginia Ashe any assistance in the women's event she might have come through with the trophy. She copped two firsts and one third, but this was not good enough to endanger either the Pensacola staff sisters or the Birmingham Elberfeld girls. The Pensacola girls copped one first and four seconds to lead the Birmingham Mermaids two firsts, one second and two thirds. The Elberfelds copped both first and second in the fancy diving events, being the sole entries.

The Atlantans, showing a well-trained outfit of swimmers and divers, performed beautifully in every event. They finished first in the 100-yard men's senior back stroke, the 220-yard relay; second in the 100-yard men's senior dash, in the 100-yard men's breast stroke and fancy diving, and third in the 50-yard men's senior dash and the 100-yard men's senior breast stroke.

The B. A. C. lads ran first and second in the 440-yard men's junior dash; third in the fancy diving, second in the 100-yard men's back stroke, and second in the men's junior 220-yard dash.

The real thrill of the afternoon came in the performances of the mermaids who fought for the trophy that eventually went to the Pensacola girls. One new record was made, however, and one record was tied. Roy Wenzler, Memphian, tied the record of 26 seconds in the 50-yard men's senior dash and David Young, Atlantan, broke his own record in the 100-yard dash. Two records were made for the first time in the women events.

While it has not been definitely announced, Mobile is virtually assured of the next meeting. Before a definite announcement can be made, however, a certain procedure must be gone through but officials of the meet said it would probably go to the Gulf City.

Summaries.

100-Yard Men's Senior Breast Stroke—Altheimer (Montgomery), McKinstrey (Atlanta), Harris (Atlanta). Time: 1:23 3-5.

100-Yard Women's Senior—Ashe (Atlanta), F. Staff (Pensacola), R. Elberfeld (Birmingham). Time: 1:13 2-5.

Atlanta Fans Plan Trip To Philly For Dempsey Fight

Atlanta fight fans, interested in a trip to Philadelphia to witness the championship match between Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney are now afforded an especially attractive and cheap trip that will also include a sight-seeing trip around the Quaker City, and a visit to the Sesqui-centennial exposition.

The trip is being arranged by John L. Moyers, who has managed several tours, and who states that special hotel and fight tickets reservations already have been made, and that a special train has been promised providing as many as 75 Atlantans decide to go.

Some of the sights to be seen in the visit to Philadelphia besides the Sesqui-centennial are Independence Hall, the Liberty Bell, Wannamaker's store, the residence section, the grave of Benjamin Franklin, Fairmont park and the home of Betsy Ross.

The party will leave Atlanta at 8 a. m. central time, September 22, from the Terminal station, and will return to this city at 5:40 p. m., September 26.

Anyone interested in making the trip is requested to communicate with Mr. Moyer at his office, 324-5 Healey building, or by telephone at Walnut 7882, Tuesday morning or thereafter.

MANY PRIZES FOR WINNERS OF WATER MEET

With magnificent silver loving cups already selected for presentation to high-point winners in The Constitution's gigantic swimming meet, and a large list of other prizes offered, the prospects are that there will be a trophy or prize for winners and runners-up in every event.

Pictures of the cups and a complete list of other prizes will be printed in The Constitution within the next few days.

Three large business houses have already signified their desire to contribute prizes for winners. The new shoe department of the J. M. High company will offer one pair of boys' shoes, one pair of misses' shoes and one pair of "Dorothy Dodd" ladies' shoes. The H. G. Lewis company will offer one complete bathing outfit, including bathing suit, cap and shoes, and E. H. Jordan & Sons, representing the Bradley Knitting company, will give five of the famous Bradley swimming suits to be selected from the catalogue by winners.

This list is by no means complete, as other firms and individuals have expressed desire to offer valuable prizes for contestants in the mammoth swimming contest.

As stated before, the entry list will be closed at noon on Wednesday, September 1, to allow the committee in charge to arrange the list of entries in proper classes and events as signified on the entry blanks mailed to The Constitution.

This makes it imperative that entries be mailed to The Constitution not later than Tuesday or early Wednesday morning and the scores of swimmers who have signified their intention of entering the meet and have not yet filled out the blanks are urged to do so at once.

An entry blank and list of events will be found in connection with this story.

HAWK-EYE-ING SPORTS

·BY · DICK · HAWKINS·

The "Weaker Sex?"

We are beginning to wonder how long it will be before we mere males will begin to do the housework and allow our "better halves" to defend the nation's honor in the lists.

First came the feat of Miss Ederle to arouse our misgivings and today the wires carry the news that another woman has conquered Father Neptune on his own battle ground and has waded ashore in England after crossing the English channel in something over 15 hours.

Mrs. Clemington Corson, resident of New York, and mother of two children, accomplished the feat, and while her time was not as good as that of Miss Ederle, she beat the best record made by any man by nearly one hour.

Another fact which adds to the impressiveness of Mrs. Corson's feat is that she outswam Frank Perks, English swimmer who started from Cape Griz Nez with her. The Englishman had to abandon his attempt a mile and a half from the English coast.

We wonder if Mrs. Corson will be swamped with vaudeville and movie offers as Miss Ederle has been. It is doubtful, because her feat was not attended with the blare of publicity. Her name was practically unknown until the wire flashed the news of her success in the channel and her chance to turn her ability into cash, if she so chooses, will undoubtedly suffer thereby.

Several years ago when Mrs. Corson, the former Amelia Gade, of Denmark, was establishing long distance swimming records around Long Island her name was fairly well known to followers of aquatic sports, but when one mentions that Mrs. Corson swam the channel the usual query is, "Who is Mrs. Corson?"

She entered the channel unheralded, proceeded to swim across and walk out on the sands of Dover, accompanied in her swim only by a motor boat carrying a few friends. No tugs followed her and we venture to say that movie cameras and newspaper men were not in abundance.

All this lack of ballyho does not detract from the triumph of this 27-year-old mother who bettered the record established by the best of the men and who has again demonstrated the fact that women have taken their place in the ranks of strenuous athletics.

JACK ENJOYS DAY OF WORK WITH BOXERS

Atlantic City, N. J., August 28.—(AP)—Jack Dempsey breezed through a workout equivalent to 10 rounds today before a crowd of 2,500 at the greyhound racing track. The champion looked better than he did yesterday, chiefly because he could extend himself against new sparring material.

There were no casualties, however, with the exception of Joe Kurp, Shamokin, Pa., light-heavyweight, who hit the floor head first when Dempsey nailed him on the chin with a left hook.

Dempsey devoted most of his attention to shooting over a right to counter a left jab.

Gunboat Smith, the veteran California heavyweight, whose proud distinction is that he hit Dempsey the hardest blow the champion ever received, put on the gloves with Dempsey to get a "little expert knowledge" of his condition. Smith visited the camp in the role of a newspaper correspondent.

Nearly Knocked Out.

Although Dempsey merely clowned around the gunner, Smith was on the verge of sliding to the floor when the bell ended their round.

After the exhausted gunner recovered his breath, he asserted the only man capable of licking Dempsey is one who has mastered a one-two punch and could hit on equal terms with the champion.

Charley Anderson, a 220 pound negro from Chicago, who joined the camp today, faced Dempsey for two rounds, giving him a good work out. Frankie Carpenter of Freeport, N. Y., a light-heavyweight, also stepped two rounds.

Once he nailed Jack with a left hook to the chin that brought gasps from the crowd. Little Kid Herman, Los Angeles middleweight, made a tremendous hit by his willingness to swap punches with Dempsey. Herman has the speed of a lightweight and forced Jack to travel at a terrific clip.

Frenchmen Win Right To Play Americans

BY FRANK GETTY.

Forest Hills, N. Y., August 28.—France will meet America in the challenge round for the Davis cup next month, but unless the French team is strengthened 100 per cent by the arrival of Jean Borotra there is little danger of the trophy leaving the United States this year.

Rene Lacoste, French singles star, defeated Tsumio Tawara in straight sets this afternoon, 6-1, 6-3, 6-2, in what proved to be the deciding match of the interzone finals, but Takeichi Harada demonstrated that these racquet welders from France are far from supermen by beating Henri Cochet, 6-1, 6-3, 0-6, 6-4.

The play of Henri Cochet, who won the hard courts championship at Paris, defeating Vincent Richards and the other Americans who went abroad this summer, was especially disappointing. Jean Borotra, the bounding basque, has arrived, and it is quite probable that he and Lacoste will represent France in the singles at Germantown.

A Great Player.

If Japan had possessed another tennis player of the caliber of Takeichi Harada, the French never would have reached the challenge round, for the little brown man beat both Lacoste and Cochet in no uncertain fashion. Of course, Harada is no newcomer to tennis. He is one of the ranking players in the United States, and defeated Billy Johnston recently at Seabright. But if Harada can beat the Frenchmen, so can any player named for the American Davis cup team.

The conclusion of the interzone finals this afternoon was unexciting, and only a couple of thousand spectators were sprinkled through the concrete stands. It was a foregone conclusion that France would win. The French needed but one of the singles matches, and little Tawara was no match for the brilliant Lacoste. The latter took command of the situation from the time the umpire said "Play."

Whereas, Cochet, on Thursday, loafed along and let Tawara take two sets with his sound and vigorous, but routine baseline game, Lacoste wasted no time. He went out after the Japanese and beat the latter at his own game. Instead of taking to the net and giving Tawara an opportunity for his uncanny passing shots, Lacoste fought him from the baseline and it was the Japanese who finally attempted to come up in the forecourt in an effort to turn the tide.

When Tawara took the net Lacoste passed him repeatedly. The French star was playing a careful game, in contrast to his rather loose performance against Harada when the latter beat him Thursday.

Displayed Powerful Game.

Against Cochet, Tawara had displayed a powerful service which gave his opponent considerable trouble, but today the Japanese champion had little pace on the ball and Lacoste had little difficulty in breaking service.

The point score of this match, which insured France of victory, follows:

First Set.

Lacoste .....254 454 6—30—6
Tawara .....432 231 4—19—1

Second Set.

Lacoste .....144 442 145—28—6
Tawara .....421 114 413—21—3

Third Set.

Lacoste .....464 444 24—32—6
Tawara .....042 026 42—20—2

After the Lacoste-Tawara match, Cochet and Harada took the court for what was little more than an exhibition. Rules of Davis cup play call for all five matches being played, whether the issue has been settled or not.

The Frenchman was guilty of numerous errors, and Harada let him beat himself. Cochet invariably ended the hardest fought rallies by driving the ball into the net or out of the court.

The spirit of fight that is in these invaders cropped out in the fourth set when Harada was leading, 5-0. Cochet came with a rush, volleying and smashing, and won four consecutive games. In the tenth game, Harada was at point set three times before Cochet finally netted the ball for the deciding point.

It may be that recent illness is responsible for the erratic play of both Cochet and Lacoste. Neither has been in first-class shape for some time. They have nearly a fortnight in which to get into condition for the challenge round, which starts at Germantown September 9.

CHANNEL SWUM SECOND TIME BY U. S. WOMAN

Dover, August 28.—(AP)—Mrs. Clemington Corson, of New York, a trim little woman, 28 years old and the mother of two children, this afternoon waded up the beach a mile east of Dover, tired but triumphant, for she had conquered the English channel.

Mrs. Corson entered the water at Cape Cris-Nez at 11:32 o'clock Friday night and reached the English shore under Shakespeare Cliff at 3 o'clock this afternoon, her time being 15 hours and 28 minutes.

Several thousand people, who from the cliffs had watched the plucky little American woman battle her way to the shore, rushed to the strand to greet her with cheers for her feat in many ways was as remarkable as Miss Ederle's faster swim across the channel three weeks ago.

"It was glorious! I've realized my life ambition as a swimmer," said Mrs. Corson to the Associated Press, a little later. "I didn't lower Miss Ederle's time, but I swam the channel and that's enough for me. I take great pride in achieving the ambition of all distance swimmers and I'm proud for the sake of my youngsters in New York that their mother has accomplished the task she set out to do."

Glowing in reflected glory at her side stood her husband, Clemington Corson, who in a dory rowed near his wife all across the channel, refusing to allow anyone else to take the oars. "She's the finest girl and the best swimmer in the world," said the proud husband.

Malcom B. Dies At Lincoln Track

Crete, Ill., August 28.—(AP)—Malcolm B., Jr., by Torchbearer-Myrtle V, one of the best three-year-olds in the country, is dead of pneumonia at Lincoln race track.

He was owned by W. C. Baxter, of New York, and his most notable victory this year was the Raceland derby at Ashland, Ky., when he defeated Carlaris.

64 Games Without An Error, Record

The end of what is claimed to be a major league fielding record came when Max Bishop, second baseman of the Philadelphia Athletics, made his first error in 65 consecutive games.

Jackson Will Try To Swim 80 Miles

Mobile, Ala., August 28.—(AP)—W. C. Jackson, world's champion long distance salt water swimmer, announced here his intention of accepting William C. Wrigley's challenge to swim from the California mainland to Catalina island. Wrigley's $25,000 prize is the goal.

Jackson leaves Mobile tomorrow night for Flomaton, Ala., from where he will plunge off early Sunday morning in an attempt to swim 80 miles down the Escambia river. This swim, if successful, would give Jackson the world's championship in fresh water swimming. The present record is 78 miles, held by Pedro Candieli, Argentine amateur, who made the swim in the Platte river.

2 ATLANTANS SCORE AGAIN AT VANDALIA

Vandalia, Ohio, August 28.—(AP)—With the shooting of five minor events, the 27th grand American trap shooting tournament came to a close at the Amateur Trap Shooting Association of America Club here today.

The consolation handicap was won by Harry Harrison, of Rochester, N. Y., shooting 97 from the 19-yard line.

C. M. Keifer, Orrville, Ohio; L. Barnosky, Wyandotte, Mich., and Arthur Abell, Cleveland, tied with nine others at 96, but won second, third and fourth places, respectively, in the shoot-offs.

Bart Lewis, of Springfield, Ill., won the amateur championship at doubles with a score of 192, and W. G. Warren, of Chicago, was runner-up with 186. Frank M. Troeh, of Portland, Ore., and B. A. Gillespie, Phoenix, Ariz., tied with 185 each. Troeh winning third place and Gillespie fourth in the shoot-off.

Atlanta, Ga., again scored when Mrs. J. C. Wright and Mrs. W. P. Andrews, first and second women's trophy winners in the grand American, captured the same positions today in the women's doubles championship with scores of 74 and 73, respectively. Mrs. C. B. Pike, Kent, Ohio, was third with 57.

J. R. Jahn, of Spirit Lake, Iowa, won the professional doubles championship today with 189, and Homer Clark, East Alton, Ill., was second with 188.

Auburn Is Dark Horse In Conference Race

One of the dark horses in the Southern conference grid race this year will be the eleven of Alabama Polytechnic institute at Auburn, that lovely village of the Plains, whose youngsters are known far anad wide for their fighting ability on the gridiron. The Tigers are an uncertain quantity at this writing because of the fact that they lost quite a number of brilliant performers, were shy last year on dependable reserves, and will rise or fall according to the form shown by the new men coming up.

Coach Harry Morey, the former Middlebury mentor, will be serving his second year at Auburn and will have as his assistants practically the same group who assisted him last year. Mike Papke is back. So is Boozer Pitts. Slick Moulton returns for the freshman squad with Red Brown. The new addition is Buck Spinks, an end of several seasons with the Tigers. There is balance here, on this staff, and Auburn supporters have the utmost confidence in the ability of the mentors to turn out a good team.

Auburn's task will be the replacement of six line veterans and three back stars, which one might say was almost their entire team last year. Even with these nine men missing, the Tigers will return an even dozen or more letter men, although some of them just played enough to make letters last year. There is also the hope that Ed Allen, a back of two seasons ago, will be at the Village of the Plains again this year. One or two others are doubtful about returning to school, but enough pressure will probably get them back if there is the most remote chance.

As one member of the Auburn team for the past three years stated to the writer, things don't look especially optimistic to make any rash predictions at Auburn. At the same time, neither do they look as if the end of the world is here. Morey and his associates are hopeful of having a powerful eleven at Auburn, and they stand a fair chance of that if the new men come through in splendid shape. And these new men are ample in number, possessed of quite a bit of ability on the football pasture.

The Auburn losses from last year include Greene, Williams and Crane, backs, McFadden, Harkins, Self, Ollinger and Spinks and Robinson, linemen. Williams' absence is a great loss because of his educated toe that booted so many three-points for the Tigers over the cross-bars. Greene and Crane are also to be missed. Yet there is a feeling that the linemen will be missed more than the backs who are gone, for there is also a doubt whether McNeil will be back at play. Yet, those losses are plenty. There are losses similar to the losses at other schools, but it must be always remembered that Auburn's reserve strength was not too great last year to replace these losses.

The Tigers will be captained this season by Paul "Sea-Cow" Turner. The alternate captain is Herman Salter, the square-jawed youth from Bessemer. Both are big men and fast men. Salter played a terrible game at guard against Georgia Tech on the last game of the season, and will probably be stationed there this season. Both are ready to tear things up this season and will make bids for all-southern honors when Thanksgiving rolls around.

Other backs to return this year include Doug Newsome, Willard Hodges, Frank Tuxworth, Shotts, Granger, Snider and Ellis. Tuxworth and Hodges called signals quite a bit last year, and will be ready to stand the gaff much better this season. Granger and Newsome are fast. Snider, the track star, is another dashing youngster from whom is expected much. And there are a number of neat sophs who may be of much power to the Tigers.

Coming back for duty on the front wall are Long, Joe Market, Bill Patterson, Murray Hoffman and perhaps McNeil. A very small number, one must admit, but then Auburn was not overstocked with dependable reserves last season. They have a number of sophs who are either going to help the Tigers an awful lot or be terrible disappointments. This list includes Ingram and Wadsworth, ends; Cunningham and Scarborough, guards; Howard and Dick Holtsclaw, big powerful men. And there are others.

The backfield contingent will be faced with competition from the two James brothers, E. and F., and also another lad named Mike Fisher. This trio loom as prospective varsity men their first year out.

National League Leaders Bunched in Team Hitting

Ruel Love Pounded As Travelers Win From Crackers, 8-1

Little Rock, Ark., August 28.—(Special.)—If "Gyger" Carroll hadn't bunched bases on balls on himself in the seventh inning of today's game he would have shut out the Atlanta Crackers by way of a grand finale for the four-game series. "Gyger," however, insisted upon the Crackers having one run, so the Travelers won their third victory of the series, 8 to 1.

Carroll really was in a pretty soft spot today with the Travelers in a fine batting mood and socking 14 base hits off Love, one of Bert Niehoff's right-handers. Love also issued some costly bases on balls, the Travelers gave Carroll more than enough runs to win by scoring five times in the third inning when they bunched hits with walks but they kept after Love for the rest of the afternoon and added three more scores.

For two innings it was a pitchers' battle but the Traveler hitters took control in the third. Whitney was first up and walked. Carroll went out on a fly back of first that Niehoff caught. Mulvey also walked. Wood surprised the Cracker infield with a bunt between first and the box that was good for a hit, neither Love nor Niehaus being able to handle the ball. Then with the bases full Clancy hit to right, Whitney and Mulvey scoring. Clancy attempted to take second but was thrown out, Griffith to Durocher. Love then gave the third base on balls of the inning to Senne. William lined a single to center and Wood scored. Senne took third and Williams second on the throw home. Blair liked the first ball and drove another liner to center for a single, Senne and Williams scoring. Haille went out on a fly to Griffith. The hitting and the scoring continued in the fourth. Whitney started it with a double, Carroll grounded out, Whitney being held at second but he stole third while Mulvey was at bat and then scored on Emmett's single to right. Haas made a great catch on Wood's short fly to center or there would have been more scoring for Clancy lined another single to right but again he was thrown out at second by Griffith.

Whitney also started the fifth with a hit, a single to center. He took second on Carroll's bunt and Mulvey again brought him in, hitting a single through short.

The Travelers got their final run in the eighth when Haille bounced a double off Niehoff's shin, took third on Whitney's sacrifice fly and scored on a sacrifice fly by Carroll. Mulvey then hit his triple to right but was left on when Gilbert threw out Wood.

The Crackers got their first hit off Carroll in the fifth inning when Brock doubled to left with one out. Tom Rogers, who had gotten into the lineup when Durocher was chased by Umpire Mullen, grounded out to Wood. Carroll then passed love but Murphy hit a high fly to Mulvey.

With two out in the sixth Griffith singled and Haas walked but Niehaus forced Griffith at third.

Then in the seventh Carroll gave the Crackers a run. After Haille had thrown out Brock Rogers singled down the third base line. Carroll then walked Love and Murphy and when he also gave a pass to Nichoff Rogers was forced to score. Gilbert then hit a short fly to right that Senne came in under and caught. Love declined to attempt to score. Griffith then grounded out to Clancy unassisted. With one out in the eighth Niehaus scratched a hit but Wood took Brock's grounder and started a fast double play. Rogers, Love and Murphy went out in order in the ninth.

New Pitcher

According to announcement by Rel J. Spiller, owner of the Crackers, Saturday, another pitcher will be added to the Atlanta mound staff today.

Pitcher Doss, of the Columbus club of the Southeastern league, will join the Crackers in New Orleans today when the locals invade the camp grounds of the league leaders.

Doss has an enviable record with the Columbus outfit, having won 15 and lost 5 games this season. He is a left-hander.

GENE RETURNS TO SCHEDULE; DOES 5 ROUNDS

Speculator, N. Y., August 28.—(AP) Gene Tunney, heavyweight challenger, returned to routine training today. Arising early this morning he jogged off several miles on the road and then came back to spend the remaining hours of the morning and part of the afternoon working out on the bags and in the ring.

He rattled the light bag for three rounds, then turned to the heavy bag for two rounds and, finding this sufficient warming up, went into the ring for a half dozen rounds with sparring partners, among those who stood up against him today being Bill Vidabeck, a standby among the ex-marine's sparring partners.

Among other visitors at the Tunney camp today was the Gloversville post of the American Legion, which was at Lake Pleasant for an outing. The ex-service men, after watching the contender at work, brought forth a huge floral horseshoe for presentation to Tunney.

A large crowd took advantage of one of the few remaining days to see Tunney in action in his New York state training camp, soon to be broken up for transfer to Stroudsburg, Pa.

Double-Bill Today At Ft. McPherson

Two real battles should be the outcome of the doubleheader between the 22nd infantry and the Coca-Cola company, which will be played at Fort McPherson today, the first game starting at 1:30.

The last time these two teams met Coca-Cola won both ends and the soldiers will be fighting hard today to get revenge. There will be plenty of space provided for all fans that come out to view these games.

Shooting with him were three well-known trap shots of Atlanta. In the group above are (left to right), Captain J. E. Avery, Colonel H. J. Foster, Judge Calloway and Brad Timms. Colonel Foster and Mr. Timms are both former state champions.

Emil Levsen Wins Two Games From Boston Red Sox

Boston, August 28.—(AP)—Emil Levsen pitched and won both games of a doubleheader for Cleveland today, defeating the Red Sox by scores of 6 to 1 and 5 to 1. In each game he allowed Boston four hits.

As an added feature, Burns, of Cleveland, equalled the big league record of 59 two-base hits in a season made by Tris Speaker in 1923, when he doubled in the eighth inning of the first game. He went hitless in the second contest.

Cleveland cleaned up the series here, four straight.

SENATORS WIN, 3 TO 2.

Washington, August 28.—Scoring a run in the eighth and another in the ninth to overcome a White Sox lead, the Senators won today's game, 3 to 2.

Murray, besides letting Chicago down with five hits and striking out six, singled in the ninth, scoring the winning run on a single by McNeely and Mostil's wild throw to third.

TIGERS BEAT YANKS.

New York, August 28.—Detroit defeated New York here today, 8 to 4, in spite of a home run by Babe Ruth in the right field bleachers to open the eighth inning. Bob Fothergill, the league's leading hitter, led the Tiger attack with two doubles and three singles in five times at bat.

Neither of the starting pitchers, Hoyt and Wells, was able to go the distance. Hoyt was relieved during a rally by the Yankees, sending Wells to the showers in the fourth inning. Shawkey followed Hoyt and Stoner relieved Wells.

Ruth's home run led to the banishment of Bassler, Detroit catcher, who protested so heatedly that the long drive was a foul he was ejected from the game by Umpire McGowan.

BILL TILDEN WINS TWICE AT NEWPORT

Newport, R. I., August 28.—(AP) William T. Tilden closed the Newport invitation tennis tournament today with a twin triumph, winning the doubles final with Alfred H. Chapin, Jr., by defeating William M. Johnston and Dr. George King, 6-4, 6-2, 4-6, 6-8, 6-4, after he had vanquished Chapin in the singles, 3-6, 6-4, 6-0, 8-6.

The national titleholder and his partner encountered resistance from King and Johnston as stubborn as they had faced earlier in the afternoon in winning their semi-final test against Hugh G. M. Kelleher and Francis T. Hunter, which went five sets.

King was the target of the victorious team's offensive, Tilden and Chapin breaking through his service in each of the three sets to gain their winning margin.

PIRATES WIN SERIES.

Pittsburgh, August 28.—The Pirates made a clean sweep of the three-game series with the Giants, taking the final game, 8 to 7, although outhit. The visitors assumed a one-run lead in the eighth but lost the advantage in the home team's half of the inning when Pittsburgh scored four runs. The advantage was needed as the Giants rallied in the ninth, falling one short of a tie. Giant errors proved costly.

The game marked the end of the Giants' western trip in which they played 12 games and won only two.

Chicago, August 28.—Chicago made a clean sweep of the Boston series by taking the final game, 5 to 3, and running their winning streak to seven games. Larry Benton had two bad innings in which the locals bunched their blows.

Bob Osborn was wobbly at the start, but settled down to pitching effectively thereafter.

St. Louis, August 28.—The Cardinals staged a six-run rally in the third inning today and took the final game of the series from Philadelphia, 9 to 3.

O'Farrell's triple with the bases loaded in the third paved the way for an easy defeat of the Phillies. St. Louis remained in third place, Pittsburgh and Cincinnati both having won today's games.

Tech Football Tickets To Go on Sale Here Monday

Jacobs' Will Handle Public Seat Sale For Coming Season

Georgia Tech's season football tickets will be placed on sale for the public Monday morning at 8 o'clock at Jacobs' pharmacy at Five Points, it was announced at Georgia Tech Saturday afternoon. The sale was scheduled for Wednesday but due to the fact that the athletic authorities have worked faithfully for the past 10 days filling the alumni orders, the others are now ready for sale.

BY ROY WHITE.

Although the season's first official college football practice is yet eight days off, Georgia Tech's eager football candidates will work out for the first time this season Monday afternoon on Grant field, in preparation for the 1926 grind

The Southern conference ruling forbids any of the coaches to take their place on the field before September 6, but since many of the players and candidates are already in the city, an unofficial practice will start Monday.

Hank Bjorkman, all-American end from Dartmouth, who was appointed one of the assistant coaches at Georgia Tech last fall and who will handle the ends this season, and Don Miller, former Notre Dame star halfback and freshman coach at Tech last year, will arrive in Atlanta around Wednesday, it was announced at Tech Saturday. Both Miller and Bjorkman's contracts call for them to be in Atlanta by September 1, and word has been received that both are en route to Tech.

With both Bjorkman and Miller, two specialists on forward-passing systems, at Tech this fall, there should be a decided change in the Yellow Jackets' offensive.

Owen Pool, captain of the 1926 Yellow Jacket squad, will be the chief coach and director of the early work and he will be among the first players on Grant field this week. Pool will not attempt to run any signals with the team nor attempt to install any new plays into the Tech system during his short reign as coach and director, but will only try to lead the candidates in a little preliminary setting-up and hardening exercises.

Coaches Alexander, Fincher and Clay will be in the athletic association offices and issuing uniforms to the candidates as they report for practice. Practically all of the week will be devoted to issuing equipment and short preliminary workouts, preparatory to the real practice that will start September 6.

It is very likely that some former Georgia Tech stars will be on hand during the first week of practice to assist Pool in the preliminary work.

Since there are 17 letter men back from last year, and more than 40 freshmen and scrubs combined to begin the practice grind, it is very likely that more than 75 candidates will be seen on Grant field before the end of the week. The entire list will be carried for at least two weeks before the pruning knife is used by the coaches.

Georgia Tech always carried a squad of more than 50 during the entire season for use in practice scrimmages and Coach Alexander will keep every candidate that shows any promise as long as possible this year.

Several conferences have been held during the past week between the Tech coaches, but just what resulted from the conferences was not made public.

Since every football fan in Atlanta and surroundings have read time and time again of the losses of the 1925 Tech team this is no time to speak of the losses, but to think about the future stars to be developed during the coming season.

PYLE TO NAME "NET CIRCUS" NEXT MONTH

Philadelphia, August 28.—The Traveling Tennis circus which will accompany Suzanne Lenglen on her tour of North America, will be named by C. C. Pyle next month. The promoter has announced that by September 15 he expects to have seven or eight stars under contract.

Pyle said he was withholding announcement of his new players until after the Davis cup matches, which gave rise to the misleading impression that he intended to intimate that he had signed one or more of the American "big four."

Tilden, Richards, Johnston and Williams all have emphatically denied that they have been approached by Pyle. The national singles championship follows the Davis cup matches and none of the Americans who intend to enter would turn professional before the tournament.

It would seem more probable that Pyle has one of the members of the French Davis cup team in mind.

CHANNEL SWIM IS SHORT CUT TO FORTUNE

New York, August 28.—Swimming the English channel is considered a short cut to fortune for the first two women who accomplished the feat.

Gertrude Ederle, the first of her sex to swim the treacherous waters, has had offers of exhibition engagements which indicate that she may expect to earn $1,000,000 in return for the 14 hours and 31 minutes she spent in battling the waters which had defeated all previous women aspirants.

While Mrs. Clemington Corson was not known to have received any offers a few hours after her conquest of the channel today, records of the earnings of great professional athletes in this country were considered as giving assurance that she can, if she wishes, realize big returns for her 15 hours and 28 minutes of work in swimming the channel. Vaudeville booking agents and promoters of professional sport are always eager to engage athletes of either sex who gain widespread popular notice.

Wagers placed on either Miss Ederle or Mrs. Corson also were good financial propositions. Walter Lisserberger, who backed Mrs. Corson, won $100,000 by placing a $5,000 bet with Lloyds of London that she would swim the channel. He said he would give her $25,000 of his winnings. Henry Ederle, father of Gertrude, was reported to have won a large amount by placing a wager that his daughter would conquer the channel.

Chick Evans' Ball Stolen by Mike, Airedale Mascot

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Indianapolis, Ind., August 27.—The mighty throng was silent, no sneeze or frightful cough disturbed the awful stillness, no hand was even raised to swat a biting fly or brush away a grasshopper; no sound or movement was there among the vast multitude of spectators during the solemn occasion—Chick Evans was about to putt on the sixteenth green!

Now, Mike knew such deathly quiet was unnatural on the part of so many people. Mike is only an airdale and is the mascot of the Fort Harrison troops regulating the crowds at the Highland Golf and Country club during the western open golf tournament.

So it could not be expected that Mike should fully appreciate golf etiquette.

Following on the heels of his master, he cocked his head this way and that, listening for a sound. He looked up at his master with questioning eyes. The tenseness began to get on his nerves. Something exciting was about to happen, he decided. He became expectant and eager. Just then he heard a click and through the legs of the crowd he caught a glimpse of a small white ball rolling smoothly over the velvet green towards a man holding a flag.

In a flash Mike knew what was expected of him. It was his great moment and he decided to make the most of it. Instinctively, he knew he should capture his quarry before it disappeared down the little hole toward which it was rolling. It meant a mighty effort but he felt capable of it.

Streaking across that perfect green, he gained on the rolling ball as the crowd gasped with horror. The ball came to a halt just short of the hole as Mike swooped down on it and carried it away in his mouth, proudly wagging his stump of a tail.

Chick Evans grinned which made everything all right and the crowd laughed heartily. Mike was happy because he apparently had brought the people back to life and he cavorted over the green tossing the ball in the air and pouncing on it again and again. Chick put down a new ball where the official designated and the game went on.

Heavy Entry for Big Pike's Peak Marathon

A heavy entry is expected for the eighth annual Pike's Peak hill climb race, one of the year's classic events in automobile racing, which will be held over the historical Pikes Peak trail on Labor day. The prize list this year will include $1,500 in cash to the winner, $350 for second place and $250 for third. In addition, the famous Penrose trophy, a valuable cup obtained by Spencer Penrose in England, also will go to the victor.

Bible Class Asks Tex's Permission To Radio Fight

Philadelphia, August 28.—(AP)—Philadelphia fight fans are beginning to cast about trying to learn who will referee the world's championship bout between Jack Dempsey, title holder, and Gene Tunney, the marine challenger, in the sesqui-centennial stadium September 23.

The Pennsylvania law provides that bouts must be limited to ten rounds to a decision by two judges and in the event of a disagreement the referee shall make the decision. It is expected that the state boxing commission will insist on Pennsylvanians filling the three places. Who the three members of the commission have in mind, none of them has disclosed, and it is not expected a decision will be reached until shortly before the fight.

Among the numerous applications Tex Rickard has received for permission to broadcast the big bout was one from a New York radio interest which desires to give the details under the auspices of the Drexel Biddle Bible Class of America. This was made known at Rickard's headquarters here. What action Rickard would take was not indicated. The application was made by Herbert B. Glover, of New York.

Fidel La Barba Great Lover of Football

Fidel La Barba, the world's flyweight champion, while making his livelihood out of boxing, is one of the closest followers of intercollegiate athletics on the Pacific coast. The little 112-pound champion can name offhand the stars of eastern football teams which have journeyed to California to compete in intersectional struggles and he can also cite the best performances of the leading track and field athletes.

Iowa Grid Captain To Get Late Start

Football prospects at Iowa have been gloomy enough and now comes bad news which will plunge Coach Burton E. Ingwerson and his followers farther into the depths. Captain Paul E. Smith, relied upon to fill one of the end positions, has aggravated an old knee injury to the extent that he may be out for some time. Captain Smith, while not a regular last year even though he was elected captain, is a good end and an ideal leader. Romey, a regular end last year, is lost by graduation.

Cardinal Twirlers Practice Control

The St. Louis Cardinals' pitchers practice control by lining up before a wall at regulation throwing distance and aiming at certain spots. Sounds kind of fishy, but it is true, nevertheless.

HOW ABOUT THIS ONE?

Skeptics who are inclined to doubt the many tales of big fish in Black Rock lake at the new country club by that name, are invited to gaze upon the overgrown minnow pictured above. A. R. Slade, part owner and manager of the new club, snared this bass early Saturday while trying out a new artificial bait and the fish weighed six pounds and five ounces when taken from the water. It took Mr. Slade 20 minutes to land the big boy after he hooked him, and Mr. Slade is a big man.

Members of the club are allowed to fish in the lake under restrictions as to size and limit of the catch. Friends of members are allowed other privileges of the club but members only are allowed to fish.

Fifty Candidates For Petrel Eleven To Report Wednesday

BY ALTON REDFEARN.

Football season is almost here! In fact, it is only a matter of hours before Coach Harry Robertson and Coach Clyde Chestnut meet some 50-odd candidates on Hermance field for the initial workout of the 1926 season. The date is September 1, the day is Wednesday, and the hour for the beginning of the activities is 3 p. m.

From Wednesday through Saturday of this week, it is expected that Coach Robertson will not require his charges to don full uniform, for nothing will be done that will require the heavy football regalia. Usually the first three or four days are extremely hard ones. And, let it be said here, that it is the intention of Coach Harry to make these this year just as hard. A lot of work is accomplished in these four days. All the muscles and ligaments are loosened; the blisters are healed; and, in fact, everything is done to promote the conditioning process of the players. Also it affords time for the coaches to instruct the players individually and collectively on some of the finer points of the game.

The two weeks following will find Hermance field a scene of disorder. The rough work will be in evidence everywhere. There shall be players who are busily engaged in tackling the dummy, pushing the bucking board, running signals and the one thing which to a football player is the glory of all practice work—scrimmage.

Now to the first game of the season! When Georgia Tech and Oglethrpe lock horns on Grant field September 25 the football fans of Atlanta are in for a treat. Ever since these two schools began athletic relations Tech has always managed to win, but each year the score has been made smaller. Finally, last year the Birds were only six points behind when the referee blew his whistle. The present indications are that there will be another close game in this, the seventh game between the two teams.

Petrels Lose Many.

Georgia Tech was hit hard by the graduation last spring of several of its star performers. Such stars as Wycoff, Merkle, Williams, Wright, Godwin and others were lost to the Jackets. It is certainly true that lately things have looked bad for Tech, but as the days roll by the Yellow Jacket stock seems to rise. From the reserve squad and the freshman outfit of last year, it is understood that the Tech coaches have plenty of good material.

A similar condition exists at Oglethorpe. Never before in the history of the school has the Peachtree road institution been hit as hard by graduation. Such stars as Maurer, Kilgore, Parrish, Cooper, Smith, Cousins, Justus and Nix are gone. The majority of these were lost by graduation. However, some were the unfortunate victims of accidents and sickness. Like the Tech mentors, the Oglethorpe coaches have an abundance of material in the reserve squad and the freshman teem of last year. On paper the two teams appear to have lost about the same number of men, the advantage, however, going to the Jackets because of the heavier and more experienced players reporting back. Anyway, a close game is practically assured from any angle you look at the situation.

The chief worry of Coach Robertson is his reserves and last year's freshman squad. If they come through and make the players expected, Oglethorpe is practically assured of another team of championship calibre. However, if they fail the Oglethorpe stock will, indeed, be somewhat lowered. It is evident that Coach Harry is going to spend the major part of his time developing these men.

Many Vets Return.

Just a few words about those who are to return, the neucleus around which Coach Robertson expects to mold his team. In the line such star performers as Guthrie, Goldsmith, Perkins, Hancock, Chestnut, Carroll, Mosely, King, Hardin and Gordy will be on hand Wednesday afternoon ready for work. Of these, Clay Carroll, alternate captain, and Caruso Hardin will play their last year under the old Gold and Black. They are both in excellent physical trim, according to reports, and they are expected to surpass all of their past performances.

There are two men in this squad on whom Coach Robertson is counting on strongly. They are Major Guthrie and Bill Perkins. They are probably the two largest men on the squad and both are fairly fast and shifty. Both perform extremely well on the defense. It is the hope of Coach Robertson to make good offensive players of them, too. When this is accomplished there will not be many players in the south who can function better.

Of course, last year's freshman outfit had an abundance of material. Some of them might even be good enough players to make this year's varsity. They are certainly the best looking freshman squad ever to come to Coach Robertson. In the line there are some fine prospects. They are Sims, Dunn, Shockley, McLaughlin, Clifton, Andrews, Anderson and Bush.

Varsity Backs Look Good.

The varsity backfield for this year should be nearly as good as ever. The letter men who will be back are as follows: The venerable "Nutty" Campbell who will captain the Stormy Petrels this year, and who is entering his last year of football; Bob Shepherd, a big bulky fullback with plenty of drive; Clifton White, another big fullback; Stout Garlington, one of the fightingest halfbacks ever to play for the Stormy Petrels, and Alton Redfearn, another halfback who will wind up his football career at the conclusion of this season. With these five men as a neucleus and supplemented by such players as Massey, Bell, Taliaferro, Vaughn, Clements, Bass, Horton and Gilman, who are all stars hailing from last year's rat eleven, Coach Robertson should have two or three excellent backfields.

There is another backfield star whose return is as yet uncertain. He is Tooley Walsh. Tooley graduated last spring but he still has another year of football coming to him. As yet he has not made public whether he will return or not. It is hoped that he will return, for Tooley is an extremely fast back of the Maurer type.

Extensive Series In National May Untangle Clubs

Chicago, August 28.—(Special.)—What looks like an elimination contest in the tangled scramble for the National league pennant will get under way here and at St. Louis tomorrow, when four teams fighting for the championship of the senior circuit meet in a round-robin series lasting for more than a week.

The Pirates go to St. Louis for a three-day series with the Cardinals. At the same time the Cincinnati Reds are playing the fourth-place Chicago Cubs a similar engagement.

The St. Louis team comes to Chicago for a double-header, plays three games at Cincinnati, and steams into Pittsburgh for the Labor Day contest. Following the St. Louis games the Pittsburgh club will appear in a double-header against the Cubs, and the situation should have been clarified, unless all clubs break even.

In their games this season the Cubs have beaten the Reds six out of nine times on the home lot. They lost two games and one was left a tie. They have split even with the Pirates, winning and losing six here and taking six out of nine from the Cardinals. Although the Cubs are below the three league leaders by four and one-half games, their recent winning streak, coupled with their record against the league leaders may clip the title aspirations of any of the teams which hope to fight in the world's series.

Wins Nova Scotia Golf Title 6th Time

For the sixth year in succession, Gerland Mielke of Brightwood, Nova Scotia, has won the annual championship tournament of the Maritime Province Golf Association of Canada. He recently defeated Dr. J. H. L. Johnstone of Ashburn, 6 and 5. The match was played over the course of the Ashburn Golf and Country club at Halifax. Dr. Johnstone played sterling golf, but at the thirteenth hole his drive found a bad lie which made it impossible to hole out with fewer than six strokes, and Mielke took the hole with a five.

PIRATES HOLD SCANT LEAD IN NATIONAL

The elimination contest in the fight for the National league pennant is under way and the Pirates, Reds, Cardinals and Cubs are striving desperately for the championship of the senior circuit.

By virtue of an 8 to 7 victory over the Giants, the champion Pirates maintained their scant lead of four points over the Cincinnati Reds for the position of league leader. But the Reds are still hot on the trial and shut out the Robins, 7 to 0, Saturday. Luque, the Cuban pitching ace, allowed the Brooklyn nine but three scattered hits.

Cards Keep Third Place.

The Cardinals held tightly to their third position by mauling two Phillie pitchers to win, 9 to 3, while the Cubs held their own by beating the Braves, 5 to 3.

Waite Hoyt's failure to stem the Tiger batters in the early innings resulted in the Yankees' defeat, 8 to 4. Shawkey relieved Hoyt, but too late to repair the damage. The series between the Tigers and Yankees, the last these teams will play in New York this season, now stands at one all.

The Indians moved seven points towards the Yankees when they trimmed the Red Sox twice. The Redskins won the first game, 6 to 1, and the second, 5 to 1.

Ernie Nevers, west coast football hero, failed to hold up under the strain of the hard-hitting Athletics in the sixth inning and the Browns lost, 5 to 1.

The Senators scored two runs in the last two innings to beat the White Sox, 3 to 2.

V. M. I. STARTS GRID PRACTICE SEPTEMBER SIX

Lexington, Va., August 28.—(Special.)—Football practice at Virginia Military institute will be held a week from Monday, and from the first session Coaches Blandy Clarkson and Bill Raferty plan a series of experiments to work out the best backfield combination. The graduation of Captain Snail Caldwell left the cadets without a quarterback, and the loss of Windy White alone means that a punter, a forward passer, a line plunger, and a fullback to back the line on defense must be found among the candidates for the Flying Squadron.

The coaches hope to solve the quarterback problem by using Joe Farley, who acted as field general of the 1924 first-year eleven. Farley is heady, a clever passer, and a fair punter and dropkicker. Should he fill the vacancy, Al Barnes, triple-threat back on last year's freshman team, will be released for duty as a running back, his natural position. Bellinger and Wolf, having already been tested last year in giving the signals, will be given a chance as ball carriers.

Frank Nabers, Curly Gfroerer, Chapman, Minter and West, all reserves last year, and Harner, Bishop and Moore, who come up from the yearlings, stand out as possibilities for the other vacant berth in the backfield. Of these players, Nabers will probably be called on for some of the punting.

Walker, a husky ex-linesman of last year, is expected to get the job backing up the line that Windy White held so brilliantly. Walker, besides bringing up the weight average behind the line, is also a punter. A possible combination in the backfield, with Farley at quarter, Walker at full, and Barnes, Gfroerer, Harner or Nabers at halfbacks, would be light but fairly well balanced and lacking mainly in experience.

The cadets, with Rugh and Mondy at center, with Joyner as an understudy, are particularly well fortified at the pivot position. Veteran guards and tackles, with good freshman material, help the line situation. R. K. Smith, captain of last year freshmen, may be shifted from tackle to end to give needed weight on the flanks. Captain Fain and Thornhill are not too light for wingmen, and Yates and Crockett and Mose make up in speed what they lack in poundage.

Wisconsin Quint To Play Syracuse

Madison, Wis., August 28.—(Special.)—Wisconsin's 1926-27 basketball five will meet Syracuse university on the hard boards next winter, according to the announcement of Dr. W. E. Meanwell, Badger coach. The intersectional contest has been scheduled for January 3, and is to be played at Cleveland, Ohio.

The game is being sponsored by the Cleveland Alumni associations of both institutions, and is to be staged in the large auditorium of that city, which will accomodate more than 12,000 people. It is through the untiring efforts of W. B. Westphal, of the Cleveland board of education and a Wisconsin alumnus, that the meeting of the two quintettes has been arranged.

Syracuse university, from past records and early dope, will come west as a logical representative of the east. During last season the team, under the direction of Coach Lew Andreas, had a clean slate, winning twenty games and losing none. With such stars as Richtmeyer, Lee, Hanson, Eiseman and Rakov in the lineup, the Syracuse aggregation defeated a host of leading basketball schools Among those conquered were Michigan, Cornell, Army, Princeton, Penn State, Colgate and Pennsylvania.

Wisconsin is indeed fortunate in obtaining this intersectional battle, not only because of the high rating of their opponents, but because of the opportunity offered alumni in the middle west to secure seating accommodations for an intersectional game.

Lou Little Will Be At Georgetown Again

The athletic committee of Georgetown university has announced its coaching staff for the coming football season. Lou Little, former University of Pennsylvania all-American tackle, will again act as head coach. His assistants will be Mike Palf of Penn State, backfield coach; Herbert Kopf, of Washington and Jefferson, end coach; John Dagrosa of Colgate, line coach, and Frank Murray, Georgetown, scrub coach.

Red Distance Man Is Called Nurmi

Phil Osif, who won the six-mile run in both the senior and junior national A. A. U. meets at Philadelphia recently, will develop into a distance runner capable of regaining for the United States the ascendancy in the longer races, according to Harry Trotter, well-known track coach of the University of California in Los Angeles.

Trotter, after watching the 19-year-old Indian runner at his summer coaching school, declared that Osif is a second Nurmi. Track fans who saw the "Flying Finn" marveled at his seeming lack of effort, but Osif runs as if he were flying—a light, tireless pace, and steady hips—gliding through space without a quiver.

Stribling, Touchstone Box at Fashion Show

Judging from the amount of interest displayed in the fashion show and dance to be held at the city auditorium, for the benefit of Tallulah Falls school on September 14, there is no need for the committee to add to their long list of entertaining features. But in spite of this fact, the announcement now comes that "Young" Stribling and his favorite sparring partner, Benny Touchstone, will stage a four-round exhibition on that night as an added attraction.

With this latest announcement it is evident that every person who journeys to the auditorium on the night of the big fiesta will enjoy a full evening of diversified entertainment.

Enrico Leide, leading figure in the musical world of Atlanta, will organize and conduct the music for the evening and will also direct the big dance which is to be held in Taft hall immediately after the fashion show and boxing bout.

With a score or more of Atlanta's famous beauties engaged to model the fashions in the beauty pageant and two of the south's premier boxers slated to display the latest models in fistic fashion there promises to be no end of enjoyment in store for the guests.

THE BOYDEN SHOES for FALL

IT IS with a great deal of satisfaction that we announce the Boyden shoes for Fall—

They send memory back to a jubilant day when we first announced Boyden's—

At that time Muse's had been coming up, since the eighties, as a clothing store—first, in a small twenty-foot front, at 38 Whitehall gradually adding men's furnishings, hats, and a boys' department.

Then one great day we could move to 3-5-7 Whitehall—and—as fortune continued to smile, we reached the point where we could have a Men's SHOE Department—

We introduced the department with Boyden Shoes. Atlanta liked them just as well as we did, and the Shoe Department grew—

Today Muse's building rises over Five Points—seven great stories of style—presenting fourteen prosperous departments of good merchandise—

Through the years to now, the Boyden shoe has proved itself thorough, staunch, consistent and as perfect as human skill can make anything.

We have for you today—the Boyden Shoes for Fall 1926—and you will like them!

There is a Boyden for you—

Its service will keep you in Boydens—

That is the way of these splendid shoes

Walter Hagen Wins Western Open Championship

Ace of Professionals Wins With Record Card of 279 Strokes

Indianapolis, Ind., August 28.—(AP)—Walter Hagen, of Pasadena, Fla., won the western open golf championship at Highland Golf club this afternoon with a record of 279 strokes.

Hagen virtually clinched the championship by gaining a lead of six strokes over the field at the end of the 63d hole. His score as he entered the last lap was 244, while Harry Cooper was second with 250, Gene Sarazen third with 252 and Jock Hutchison fourth with 253. MacDonald Smith lost his title by scoring 289 for the 72 holes, eight strokes more than his record score last year.

Gene Sarazen scored 75 on his last round for a total of 288, tying with Harry Cooper. Jock Hutchison got a 73 for a total of 290.

Hagen did not start propitiously on the 72-hole journey, the first 18-hole stage costing him 75 strokes, or five above par for the 6,559-yard links. The lead in that round was taken by Gene Sarazen who scored 69 and was the only one to break par among the 250 starters. Second place went to P. O. Hart, of Marietta, who scored par 70. These two retained the lead during the second day, still one stroke apart, but Hagen by equalling the course record with 68 gained four strokes on Sarazen, who scored 72 for 141.

Hagen's 36 holes score of 143 left him tied for third place and a number of stars were bunched near the top, making the contest look like a thriller for the 71 survivors of the elimination rounds. Hagen took away some close finish prospects, however, scoring a remarkable 66 this morning.

The coming champion, who was to repeat his triumphs in this event of 1916 and 1921, overhauled Sarazen at the end of the first nine this forenoon by scoring par 35 while the New Yorker was taking 37 strokes. The super-human golf that comes to Hagen now and then certainly descended on his shoulders as he turned into the home stretch of the morning round.

Hagen Near Record.

Seldom, if ever, has a golfer scored 31 for nine holes of a full-sized golf links, but Hagen did it today, bagging four birdies, and not going above par on any of the other holes; and he barely missed an eight foot putt for a birdie 3 on the 18th for a 30. Once Hagen shot 33-29—62 on a Florida course, but it was far easier than the Highland links.

This marvelous round put Hagen four strokes in the lead as Sarazen took 72 for a total of 213 while Harry Cooper, despite his spectacular 66, had a total of 215. When Sarazen took 39 for the first half of the final round and Hagen got to the last quarter post in par 35, all but the most conservative granted him the title barring a fatal accident, especially as Cooper took 38 for the same nine.

This left Hagen with a lead of six strokes over his nearest competitor, Cooper, with only nine holes to play and without extending himself he breezed home in another par 35 for the record total of 279. His score was seven strokes better than the record for the national open held by Chick Evans, who played with Hagen today surrounded by a large gallery.

Among those who greeted the champion as he completed his record performance was Bobby Jones, Atlanta holder of all the premier titles except this one, and the British amateur, who arrived to play with Hagen, Sarazen, Smith and Cooper tomorrow in a benefit match for the James Whitcomb Riley Memorial hospital.

Champ Greets Champ.

"That's the sort of golf Hagen played last winter when he defeated me," said Bobby, "and when he is right he can lick anyone."

"The same to you," retorted Hagen as they shook hands.

Hagen's performances somewhat dimmed the glory of Harry Cooper's scintillating work in scoring his 66, which first broke the course record. Cooper took two strokes off par on each nine, ensnaring seven birdies, including three twos, but went one over par on three holes.

Another spectacular round was played by Al Espinosa, of Chicago, who got a 68, but his bad start of 79 raised his total to 291 despite a par 70 for the second circuit.

While there was no pressure on Hagen for first place, there was a considerable contest for second place which was shared by Cooper and Sarazen with 288. MacDonald Smith was only one stroke behind to finish in fourth place, while Jock Hutchison got fifth place with 290. Al Espinosa, John Farrell, Harry Hampton and Al Watrous were tied for next position with 291, while tenth place was shared at 292 by Laurie Avton, Charley Hall and Emmett French.

Chick Evans led the amateurs with 295. Eddie Held, of St. Louis, and Densmore Shute, of Huntington, W. Va., were next with 299. Joe Turnesa, of New York, who was runner-up to Bobby Jones in the national, never got started and accumulated 302 strokes, his last round costing him 79.

Boston Rookie Is Clouting Ball Hard

Frank Hogan, property of the Boston Braves, is leading the New England league in batting with a mark of .405, and doing a great job behind the bat for the Lynn team. The big fellow is also leading the league in home runs with 15 and in doubles with 22.

Pitcher Lefty Thomas Has To Get New Knees

"Lefty" Thomas, portside hurler, of the Des Moines team of the Western league, is to have some new knees. Thomas, whose mound performances this season have been somewhat impaired, due to unscheduled and unexpected performances of his knees, is going to try braces on both joints in an effort to keep the unruly bones in line. "These may not be the 'bees' knees," said Thomas, "but if they do what's expected of them I'll come through all right."

Fans Riot

Minneapolis, August 28.—Angered at the umpire, 500 baseball fans swept out on the field and started rioting following the defeat of the Minneapolis American association team by Milwaukee, 11 to 8. A squad of policemen quelled the rioters but not until after a number of windows in the clubhouse had been shattered.

The game had been marked by a clash between Umpire Connelly and Kilduff, second baseman for Milwaukee, who struck the arbiter on the jaw.

Connelly and Umpire Miller were escorted from the field by five policemen.

Scottdale Mills cinched the pennant in the Manufacturers' league by downing the Test and Repair department of the power company. The score of the first game was 2 to 0, while the second went to the Millers by the score of 5 to 2. The airtight pitching of Poss featured the first game, no one reaching third base. He only gave up four hits and he sent six back to the bench on three strikes each. W. Boyd and R. Boyd, with two hits each, led the stick work. Holcomb took the mound for the league leaders in the second game and he also was in good form, giving up only four hits.

The airtight twirling of O'Connor and the heavy hitting of Walker and Calloway featured Alexander-Seewald's 6-to-3 win over Capital City Chair Co. Calla-way slammed out a three-bagger with one man on while Walker's three-base blow came with two on the hassocks. McGuffin, on the mound for the losers, also chunked a nice game. McGuffin led the hitting for his team with two hits out of four times up.

The Exposition Sunflowers downed Piedmont Mills in both games of a doubleheader Saturday afternoon, the score of the first game being 6 to 3 and the second 4 to 0. The first game was a pitchers' battle between Hardy for the Sunflowers and Gaston for the Millers with Hardy having the edge all the way. Exposition put the game on ice by scoring four runs in the third inning and added two more in the fifth. Piedmont rallied and put over two in the fifth and one in the sixth. Whitfield led the hitting for the winners. Winn on the hill for the Sunflowers in the nightcap had things his own way throughout, limiting the Millers to four scattered hits.

The Atlantic Steel Co. defeated Beck and Gregg in both games of a double header, the first time to the tune of 8 to 1, while the final game resulted in a 6 to 5 victory for the iron-men. The steel plant's double win, while Buick and Stewart Avenue split-a double header, gives them the championship in the last half on the split season. Thelron-men will next meet Citizens and Southern Bank to determine the winner of the Spalding league pennant.

The Buick Motor company and Stewart Avenue divided a double-header at Spiller field Saturday afternoon, the Motor boys copping the decision in the first, 6 to 3, and dropping the second, 1 to 0. In the first game Stewart Avenue outhit the Motor boys, but they could not bunch their bingles off Hammack. Stewart Avenue got off to a one-run lead in the first inning, but after this the Buick twirler tightened up and they went scoreless until the sixth, when they put over their final two runs.

The Georgia Railway and Power Company won a hard-fought game from the Atlanta Baggage and Cab Company by the score of 6 to 4. The hitting was even for both teams but the Power company boys bunched theirs to better advantage. Fittery and Dowda led the hitting for the winners while Vandergriff and Evans showed up best for A. B. & A. Co. The Power company put over three runs in the first inning while the Cabbers came back with two in their half but after that both pitchers tightened up and it was a real battle.

H. Giles bested Murdock in a pitchers' battle Saturday afternoon and Fox Manufacturing company won an 11-inning victory over the Pullman company, 6 to 4. Fox Manufacturing got off to a three-run lead and it was not until the last of the seventh that the Pullmanites were able to knot the count. Both pitchers deserve a great deal of credit for both went the full route and were stingy with hits.

The Ruralist Press closed their season by downing the A., B. & A. Railroaders, 15 to 11, in a free-hitting and ragged battle. Both Burton for the winners and Mahone for A., B. & A. were touched up freely. Burton was given the best support, however. There lies the story. Ruralist Press made 13 hits, which, coupled with nine miscues by the Railroaders, counted for 13 runs, while A., B. & A. made only 11 runs off 15 hits. The hitting of Moore and Huntsinger with three hits each and a home run by Burton featured for the winners, while Mahone's three bingles, one of which went for the circuit, were the bright lights for the Railroad boys.

3 Trojan Grid Games To Draw 200,000 Fans

Three games alone on the 1926 gridiron schedule at the University of Southern California are expected to draw a total of more than 200,000 fans. The first will be the California-Southern California game at Berkeley on October 23 and should be viewed by 60,000. A week later Stanford plays the Trojans here. Seventy-five thousand at least will see this game, it is estimated. On December 4, Southern California should attract between 70,000 and 80,000 at the game with Notre Dame.

Shortening of Bout Tough on Tunney, Says Edgren

Gene Would Have Greater Advantage In Longer Battle

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

Gene Tunney, ex-marine, got the worst end of the deal when New York's boxing authorities got everything into such a silly muddle that Tex Rickard took the world's championship bout over to Philadelphia.

The marines and war veterans, who are behind Tunney to a man, will remember Messrs. Farley, Phelan and Ware for some time to come.

The fight in New York was to have been 15 rounds. In Pennsylvania it is scheduled for 10. Naturally Tunney, being younger than Dempsey, a more clever boxer and less of a "socker," would have a better chance in a longer fight. Ten rounds should just suit Dempsey. It makes condition less a valuable asset, and it's admitted that Tunney is in better fighting trim than the champion and that the chief question about Dempsey is whether or not he has gone back far enough to lose.

Ten Rounds Tough on Gene.

With 15 rounds to go Tunney's chance to win the heavyweight title looked very fair. Tunney has developed steadily in the past three or four years. He has put on weight until he is as large as Dempsey, or very nea it, and his weight is good solid flesh—no fat or useless tissue. Tunney has improved his boxing in every fight. He is a student of boxing, always trying to learn more about his profession. Harry Greb, who fought Tunney several times, beat Tunney badly the first trip and took a very bad beating from Tunney last time they met, says that he never saw any other fighter improve like Tunney. He says that Tunney will be better when he fights Dempsey than he ever was before, because he is always improving. Greb thinks that Tunney is a much harder man to fight than Harry Wills, because Tunney is in his prime, while Wills has grown old, stiff and slow. He says Dempsey might beat Wills easily and have trouble with Tunney.

Having a 15-round fight ahead, Tunney could have started cautiously. He could have jabbed and pecked at Dempsey for several rounds, guarding himself carefully and waiting for Dempsey to tire or to weaken under the challenger's straight punches. He could have cut loose when he felt that he had taken a lead. At least this was his plan of battle. Tunney didn't count upon getting to Dempsey seriously until after the tenth round. He was something in the position of Jess Willard at Havana, fighting Jack Johnson after Johnson had been out of the ring for several years.

The night before the fight Willard told me that he wouldn't hurry under any circumstances, that he knew he could box all afternoon without tiring, and that Johnson could not. He said he'd box carefully for 20 rounds without taking any unnecessary risk, and go after Johnson only when he felt that Johnson was weakening and had lost his punch.

He won the fight on that plan. Willard had 45 rounds to go—a regular championship distance. Tunney would have a first-class chance against Dempsey under similar conditions. Ten rounds is rather short to decide a championship match where the challenger has youth and condition to pit against a champion's experience.

Commish Irked Jack.

Having only 10 rounds to go, Dempsey can set a harder pace than he would in a longer fight, if he feels that he lacks anything in endurance. But perhaps it won't make much difference in Dempsey's fighting. Dempsey never has drawn a fight out, except in the affair with Tommy Gibbons at Shelby. Except in that fight he has always tried to win in a round, or as soon as he could after the first round. He is an impatient fighter, always willing to take any risk in the first rush. If Dempsey is Dempsey 10 rounds should be long enough, for he'll tear in so fast that Tunney will have to mix it in self-defense, and with two hitters like Dempsey and Tunney going at top speed there's little chance of needing all afternoon to find a winner.

Dempsey has come out at last with a clear statement of his stand on the matter of fighting Wills. He states what he always has told me personally, that he wanted Wills first and Tunney afterward. Dempsey always has claimed that Wills is a slow, clumsy fighter—just the kind he can beat easily. Tunney he regards as an ambitious youngster, and dangerous.

He laughs at the idea of Wills as a dangerous contender. Dempsey told Rickard to match him with either Wills or Tunney, as Rickard preferred, but said he'd much rather take Wills first. Wills would be "easy money," Dempsey said, and if he took Wills first he had no doubt of getting the profits of both matches.

Dempsey states that he has wanted a Wills fight for a long time, but that he has not been allowed to fight Wills. The New York boxing commission once signed Dempsey to fight Wills, then prevented the fight. Naturally after that exhibition of the political sidestep Dempsey lacked confidence in the commission's sincerity. He tried to get a Wills fight in other states, but found it blocked everywhere. Wills and his manager, Paddy Mullins, having taken part in blocking Dempsey from fighting Tunney in New York, Dempsey has offered to fight Wills anywhere that the match can be held, winner take all and for a side stake of $150,000, if Dempsey still has the title after he Tunney bout.

This is fair enough. The old-time champions fought for side stakes and on a winner-take-all basis. Corbett and Sullivan fought winner take all and for a side stake of $25,000, which was big money in their day. Corbett and Fitzsimmons fought winner take all at Carson, Nev., March 17, 1897. In Jeffries' time he always fought for a winner's and a loser's end, usually 75-25. He fought Jack Johnson for a winner's and loser's end in 1910. Since that time champions have demanded the big end, win, lose or draw. Tommy Burns started it by demanding $30,000 when he fought Johnson in Australia.

Would Draw Crowd.

Johnson demanded and got $30,000 for fighting Willard. Dempsey got $47,500 for Moran and a flat $100,000 for fighting Carpentier and a champion's percentage that ran to $475,000 for Firpo. He was guaranteed $300,000 for Gibbons, but never got the last $100,000 payment.

Dempsey vs. Wills, on a winner-take-all basis, would draw a huge crowd even below the Mexican border—where such a bout would probably have to be held. The winner take all—providing Wills has enough confidence to accept such a proposition—would make it look like a match, although in fact Wills and Dempsey would be just a case of putting a big, over-rated, aged and slow second-rater against a champion, and probably would end up in a row over Wills' holding and hitting or a knockout delivered by Dempsey in the first round.

The Tunney-Dempsey bout is infinitely preferable. Tunney is a clean young fighter, fair, fast and clever. He has a real chance to become champion, and if he makes the grade he'll be the most popular since John L. Sullivan's time.

ILLINOIS GRID OUTLOOK GOOD DESPITE LOSS

Urbana, Ill., August 28.—True, Harold Grange will be absent when Bob Zuppke calls the roll but conceding the greatness of the redhead's contribution to University of Illinois football the Illini think they are going to have a good team just the same. Indeed, if everything breaks well and some of the new candidates develop as enthusiasts hope they will, it is quite possible that Illinois will be stronger than last year.

The layout is this: Practically a veteran line, from end to end and a green backfield. Everything depends on the showing of the new backs. For three years "Zup" has framed his offense around Grange, not only because it was logical to make the most of "Red's" talents but for the reason there was nobody else much to carry the ball. Grange's mates in the backfield were reliable players, whose work helped "Red" to make the most of his ability but they seldom cut loose themselves.

Now many fans ask: "Who is going to take Grange's place?" a question which can be succinctly and emphatically answered: "Nobody." Don't think for a minute that Zuppke is grooming any player as a "successor to Grange." There won't be any such animal. But Zuppke does hope to be able to develop a backfield with ground-gaining power distributed instead of concentrated in one player.

All through spring practice Zuppke spent most of his time on a backfield combination consisting of Daugherity, Timm, Peters and Lanum. Daugherity, fullback, next to Grange, was the best ground gainer last year. Timm is a stocky, 170-pound lad from Idaho who runs low and hard as last year's varsity ruefully testified. "Frosty" Peters, 170 pounds, from Montana, is a fast open field runner. "Frosty" has been heralded as a "successor to Grange," which will make it hard on the boy as too much will be expected from him. He has possibilities but nobody expects him to come near rivaling the great Harold. Peters kicked 17 field goals, the world's record, in a contest played by the freshman team of the University of Montana.

Frank Lanum, former Decatur high school player, will probably carry the brunt of the kicking. Lanum, who has had two brothers on the varsity, weighs 190 pounds and stands 6 feet 1 inch. He will call signals, back up the line, and kick and pass.

Gallivan and Leonard, sub backs, and Joe Green, a regular back providing he gets eligible, will dispute honors in ball carrying.

2 Louisville Men Are Sold to Cubs

Chicago, August 28.—The close of a deal which brings two players from the Louisville club of the American association to the Chicago Cubs, has been announced here by President William Veeck.

The players are Earl Webb, an outfielder, and Lee Cotter, a first baseman. Payment for Webb will include one Cub player, whose identity has not been disclosed, and Cotter will be taken on credit, the Cub management having until next spring to turn him back or pay for him.

Columbia	000 000 1—1

Batteries—Williamson and Smith; J. Purtell and Hedgepeth.

HORNETS LOSE TWIN BILL.

Greenville, S. C., August 28.—Wilcey Moore, the "Big Cyclone," laid Charlotte to waste today when he won his eighth shut-out of the season, 4 to 0, making his 28th victory, and in the nightcap Lee Ormand allowed the Hornets only three hits, giving the Spinners a double victory for the day and a four-straight for the series. The score of the second game was 4 to 2, won by Frank Walkers' home run. Spiers played sensationally.

First Game.

Probable Entries In Lakewood Races Center of Interest

With entries in the four rich stakes events to be run at the Southeastern fair, October 2 to 9, set to close Wednesday of this week, September 1, active sporting interest centered Saturday on prospective entries for the horse racing at Lakewood.

With grand circuit entries virtually eliminated as a result of conflicting dates, the fair association is bidding for the swiftest horses that are racing outside the circuit, seeking chiefly to draw southern horses from the seven southeastern states which the fair represents.

"Grand circuit races in Atlanta at the fair have done very little to develop horse racing in the south because few southern bred horses, with the notable exception of several large stables, have been able to get into the competition," it was stated Saturday by Oscar Mills, secretary-manager of the fair association.

Rich Purses Offered.

"With rich prizes open to smaller stables, the fair association this year is offering a real inducement for the breeding and development of a better grade of race horses throughout the section and will offer a race card only a matter of two or three seconds per mile slower than the grand circuit events," he explained.

The stake events, for which entries must be mailed not later than midnight Wednesday of this week, will be run for stakes of $1,000, put up by the Southeastern fair, in addition to the added money from all entry fees, and a number of valuable cups and trophies.

The first stake event will be Tuesday, October 5, for pacers with win-race records of a mile in two minutes and 20 seconds; the second will be Wednesday for trotters with win-race records of one mile in two minutes and 10 seconds; the third on Thursday for trotters with win-race records of a mile in two minutes and 22 seconds and the final stake event, Friday, will be for pacers with win-race records of a mile in two minutes and 17 seconds.

The sports program will include three races each day, beginning Monday, October 4, each race to be run in three heats. Three purse races will make up the card for Monday and one stake race and two purse races for each of the following days.

While entries in the stake races close Wednesday of this week, the purse race entries will remain open until September 28.

Building of Backfield Alabama's Big Job

BY BOB MATHERNE.

University, Ala., August 28.—One of the numerous tasks connected with the rebuilding of Alabama's Crimson Tide is that of getting together a backfield that will have some semblance to the powerful one of last year which had Pooley Hubert, Mack Brown, Hershal Caldwell, Red Barnes and Grant Gillis as the first five. For of that quintet, Barnes and Caldwell remain, although there are about 10 others who will seek regular berths for the Wademan this fall.

The three losses include the best punter of the 1925 team, its quarterback, the best receiver of passes, the two best passers, the best open-field runner, and the real brains of the team in Hubert. Barnes and Caldwell, who ran few times with the ball, formed the interference.

Filling Hubert's place as a signal-caller is the hardest task of the Crimsons. Gillis having acted as sub quarterback, there remains only a trio of players whose sole experience at calling signals came in their freshman years. Either Barnes, who is captain this season, or Johnson, a reserve fullback the past two years, will get the job this season. Should they fail to satisfy the Crimson mentors, it is believed that Dave Rosenfeld, a sensational back two seasons ago who was out with a bad foot last season, or Dick Hamner or Ellis, small fast backs, will be given a chance.

Punters Fair.

Johnson and Barnes can both punt some, Barnes having aided Gillis most of last season and at times getting a distance that equalled that of Gillis. As to the passing, that's to come. Hoyt Winslett, an end last season, did a little long passing and may be used some in the backfield this season to add that phase to the backfield power, but the Crimsons intend working on other candidates so as to have two or three men playing who will be able to get the pigskin away accurately and fast to short or long spots down the field.

Alabama's first six now look to be Captain Barnes, Caldwell, Johnson, Rosenfeld, Tolbert Brown and Winslett. The reserves from last year are Holder, Hamner and Collier. The freshman players are Taylor, Reverra, McCracken, Ellis and Earl Smith. That completes the list, with the fact that Brown, Reverra and Winslett are apt to see service at the wing positions.

The starting four will be chosen from the first six mentioned unless the unforeseen occurs and one of the reserves or ex-frosh shove to the front. If Brown, Barnes, Johnson and Caldwell start, the Crimsons will have four men who have earned letters, who are light as a group, but who are all well heeled for speed. Brown and Caldwell will do well to average 160 pounds together, while Johnson will get up to 175 pounds and Barnes around 172. Caldwell, in condition and despite his looks, will weigh only 157 pounds.

Cleveland Youths Bet on Checks

Sporting Cleveland, banned by an edict of Safety Director Ed Barry from race horse betting and unable to buy forms or race guides in the city turned its attention to a new form of gambling recently.

Telegraph operators on a brokers' wire with offices in Cleveland, Duluth, Chicago and Winnipeg held a checker contest. Bets as high as $100 a game were made and booked by the horse bookmakers, who were unable to ply their regular vocation.

The operators used checker boards with numbered squares and as player in Canada made a move it was flashed on the wire.

Downtown Cleveland, "in the know," thronged the broker's offices.

FEW MOTORISTS REALLY DRIVE A CAR

Have you ever really driven your car?

You may have covered tens of thousands of miles at the wheel; you may have made a transcontinental trip, and yet you may not actually have "driven" in the intensive sense.

According to G. Clark Mather, chief engineer of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car company, the well-made stock car of today is capable of feats of endurance and stamina that would have been regarded as severe tests of specially built racing cars of ten years ago, but not one motorist in a hundred ever drives his car to the utmost.

In short, the work exacted of an automobile by the usual owner-driver is far below its capacity, yet manufacturers continue to improve their cars and increase their performance ability to give even greater margin of safety and endurance.

Visitors at the Paige-Detroit plant frequently remark on the severity of the trials and tests given cars in the hands of testers and engineering executives, when the cars are forced to their limit and subjected to more hard running in a day than most cars get in a year. These cars are really "driven"—intensively. These tests either show where improvements are to be made, or demonstrate that in ordinary service the cars are bound to stand up.

On the other hand, there is one form of abuse that the average car is subjected to by the owner that often offsets the margin of safety and reserve of strength built into the car at the factory, and that is neglect.

Now, while an engineer delights in severe tests (sometimes it seems as if the engineer isn't happy unless he can effect a breakdown of the car), he is temperamentally incapable of neglecting basic principles, such as correct engine lubrication, proper tire pressure, and so forth.

That is the difference between an engineer and an owner. The former will subject the car to severe trials in an effort to benefit the owner. Then the purchaser will use the car with only a small fraction of the severity it is designed to withstand, but will abuse it unfairly by neglect so that he does not get out of his car the full value that has been built into it.

According to Mr. Mather, many an owner could drive his car twice as hard as is his habit, and be the gainer in the end, provided the car always received proper care and maintenance.

Reagan and Snipes Matched by Watson On Card September 7

Benny Reagan, of Atlanta, pleasing young protege of Stormy Mott's, and Honey Boy Snipes, taught in the Stribling school of fighting, have been matched for a third battle before Atlanta fans, as a ten-round preliminary to the Frankie Murphy-Benny Touchstone bout September 7, Matchmaker Watson stated Saturday.

Two meetings between the two bantams here have resulted in victories for each side. A third fight is necessary to establish supremacy between the duo and, ever willing to please, Mr. Watson dangled a handsome purse before their eyes to land the attraction to feature along with Murphy's comeback attempt.

Besides those two bouts, Watson has in mind another ten-rounder, a four-rounder and a battle royal, which would aggregate 34 rounds of boxing besides the Senegambian free-for-all. Quite an entertainment.

It is evident that Mr. Watson and his Gate City A. C. constituents mean to give Atlanta a show unparalleled in point of action, and they have one about their business in a very workmanlike manner. Murphy and Touchstone alone should furnish enough red-blooded action to satisfy the most exacting and certainly a hammer-and-tongs fight looms in the Reagen-Snipes clash.

It will matter little who is signed for the other events since the chief interest will be centered in the two bouts announced. However, Watson promises some well-made matches all along the line, and all for $3.30 top price.

TEST PROVES STRENGTH OF ESSEX COACH

In many parts of the country Hudson-Essex dealers are demonstrating in interesting and spectacular ways the unusual strength of the Essex all-steel coach. In one city more than three tons of wooden and steel beams were placed on the roof of the body without in any way affecting it. After this demonstration was over, in fact, the body was remounted on a chassis and is being used as a demonstrator by the distributor.

In another city—located in the cotton belt—a dealer piled two bales of cotton on the roof of the car and drove around the streets. In as much as all southerners know that a bale of cotton weighs more than 500 pounds, the sight attracted a great deal of attention.

The test of the wooden and steel beams was tried by Walter Zimmerman, of Columbus, Hudson-Essex distributor in the mid-Ohio district. After wooden beams and a platform had been placed on the roof of the car, a set of steel beams was obtained from a nearby skyscraper under construction. These were piled atop the coach body until the total burden on it was 6,850 pounds.

It was shown as an exhibit in the main salesroom. As a part of the proof of strength, salesmen opened and closed doors of the car, showing that there was no strain or distortion on the body.

"Such tests as these," according to J. W. Goldsmith, of the Goldsmith-Becker Co., Hudson-Essex distributor here, "are evidences of the Hudson-Essex claim that there is no automobile body made, at any price whatever, which is more solid, rigid and strain-proof than the all-steel Hudson and Essex coaches. Not only are they built exceptionally strong and rigid, but also they are so united with the chassis that the whole structure is virtually one unit.

"The whole conception and construction of the bodies is original with Hudson-Essex, and we believe that the results are entirely unique in the automobile field. There has naturally been a strong demand for Essex coaches—so strong that although they are built in the world's largest single body plant, we shall be hard pushed to meet the public demand."

HUPP ANTICIPATES FINE FALL BUSINESS

"We are looking forward to the largest autumn sales we have ever made," O. C. Hutchinson, general sales manager of the Hupp Motor Car corporation, said yesterday, following reports received by him of business conditions in all parts of the United States and Canada.

"The entire North American continent is in a generally prosperous condition—probably more prosperous, considering every branch of activity, than ever before. There are practically no evidences of inflation or overspending. Conditions in the farm market are at least as good, probably better, than a year ago. Road construction is proceeding in good shape, affording better transportation to several hitherto rather isolated farming and grazing sections of the country than they have yet enjoyed."

Mr. Hutchinson reports that retail sales of Hupmobiles in the United States and Canada for the nine months ending July 31 were approximately 53 per cent greater than those for the corresponding period a year earlier. Factory shipments for the same period were 39,697 cars, compared with 27,134—an increase of 46 per cent. Shipments for the first seven months of 1926 were in excess of those for the entire year of 1924, and were within 6,000 cars of those for all of 1925.

The company reports that its shipments of cars during August and September will more than double those of the corresponding months in 1925, and may, according to present indications, reach an even higher mark.

Drawings Are Made In U. S. Doubles Play

Boston, August 28.—(AP)—Drawings for the United States lawn tennis championship to begin Monday at the Longwood Cricket club, in Chestnut Hill, were announced today with four American and two French teams seeded.

An early match between the leaders of the American Davis cup team, Captain Williams and Vincent Richards and one of the leading foreign threats, Henri Cochet, and Rene LaCoste, seems likely from their position in the first quarter of the draw.

Spirited play is looked for from the first round match of William Johnston and Edward G. Chandler, with Lionel Ogden and Cranston Holman. Foreign players include representatives from France, Japan, Canada, Mexico and Australia, although France and Mexico are the only two with teams in the tournament.

The drawings for the first round matches on Monday follow:

First Quarter.

Richard N. Williams, II, Bryn Mawr, Pa., and Vincent Richards, New York, (national champions 1925) vs. Lem Baker and J. W. Hubbell, Kansas City (Missouri valley champions).

Axel Graves, Chicago, and Henry Guild, Boston, vs. Barry Wood, Jr., and C. A. Devons, Boston.

Arnold Jones and William Ingraham, Providence, vs. Dr. Edward B. Benedict and James Moss, Boston.

Alfred S. Dabney, New York, and Carl S. Pfaffman, Boston, vs. Henry Dochet, Lyons, and Jacques Brugnon, Paris (English champions).

Second Quarter.

Lewis N. White, Austin, and Louis Thalheimer, Dallas (national clay court champions), vs. A. G. Waters and C. E. Granger, New Orleans (southern champions).

John W. Foster, Boston, and F. L. Pierce, Jr., Quebec, vs. Manuel Llano and Claude Butlin, Mexico City.

Kenneth Appel and John Van Ryn, New York, vs. Anton Von Bermuth and H. Wolf, New York.

Henry Norton and Leslie Johnston, St. Paul (northwestern champions) vs. C. Alphonse Smith and Edward Jacobs, Baltimore (middle Atlantic champions).

Third Quarter.

William Johnston and Edward G. Chandler, San Francisco, vs. Lionel Ogden and Cranston Holman, San Francisco.

Howard Langley, Seattle, Washn., and Frank Shields, New York, vs. Fritz Mercur and Neil Sullivan, Philadelphia.

George E. Abbott, Boston, and Frank Broadhurst, Melbourne, Australia, vs. Wilmer Allison, Fort Worth, and John Barr, Dallas, Texas.

W. Emms and E. B. Pierce, Salt Lake City (intermountain champions) vs. Jean Borotra and Rene Lacoste, Paris, (English champions 1925).

Fourth Quarter.

William T. Tilden, II, Philadelphia, and Alfred H. Chapin, Jr., Springfield, Wallace Scott and T. MacDonald, Seattle, Wash., (Pacific northwest champions).

Nathaniel W. Niles, Boston, and Watson Washburn, New York, vs. Malcolm T. Hill and Henry L. Johnson, Jr., Boston.

Fred C. Baggs and Louis B. Daily, Jr., New York, vs. Takeichi Harada, Japan, and F. Howard Voshel, New York.

J. Brookes Fenno, Jr., and Josiah Wheelwright, Boston, vs. Phillip Neer, Portland, Ore., and James Davies, Los Angeles, (Pacific coast champions).

Sunday Baseball May Be Halted In Quaker City

Harrisburg, Pa., August 28.—(AP)—Proceedings to halt the playing of Sunday baseball in Philadelphia were instituted in the Dauphin county court today in the form of a quo warranto action brought by Attorney General Woodruff against the Philadelphia American league baseball club.

The suit is similar to that brought by the state against the Sesqui-centennial exposition commission to stop the Sunday operation of amusements and commercial features of the exposition.

The baseball club was named defendant as a corporation and was given until September 13 to answer. The court after that date will fix a later time for a hearing.

The action was brought as a result of the game played last Sunday in Philadelphia between the Athletics and the Chicago White Sox.

Under the attorney general's petition the Dauphin county court is asked to issue an order calling upon the baseball club to show by what authority the game was played on Sunday, the state contneding that by so doing the baseball club violated its charter rights.

GEORGIA COACH MOURNS DEATH OF HIS FATHER

Athens, Ga., August 28.—(AP)—John Stegeman, 60, father of Herman J. Stegeman, director of athletics at the University of Georgia, died at his home at Holland, Mich., early today, according to advices reaching his son here tonight. Mr. Stegeman, accompanied by his wife, will attend the funeral services to be conducted at Holland sometime next week.

In addition to Herman J. Stegeman, Mr. Stegeman is survived by his widow, Mrs. Hannah Stegeman, and four sons, Manley Stegeman, of Detroit; Gerhard Stegeman, professor of chemistry at the University of Pittsburgh; Paul Stegeman, of Midland, Mich., and Dr. Wilson Stegeman, of the University of Oregon.

Federal Waterfowl Season Changed

In order that all sportsmen in the state of Washington may be informed regarding the federal law the biological survey of the United States department of agriculture announces a change in the regulations under the migratory-bird treaty act, which now prescribe a uniform open season for hunting migratory waterfowl (except wood ducks, eider ducks and swans), coots, gallinules, and Wilson snipe and jacksnipe in the state of Washington from October 1 to January 15. This change was made in response to a resolution adopted on February 2, 1926, at a meeting of county game commissioners representing that portion of Washington east of the summit of the Cascade mountains and approved by the state game department.

Tate and Thomaston Play Here Labor Day

The Tate baseball team, headed by Colonel Sam Tate, president of the Georgia Marble company, and Manager Frank Thrasher, former champion batter of the Southern league and late of the Philadelphia Athletics, will play a double-header at Spiller's field Labor day with Thomaston's fast team for the independent baseball championship of Georgia. Tate and Thomaston are the leading independent ball clubs of the south and are each claiming the championship of Georgia, and are eager for games on neutral soil.

The Tate club is composed mostly of college players who are well-known stars, from the University of Georgia, Auburn, Oglethorpe and Wake Forrest. They have played to date 30 games, won 25 and lost 5 for an average of .883 and have scored 216 runs while their opposition has only been able to score an even hundred.

Tate has a well-balanced fielding outfit and the hardest hitting team that has been seen in Atlanta for a number of years, which accounts for their high average of seven runs per game. They also boast a pitching staff in Baker, R. T. Buchanan, H. Buchanan, "Shaky" Kain, Tully and Walker that would do themselves proud individually or as a whole on any class A team, and no doubt there will be more than one big league baseball scout in the stands to watch these hurlers in action when play is called September 6.

Thomaston also has a fine aggregation of ball players and has been clamoring for a series with Tate for some time. Should they be successful in defeating the Tate outfit in both games of the double-header here Labor day, their claim to the championship will be fully justified.

Tate and Thomaston are two of the wealthiest cities of their size in the state and their respective teams are sponsored and owned by their leading citizens, and fans may rest assured of two hotly contested games on account of the stormy rivalry between these two cities.

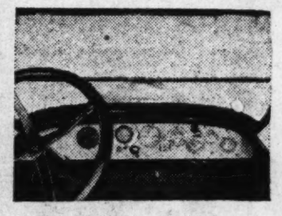

Claim Boston Fans Understand Baseball

The baseball fans of Boston are said by experts to have a better understanding of the fine points of the national game than those in any other city, which perhaps explains the small attendance there for the two major clubs.

Chicago Cubs To Have a Comiskey

Tommy Comiskey, of Hartford, may be sold to the Chicago Cubs before the season is over. In fact, there is a well-founded report that Chicago has bought the player for fall delivery.

Exit—the Cluttered Instrument Board

The instrument board of the modern automobile reflects its simplicity of design throughout. Contrast the artistic arrangement of the Studebaker custom sedan instrument board (left) with the cluttered instrument board below.

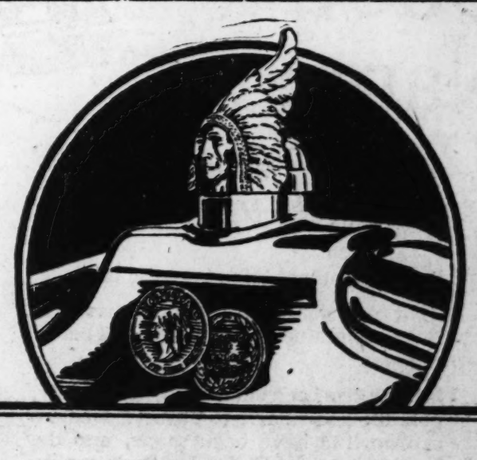

To make automobile driving as simple as walking is the ultimate aim of automotive engineers. In the above illustrations, a glance tells of the progress in this direction during the past few years.

Consider the photograph of the instrument board of 1920, pictured above. This imposing array of meters, switches and various other controls was carried on the instrument board of the 1920 Studebaker light six touring car, holder of the stock car road record between Los Angeles and San Francisco—covering the 411 miles in nine hour and fifteen minutes.

Naturally, when the drivers of this car started on a record-breaking trip, they wanted to know at all times just how their motor was functioning, so we find seven dials of various kinds. In addition, there were ignition switches, headlight switches, dashlight switches, a choke rod, a carburetor mixture control, throttle and spark adjustments—spread over the surface of the board. No wonder the driver carried an observer to interpret the performance story as told by the conglomeration of dials and to manipulate the maze of supplementary controls.

Contrasting sharply with that picture is the result of six years of progress in automobile design as represented in the most modern motor car—one of the Studebaker custom sedans. Here a glance at the instrument board tells the whole story of motor performance for the speedometer, oil gauge, gasoline gauge, ammeter and engine heat indicators are so conveniently grouped under glass and illuminated by direct light as to reveal instantly everything the driver wants to know. There is no groping for the lighting switch. It is at his fingers tips on the steering wheel. In fact, after the initial start, there is no need for removing the hands from the wheel.

PUBLIC LIKES NEW CADILLACS

Detroit, August 28.—Growing interest in and demand for individualized coach work in quality cars is reflected in reports from Cadillac distributors and dealers in every part of the country, according to H. M. Stephens, general sales manager of the Cadillac Motor Car company.

"Cars which combine the greatest amount of artistry with the most distinctive color schemes and the greatest amount of individuality in design are creating the greatest amount of interest," Mr. Stephens states, "and we are convinced that, in our program of 50 body types and styles and 500 color and upholstery combinations, we have anticipated by at least 12 months a tendency which is growing in strength among motor car owners.

"Preliminary reports of the automobile salons to be held in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles during the coming season indicate that these exhibitions, which are the industry's most selective shows, will be conducted on more extensive lines than ever before. The demand for exhibition space exceeds the capacity of the various ball rooms and among the applicants for space are a prominent Parisian carroserie and a foreign car which has not been exhibited in this country for several years.

"Particular attention has been attracted to the Cadillac program because it has fostered the present tendency by creating the most extensive lines of individualized coach work ever produced by one manufacturer. Reports from our distributors and dealers disclose an intensified interest and quickened demand for the new cars. They state that the advance in the aesthetic development of the car is considered equally important with many of the company's greatest engineering achievements, and that the personalized motor car makes a particular appeal to women.

"The new demand for individuality in motor cars is part of a national trend toward individuality which has been rapidly developing during the past four years. It has been expressed in the furnishings of homes, the selection of greater varieties of colors and material in dress, and even in changes in school curricula to encourage the expression of individuality, and we believe that the great margin by which the new Cadillac has outsold every Cadillac model which preceded it will be still further widened by the new developments of color, luxury, style and distinctive individuality."

MONOPOLY OF RUBBER IS ATTACKED

"Who is the man who, practically single handed, faced the great foreign rubber monopoly and made plain to congress the necessity of action on the part of the United States, and whose action kept crude rubber at normal prices?"

This question is asked on every side these days, for Harvey Firestone has never been inclined to seek the limelight though he has long been recognized as the leader in the huge tire industry.

Harvey S. Firestone was born in Columbiana county, Ohio, in 1868. He was one of three sons, his father a land owner and farmer, as were all of his ancestry. He was educated in the public school of Columbiana going to high school and then business college in Columbus. He has five sons and one daughter, the oldest son, Harvey Firestone, Jr., being actively connected with the business in Akron. This son has recently returned from London where he opened European offices for the Firestone Liberian project.

His Business Career.

Mr. Firestone's business career began in Columbus where he first was bookkeeper for a small coal concern. Next he became a traveling salesman for a drug company, after two years accepting a position as Detroit manager for the Columbus Buggy company. Here through his interest in rubber tires for buggies, Mr. Firestone first became acquainted with the rubber business.

After various connections in that field he went to Akron, organized the Firestone company with a capital of $50,000 and secured a small vacant foundry building as a factory for producing carriage tire rubber.

With Mr. Firestone's genius for organization and selling, and with the growing demand for automobile tires, the business increased from $100,000 the first year to several million in 1905 about which time Henry Ford sent the Firestone company an order for 2,000 sets of tires—largest order ever placed up to that time. It was then that lasting friendship started between Mr. Ford and Mr. Firestone.

Sales Are $125,000,000.

In 1925, the year celebrating the Firestone company's 25th anniversary, sales amounted to more than $125,000,000, the largest in the history of an exclusive tire company in the world.

Notable in the tire process and products pioneered by Mr. Firestone are the straight side automobile tires, still standard in the industry for the heavier cars; the detachable tire rim, a basic patent and now manufactured by Firestone Steel Products, a subsidiary supplying rims to 87 per cent of all car manufacturers.

The full-size balloon tire also is a Firestone achievement and a large percentage of the total Firestone production now is balloon tires. Much of the success in this new type of casing is attributed to the famous exclusive Firestone gum-dipping process.

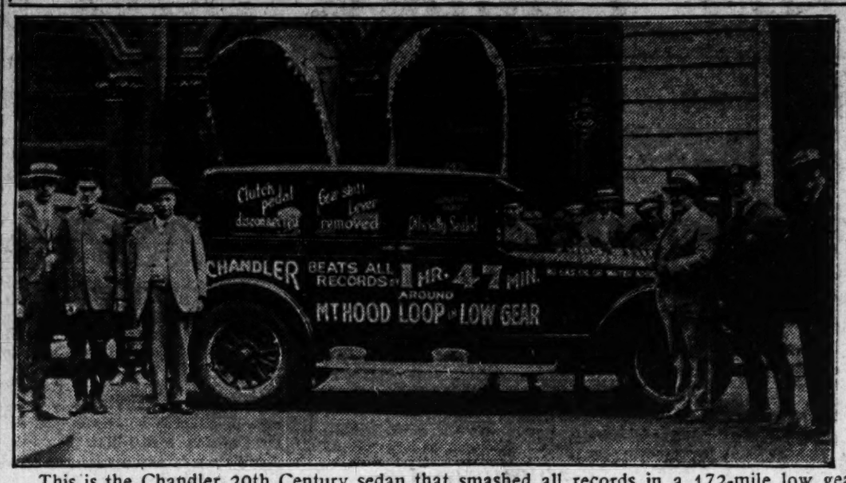

The Gum-Dipping Process.

This is a method of literally dipping the tire fabric in a bath of gum, huge rollers then forcing the rubber through and through, literally impregnating each strand of cotton.

This is done before the regular calendering process, the result being an almost total elimination of friction between the cord strands. It is this friction, generated by heat from the swiftly revolving tire, that separates the strands finally causing premature breakdown of the tire.

Visitors to the four mammoth Firestone plants in Akron—there are others in Hudson, Fall River and Canada—acclaim the trip a remarkable experience, the splendid spirit manifest among the 12,000 workers being no doubt due in part to each employee being a stockholder in the company, with each one's welfare cared for by insurance, medical and dental clinics and healthy working conditions.

Chandler Makes Record Run in Low Gear!

This is the Chandler 20th Century sedan that smashed all records in a 172-mile low gear trip around tortuous Mt. Hood Loop, near Portland, Oregon. Chandler made an average speed of 24,28 miles per hour during its seven-hour and five-minute grind—beating the best previous time by one hour and forty-seven minutes. The car was certified as a strictly stock model by police officials and by President Wm. Merry, of the Portland Advertising club. Before the run the car was placed in low gear and the gear-shift lever and clutch pedal removed.

COMMERCIAL BODIES ON CHEVROLET CHASSIS

Development of distinct types of commercial car bodies, designed and manufactured in their entirety by the Chevrolet organization, now affords the public a complete line of Chevrolet-built passenger and commercial vehicles for the first time in the company's history.

Complete trucks are available for immediate delivery to the purchaser. They are the one-ton panel delivery—one-ton stake and the one-ton grain carrying body.

The chassis can be furnished also with cab only, suitable for mounting any special truck body desired by the owner.

Substantially the same cab is used on all bodies. The cab is entirely enclosed and weather-proof and affords the same comfort in the driver's compartment as a Chevrolet passenger car. The doors are 24 inches wide, with high-grade locks. Plate glass side windows are furnished with Ternstedt regulators as in the standard closed car. A full ventilating windshield, glass rear windows, cab lining and cushion covering of fabrikoid leather, combination stop and tail light and conveniently-placed instrument panel are features. Seats are arranged for easy handling of controls and steering wheel. The cab is biscay green, duco striped in gold and cowl lights are standard equipment.

NEW FREE SERVICE FOR WOCO USERS

For weeks Wiley Moore, president of the Wofford Oil Company of Georgia, has been looking mysterious and hinting of a remarkable new type of service to be offered to Atlanta motorists. It was known that Fred Ridley, well-known Atlanta motor authority, had been sent to Columbus, Ohio, to stury lubrication under W. G. Clark, chief lubricating engineer of the Pure Oil company and well-known authority and author on lubrication. Friday Mr. Ridley returned to Atlanta and Saturday morning Mr. Moore gave the complete details on the revolutionary plan that the Wofford company has decided to put in force.

"We plan, through Mr. Ridley and other lubrication experts to be trained by him, to give to the motorists of Atlanta and Georgia a type of service which, as far as we know, has never been afforded by any oil company. Each week Mr. Ridley will be at one of the 83 Woco-Pep service stations. Here he will be at the service of all motorists who care to take advantage of his knowledge of motors and lubricants. He will inspect all cars that come into the station. There will be no charge whatever.

"It is expected that motorists who are dissatisfied with the performance of their cars will swarm into the station where Mr. Ridley's free service is offered. Those who are using too much gas or oil; those whose cars squeak or grind; those who are tired of listening to motor knocks; those whose motors are not giving the power they should ,will all, naturally, wish to obtain Mr. Ridley's advice.

"One feature of the plan which we believe will appeal to motorists is the fact that it is obvious that Mr. Ridley is disinterested as far as repairs are concerned. His advice will be absolutely unbiased. If a car needs only minor adjustments he will not be tempted to advise major repairs. On the other hand, if a motor does need working over he will be equally frank to inform the owner although he will have no interest in making the repairs recommended. In a word, Mr. Ridley and the other Woco trouble shooters that will soon be on the job can be counted on to serve the motorist absolutely disinterestedly.

"The chief advantage which the motorists will obtain from Mr. Ridley and the other Woco trouble shooters will not be in advice on needed repairs but will rather be advice which will eliminate in the future the necessity for making such repairs. Mr. Ridley will instruct motorists who come into the Woco-Pep station how, by the expenditure of a few cents for proper lubricants, haevy repaid bills may be avoided.

"It was to learn the innermost details of scientific lubrication that Mr. Ridley took the extensive course in lubrication engineering that he has just completed in Columbus.

"We, who know lubricants and their importance on motor operation, estimate that the advice which Mr. Ridley and his assistants will give to the large number served within the next few weeks will save them thousands of dollars in repair bills escaped.

"We are going to start Mr. Ridley to work on Monday at the Woco-Pep service station, corner of Spring and Luckie streets. In expectation of a heavy demand for Mr. Ridley's services we have given him a skilled corps of assistants so that every motorist who drives into the Woco-Pep station during the week will have quick and skillful service.

"In addition to the free services to be rendered by Mr. Ridley we are going to give everyone who drives into the Spring and Luckie streets station free Klenzo-Lube crankcase service. The crankcase will be drained and cleaned with the famous Woco Crankcase Cleaner. There will be no charge for the service or for the cleaner used. The only charge will be for the fresh oil used in refilling the crankcase. Thousands of motorists will doubtelessly take advantage of this money-saving offer.

"After Mr. Ridley leaves the Spring and Luckie street station he will appear at other stations in the Woco-Pep chain. His locations will be announced in advertisements in The Constitution and motorists are urged to follow these announcements."

CHANDLER SMASHES LOW GEAR RECORDS

A Chandler twentieth century sedan, traveling continuously in low gear for 7 hours and 5 minutes at an average speed of 24.28 miles per hour, smashed all time marks for the 172-mile run around Mt. Hood loop, near Portland, Ore.

Leaving Portland at 9:30 Monday evening, August 2, the record-smashing Chandler checked in at the Western Union station just 7 hours and 5 minutes later; at 4:35 a. m. Tuesday, to be exact. This phenomenal time beat the previous low-gear record by 1 hour and 47 minutes.

For more than seven hours Chandler's Pike's peak motor was making 2,810 revolutions a minute. This is equivalent to a high-gear sustained speed of exactly 59 miles per hour.

To make the test more severe, the clutch pedal was removed from the Chandler sedan and the clutch allowed to remain permanently in position, in order to prevent any coasting on the long down grades. The car was also put in low gear and the gear shift lever removed.

An extra can of gasoline was rigged on the trunk platform above the regular tank. The crankcase was filled with oil, gasoline tanks filled and the Chandler was taken to police headquarters for a thorough inspection before the start.

Police Captain Ervin and President William Merry, of the Portland Advertising club, made a thorough investigation of the car. Metallic seals were placed on the radiator, the oil intake, the empty clutch pedal slot, and the gear-shift lever connection.

Photographers clicked their cameras, a Western Union clerk held his hand on the dial of the time-recording clock, and promptly at 9:30 o'clock the time was punched and the record run commenced.

Vibration at a Minimum.

Out over the Burnside street bridge Chandler shot at a speed of 24 to 25 miles an hour. A thermostat connected with the crankcase had been rigged on the steering wheel to show the oil temperature at all times.

Gear noises were at a minimum. The vibration, which had been expected (since the trip was made in low gear throughout) was pleasingly absent.

Mile after mile Chandler maintained a 27-mile-an-hour clip. The motometer did not register any perceptible rise—the thermostat showed that the lubricating oil was at a safe temperature, and the oil gauge showed that the pressure was normal.

The notorious sharp turns on the county road leading to Mount Hood Loop highway were taken at a 27-mile-an-hour speed. The speedometer also showed the same figures along the straightaways.

Out through Sandy, up the Salmon river, Chandler kept its calm, even gate. Offensive engine odors which were to be expected on a run of this type in low gear, were entirely missing. Laurel Hill, bane of many motorists, offered no obstacle—the accurate speedometer still showing a 25-to-27-mile-an-hour speed.

Shortly after midnight the record-smashing Chandler roared through Government camp, dropped down through the mountain meadows, climbed the rise to Buzzard Point and swung over Barlow pass. The night was cool and the air refreshing. Its Pike's Peak motor continued its work without a murmur, and the slight whine of the gears was the only out-of-the-ordinary noise to be noted.

Chandler climbed the last rise, dropped down into the Hood River valley and at 2:15 a. m. passed through Hood River. At 4:35 the car was checked-in at the Western Union plant, and was taken to headquarters.

There it was officially inspected and all seals were found to be intact. Then the differential and transmission were taken down and the gears certified to be regular stock Chandler gear equipment.

Throughout the entire 172-mile trip it was not found necessary to add any additional oil or water.

"This newest Chandler performance achievement around the winding slopes of tortuous Mount Hood comes after a series of American and continental hill climbing, speed and durability triumphs, and re-proves Chandler's phenomenal performance ability," states C. S. Thompson, local distributor.

"Few cars could withstand the gruelling punishment of a wide open throttle continually for a period of more than seven hours.

"When it is considered that this remarkable low gear demonstration was made by a strictly stock model Chandler 20th century sedan—with standard stock parts in every respect—it is, indeed, a remarkable tribute to the inherent quality and stamina of the Chandler automobile," he concluded.

ROAD TEST PROVES STAMINA OF CAR

Because of the thrilling test rides taken often by engineers and builders in the early days of the automobile, the American motor car today is the most roadworthy in the world.

The day of the road race has passed, but the knowledge gained and the results obtained by this colorful method have added immeasurably to the present day refinement in automobiles which the American owner enjoys, but which he is no longer forced to demonstrate to his neighbors and friends.

In Europe, however, car owners still indulge in road races, and many impromptu contests are staged by enthusiastic automobilists to prove points of superiority possessed by various makes of American and European cars.

Recent Contest Described.

A recent contest of this kind is described by W. F. Nicoll, European representative of the Marmon Motor Car company, who is now at the factory in Indianapolis to complete arrangements for a shipment of cars to European markets.

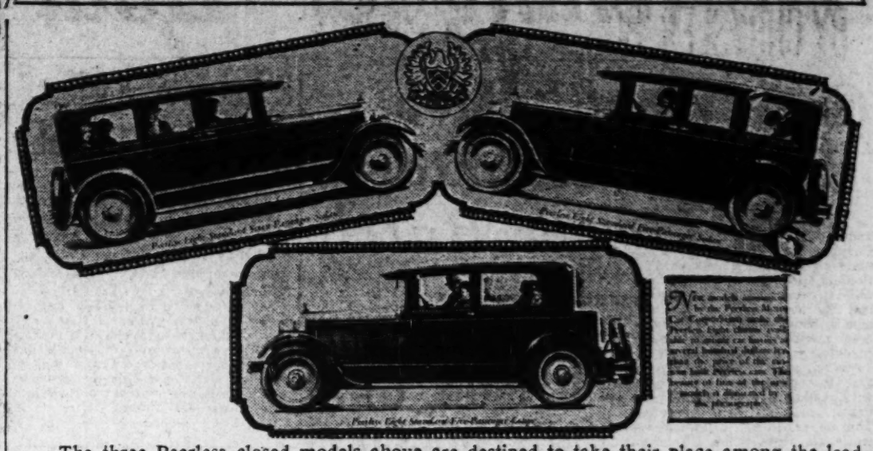

"One of the cars in the event was of a high-priced European make and the other was a Marmon," says Mr. Nicoll. "It was agreed to run from Geneva to Berne, a distance of about 99 miles. The road includes every possible hazard. Curves, villages, mountains and bad roads are intermingled in a way that requires the greatest skill to prevent accidents.

"The two cars started 15 minutes apart. It had been agreed to make the start at 5 o'clock in the morning in order to avoid as much traffic as possible. To make the race even more thrilling, rain set in just as the first car departed.

"Covering the distance at an average speed of 21 miles an hour, the Marmon won in handy fashion.

"Because of the natural difficulties encountered on the Geneva-Berne highway, principally steep grades and sharp curves, experienced motorists believe this exceptional record will stand for some time."

Three Beautiful Peerless Models Just Announced

The three Peerless closed models above are destined to take their place among the leaders of the fine car field. They incorporate all of the latest mechanical as well as comfort features that have been so noticeable on models announced recently and, according to information received from various sections of the country, their initial showing attracted the greatest crowds ever experienced by their dealers.

NUMBER OF PRIESTS DECLARED LIMITED

Mexico City, August 28.—(AP)—Reports from Guadalajara are that the state government of Jalisco has issued a decree limiting the number of Catholic priests to 167 in the entire state. Only 65 priests are allowed in the city of Guadalajara, one of the strongest Catholic cities of the country. Three other populous towns in the state are allowed 10 priests each.

LIGHT CARS TO SAVE MILLIONS IN FUEL

Now the statistician has turned to the Overland Whippet and with his sharp pencil has started to figure out the economic advantages of this type of car. With approximately 600 of these European type sedans and coupes being delivered to owners every day, and with the normal desire of the new owner to keep a record of what he is getting from his gas tank in the way of miles, figures are available from all parts of the country.

They run as high at 39 miles to the gallon over long distances. They average around the 30-mile mark and the statistician says it is a 50 per cent increase over the average mileage for other light cars.

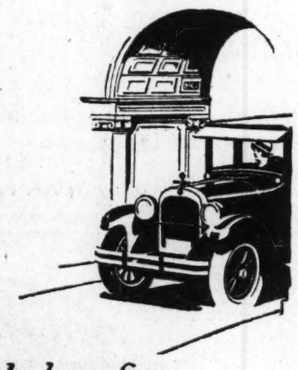

Based on 10,000,000 light cars running now, with an average of 9,000 to 10,000 miles a year as the total distances covered, this means a potential saving, when everyone is driving a Whippet, of $600,000,000 in gas bills alone.

Evenly distributed this would open up a market for 800,000 more Whippet cars out of gas saving alone. Spread over the individual Whippet cars, it would buy a new set of tires all around for the next year's driving. It would take the entire family on a camping vacation lasting a week. It would buy dad a new tweed suit for driving and let mother have the companion suit for herself. It would pay the car tax and help materially on full coverage insurance.

It might result in a national movement to drop the price of gasoline a cent or two a gallon because of the reduced drain on the oil reserves of the country.

It would clear the air of 27,000,000,000,000 cubic feet of carbon monoxide a year, which should cause the health authorities to welcome the Whippet as one of the great public benefactors and make every picnic ground and camping spot a treasure place of non-odorous ozone.

EXPERT PLEASED BY CHRYSLER '80'

Gratification over the design, abilities and appearance of the Chrysler Imperial "80" is voiced by Rockwell R. Stephens, motor car critic, writing in the Chicago Daily News, following a week of examination and road testing of that car.

"From the time Walter P. Chrysler put his name on what has become known throughout motordom as the Chrysler '70,'" he writes, "his nameplate on a radiator has meant vibrationless speed, power and all-round excellent design. The Chrysler Imperial '80,' brought out at the last automobile show, to many observers has been a climax of speed, power and roadability among motor cars.

"When race drivers speak of a car that has comet-like speed, combined with roadability that makes the speed usable, they call that car dynamite. The Imperial '80' is dynamite—in a white kid glove. The L-head engine, 3 1-4 by 5 inches, rated 29.4 horsepower, develops 92 horsepower and drives the car along any kind of road at any pace from two to sixty-five miles an hour so smoothly and silently that even hard-boiled and blase editors of technical automotive publications get a thrill from its performance."

Reaches Sixty Smoothly.

"From six to sixty miles an hour the speedometer climbs without a hitch or a sound from the engine—and it climbs fast. At 65 comes the first hint that the motor is beginning to turn over rapidly, but in the sedan the writer handled the speedometer circled around to 75—and we weren't obsessed by any fear that the motor wanted to jump out of the chassis.

"What good is such speed? Not much good above 50, which is as fast as most drivers want to travel and perhaps faster than they should. But performance like this means satisfaction and pleasure in the untold flexibility of the '80' engine at any touring speed. It means that the pressure of boot tip on the accellerator jumps the car easily.

"The chassis is no nicely balanced and suspended on springs equipped with rubber shock insulators in place of metal spring shackles that 50 and 60 miles an hour over none too good gravel and dirt roads in northern Indiana wrought no damage to a new straw hat that might easily have been crushed against the top as we tore across the bumps. Hydraulic brakes snub the car so smoothly that 50 miles an hour seems safe on a 40-mile road.

Makeup of the Engine.

"A 7-bearing crankshaft, 4-bearing camshaft, light alloy pistons whose expansion is controlled by Invar steel, careful matching of weights in reciprocating parts, and shock-proof motor mounting on rubber insulators, are some of the factors of motor smoothness. High pressure lubrication and an oil filter to keep the oil clean permit the sustained high speed of which the engine is capable.

"The car steers with the wrist and in spite of the lightness of the steering action there is no jerk to the wheel when one hurtles across loose gravel, deep pot holes and rough railroad tracks.

"Standard equipment includes everything a driver wants on his dashboard. There is a light that tells him that the storage battery has plenty of distilled water. There is a cigar lighter and a fuel gauge. Standard equipment also includes bumpers and spring covers, stoplight, backing light, rear view mirror, heater, wind deflector and a clock."

Veteran Studebakers Make Remarkable Records on Run

A group of thirteen veteran "Big Six" Studebakers made remarkable records in the recent annual "Old Timers" economy run from Los Angeles to Lake Arrowhead, Cal., a round trip of 171 miles.

These old-time Studebakers, scarred by the years and out of date and design, made an average of 16.98 miles per gallon of gasoline. Each started with crankcases filled with Pennzoil, and each returned without having consumed a drop, according to the contest officials.

Each Studebaker entered showed more than 100,000 miles of travel on its speedometer. None of them was overhauled or tested for the run. All were taken from their routine runs for the day's test and were driven as an average motorist would drive.

The oldest car in the run was the "Newspaper Flyer" of the Associated Transit company, of Los Angeles, possessor of a 310,000 mileage record and successor to the famous "Granddaddy" Studebaker, which piled up a total mileage of 475,000 before being pensioned to the Studebaker museum at South Bend.

Cars were not permitted to coast and had to remain in gear with motor running, except when stops were made for traffic. All cars were checked for gasoline, oil and water consumption, which formed a basis for deciding the winners.

First place was won by a Studebaker which had already traveled 137,000 miles. It averaged 20.73 miles per gallon of gasoline and showed no consumption of Pennzoil.

A relic of 118,000 miles' service took second, with 20.43 miles per gallon and finished with a full crankcase of Pennzoil.

Third place went to a 120,000-mile veteran which scored 19.27 miles per gallon and finished with a full crankcase of Pennzoil.

SAFETY FEATURES ON NEW OLDSMOBILES

Appreciation of the numerous safety features incorporated in the latest Oldsmobile—and particularly the anti-glare headlights—is being voiced by motorists throughout the country, according to reports being received from Oldsmobile dealers by officials of the Olds Motor works.

Every section of the country is represented in the favorable reports on the anti-glare efficiency of the new double filament headlights, factory officials report. This feature is uppermost in most automobilist's minds at this season of the year when the warm weather induces much night driving with its consequent perils from glaring head lamps. The reports indicate that the driving public is keenly appreciative of the improved mechanical safety devices on the better automobiles, holding them fully as important in accident prevention as are safe driving campaigns.

Headlamps with double filament bulbs are used in the new Oldsmobile to eliminate glare. With the light control switched on at the "bright" position, a strong beam of light is thrown from the lower filament straight ahead, illuminating the road far in advance. When switched to the "dim" position, the upper filament is used, and an equally strong beam of light is thrown on a downward angle on the road. This removes any possibility of glare in the eyes of approaching drivers yet gives perfect illumination of the road and side ditches. These lamps also conform to all state law requirements.

As a further safeguard against accident during night driving, the light control has been placed on the steering wheel at the finger tips of the driver. This allows full manipulation of controls without the driver having to remove either hand from the wheel. The switch at this point also gives a balanced appearance to the steering wheel as it is directly opposite the hand gasoline control. There is no spark control lever, as automatic spark control eliminates the necessity of such.

A third step taken by Oldsmobile engineers was to design indirect illumination for the instrument board panel. The light has been placed in back of the panel and so arranged as to give full but indirect illumination of the important operating instruments, including ammeter, oil gauge, fuel gauge and speedometer, but at the same time casting no glare that might possibly confuse the eyes of the driver.

The new anti-theft car lock is a distinct feature in locking design. The lock is protection both against thieves and possible carelessness on the part of drivers.

Both the switch locking device and the coil are built integral in a vault-like steel housing mounted on the back of the instrument panel. This eliminates the hazard of the car thief who has been "cutting-over" on locks in order to start the ignition. With this new lock the usual methods of thieves are defeated as the key is the only method of unlocking the ignition. After the key has released the ignition lock it must be removed before the ignition can be turned on. This eliminates the bad practice of owners leaving keys in locks while cars are parked. Turning off the ignition also locks the switch.

New York, August 28.—(AP)—Weekend realizing in the cotton market was promoted by slightly improved weather reports today. After selling early at 17.87, December reacted to 17.66 and closed at 17.72. The general market closed steady at net declines of 2 to 10 points.

The opening was steady at a decline of 1 point to an advance of 2 points. Active months quickly sold about 5 to 9 points net higher on private reports of further showers in the southwest and in sympathy with relatively steady Liverpool cables. October worked up to 17.85 and January to 17.88 on this initial buying, but demand seemed to be readily supplied and prices turned easier during the forenoon.

Eastern Outlook.

The outlook for clearing conditions in the eastern belt no doubt increased the disposition to take profits on recent purchases, but selling otherwise was restricted by the forecast for unsettled weather with local showers in Texas and of the continued bullish average of private crop advices. The improvement in the weather outlook, checked fresh buying and the market gradually yielded to the liquidation of long accounts.

October eased off to 17.66 and January to 17.70 in late trading, net declines of about 10 to 14 points, but the close was a few points up from the lowest on renewed covering.

Reports of improved spot demand for domestic and European account, particularly for southern mills, brought little, if any, trade buying in the market here. Most of the business was attributed by local brokers to the evening-up of accounts to await further weather developments or the showing of the end-August crop reports.

Private cables said hedge selling had been offset by trade calling and covering in the Liverpool market, but reported buyers of cotton cloths and yarns were disinclined to operate and appeared to anticipate lower prices.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at about 50,000 bales, compared with 58,000 last year.

TRADING IS LIGHT IN NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, La., August 28.—(AP) The cotton market was a typical Saturday affair today with trading largely confined to evening-up for over the week-end. The volume of business was comparatively light and price fluctuations were narrower than they have been in any session of the present week. Prices gained seven points in the early trading, owing to much better Liverpool cables than due, but as the weather in the belt was somewhat more favorable than it has been, prices soon turned reactionary owing to liquidation for over the week-end and at the lowest were eight points below the previous close. There was a moderate rally of about five points in the late trading on a little covering and the close was steady at net losses for the day of 3 to 4 points.

At the start cables were better than due and first trades showed gains of 6 to 7 points with October at 17.85 and December at 17.80 or 7 points above the previous close. These prices proved to be the highs of the day.

The market soon turned reactionary on liquidation and before the downward trend was checked, October trade at 17.70 and December at 17.65 or 15 points below the earlier highs and eight points under the previous close.

The market had a slight rally in the late trading, recovering about five points from the lows on covering. The market closed steady and a little above the lows.

Exports for the day totaled 8,694 bales.

OPPORTUNITY SCHOOL IS READY FOR TERM

Registration of students for the fall term of the Atlanta Opportunity school, 10 1-2 West Mitchell street, will begin Tuesday morning at the institution office, it was announced Saturday.

Quarters of the school have been renovated during the summer and much new equipment has been provided. Students expecting to enroll are urged to do so immediately so they may be assigned to the various classes. Students will be accepted in the order they register and those reporting late will be placed on the "waiting list" if accommodations are not available.

DEMAND STEADY ON CURB MARKET

New York, August 28.—(AP)—Trading conditions and volume on the New York curb exchange in today's short session followed a course similar to that which prevailed during the greater part of the week. Quiet strength was shown in the more prominent issues and a more settled tone was evidenced in the absence of the wide fluctuations that occurred in some issues in the last few days.

General Motors new was in fair demand at the start, crossing 143, and Foundation Company foreign made a further point. Fox Theaters displayed strength at the higher levels reached on the recent movement. Warner Brother Pictures opened fractionally lower at 49 and then declined to 47 1-2.

Several issues were well supported at the year's high quotations. Among these were Todd Shipyard and National Baking and new peak figures for the year were established in Glen Alden and Lehigh Valley Coal Sales.

American Gas and Associated Gas were in the early demand at moderate advances. Oil shares were quiet with most strength shown in Carib Syndicate and Cities Service, the latter moving to a new high.

Trading during the past week was more active than had been noted in a long period, violent advances occurring in a number of stocks and a long list made new high records on vigorous upward movements. These displays of activity and strength however, did not extend to the oil group which for some reason continued to move within narrow limits.

FORMER ATLANTAN IS NAMED EDITOR OF JACKSON PAPER

Jackson, Miss., August 28.—(Special.)—Craddock Goins, former Atlanta newspaperman, has been named editor of The Mississippi Builder, it was announced Saturday when it was made known that this publication, for years an influential magazine in Mississippi and the gulf states, has been purchased from Munro Nichols. W. B. McCormick, of Jackson, purchased the controlling interest.

Mr. Goins, formerly state news editor of The Atlanta Constitution, comes to Mississippi from Milwaukee. In that city he edited some of the leading dairying publications of the nation.

14-Year-Old Youth Held in Rome Jail For Firing Buildings

Constitution Bureau.

Rome, Ga., August 27.—(Special.) "I had trouble setting fire to the pile of boxes at the rear of J. Kuttner & Co. and was forced to go back and start the blaze all over again at the Atlantic Ice & Coal corporation barn," Howard Burkett, 14, according to officers, said at police headquarters this morning as he confessed to setting fire to these two places as well as the old Burns-White warehouse and the Warlick building on Broad street.

The boy, who has just returned from the state reformatory for boys, is a brother of Floyd Burkett, who also is in the city jail. Floyd is held for turning in "false alarms." One brother was furnishing the fire department with "runs to false alarms," while the other was giving firemen something to do "at his alarm."

Howard Burkett was caught last night after he was seen in the act of setting fire to the boxes of trash at the rear of Daniel Furniture company, Parks Crocker company and Wyatt Book store, on West First street. The negro night watchman at the Rome Gas company reported the burning of boxes to the fire department and also said that he had seen the boy who set them on fire.

Shortly after 8 o'clock Burkett was picked up and taken to headquarters. The negro at the gas company positively identified him.

Judge Henderson Lanham, in police court, ordered the boy held in default of $5,000 bond to the superior court and he was remanded to the city jail. Burkett admitted in police court that he wasn't through when he was caught as there were other places he intended burning, among them being the Fair, Rome News-Tribune and Harvey Chair company.

A monkey which Belle Bennett hadn't seen in two years expressed joy on seeing her again while she was leaving "The Lily" set at the Fox studios.

Moody's Review.

Moody's Weekly Review of Financial Conditions in its current issue says in part:

"Stock market seems to reflect liberal realizing sales during sharp rallies, on the one hand, but, on the other hand, no disposition to force any liquidation. Possibly this sort of a market may continue for some weeks or months.

"Agriculture is in such a position as to foreshadow a rather moderate country demand for goods, implements and fertilizers, on the one hand, and rather moderate prices for raw materials obtained from the farms, on the other. The effect of this situation upon the national prosperity may prove to be negligible.

"The petroleum industry displays such a strong statistical position as to lead many to believe that both oil shares and gasoline prices ought to move sharply upward. Meanwhile gasoline is declining and the shares are doing nothing. It looks as though the petroleum share market might remain a purely selective affair for some time."

Baloney!

Colleen Moore was attired as a little denizen of the London Limehouse district, a shawl about her shoulders and her own dark brown bobbed hair covered by a wig of long golden curls. She approached the absent-minded gateman at First National studio.

"Good morning, Miss Moore," said the gateman.

Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton are acquiring their sea legs aboard a battleship for roles in "We're in the Navy Now."

Price of Grain! —up or down —from here?

The present situation has confused a great many of the trade and as a result sentiment is mixed but an analysis of conditions, if based on fundamentals, does indicate what's ahead.

Weekly Bulletins issued by us enjoy an international reputation because of remarkable way in which they correctly forecast trend of grain prices. Our analyses of price making factors predict coming moves.

Total sales (par value) $4,558,000.

New York, August 18.—(AP)—Bond prices continued to point upward in today's quiet session, which was featured by renewed demand for the French issues. French government 8s touched 103 7-8 and were followed into new high ground for the year by the 6 per cent issues of Bordeaux. Lyons and Marseilles and French Steamship 7s. Bank of Chile 6 3-4s, Dominican Republic 5s and Norwegian 5 1-2s, also eclipsed the previous top prices for the year.

The ready absorption of most of the $80,000,000 new offerings this week gave promise of a good fall investment demand which helped to counteract the ordinarily adverse influence of higher money rates. Institutional buying is being maintained in fairly large volume, despite the expanding commercial and agricultural demand for funds.

Railroad liens registered further improvement as class one carriers continued to report exceptional July earnings. Atchison convertible 4s moved up in sympathy with the advance in that road's stock, touching a new high at 89 7-8, and Delaware & Hudson convertible 5s attained a new top at 116 7-8. A brisk demand also was noted for Seaboard Air Line adjustment 5s.

The rise in public utilities was led by Montana Power 5s, which advanced nearly 1 1-2 points. Industrials showed mixed changes. U. S. government issues held steady.

I. C. C. MAKES RULING ON FREIGHT TRAFFIC

Washington, August 28.—(AP)—The interstate commerce commission today suspended until December 28 new freight tariffs providing for increases in the rates on sugar from Louisiana to Texas and for increases and reductions in those rates from Texas to Louisiana. An inquiry will be held in the meantime.

The commission also suspended until December 28 the operation of new schedules proposing to eliminate routes via Montgomery, Ala., in connection with joint through rates on cotton and related articles originating at certain stations on the Louisville and Nashville in Alabama and destined to North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia. The effect of the new rates would be to leave no joint through rates in effect on this traffic by way of Montgomery.

Light yearlings, $4.50@5.00.

Hogs: For the week, receipts, 2,034, including 1,494 billed through or direct. Tennessee hogs, 130-225-pound, $13.95@$14.05. Georgia hogs, similar weights, best, $12.50@13.00.

H. F. WILSON,
Local Representative.

Dry Goods.

New York, August 28.—Cotton goods sales for the week in the gray goods division ran ahead of the average output, most of the trading being in print cloths and sheetings. Very good business has been booked on fine printed wash goods for spring with a few of the large printers. Yarns were firmer. Burlaps held about steady with trading moderate.

Raw silk advanced 10 to 15c a pound. Silk goods markets were quieter than usual, due in part to the number of mills that close for the holiday week and lack of normal activity in fall cutting circles. Men's wear continued in fair demand for fancy worsteds and some of the new spring woolens, while the garment strike continued to restrict the movement of goods in cutting channels where clonkings and suitings are handled.

Washington Sees Situation Loaded In Latin-America

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.

Washington, August 29.—With a constantly irritating situation abroad, caused by the debt settlements, the United States at the present time has more than enough to worry about at her own back-door in Latin-America, perhaps more than at any time in recent years.

There is nothing dangerous imminent anywhere, as far as can be seen now, but there are several sources of friction which keep state department officials nervous and continually alert. Secretary of State Kellogg has been compelled to stay close to his desk this summer to deal with problems in Mexico and in Tacna-Arica, that province over which Peru and Chile have been squabbling for years, and now another recurrent center of disturbance wakes up to another revolution, Nicaragua, a tiny republic but somewhat of a volcanic one.

Just now, this little country has furnished a link between the foreign situation in this hemisphere and abroad through her protest to the League of Nations against alleged aid by the Mexican government to the current revolution.

Bluejackets Land.

Today, a force of 200 American marines and bluejackets landed at Bluefields on her eastern coast to protect American lives and property in the revolution, a scene that has been enacted so many times in Nicaragua and other Central American republics in recent years. The gunboat Tulsa soon will pour out another complement of American troops on the western coast, at Corinto.

Such incidents are ordinary. The attempt of Nicaragua to bring the League of Nations into Latin-American affairs, however, is most unusual. In fact, it is the first time that the issue has been raised directly as a challenge to the Monroe doctrine.

The United States will take no official notice of the protest, to the league, unless of course it should bring some sort of interference from Europe. This is not expected. Officials would not comment today, but it was generally held that article 21 of the League of Nations covenant, which recognizes the Monroe doctrine's prohibition of European interference, would prevent league action.

The protest went from the Chamorro government, which took over authority by force about a year ago and has not been recognized by the United States. It is regarded as an attempt to embarrass the United States, undertaken by General Chamorro after he had been unable to get the state department to pay attention to his claim that Mexico was taking a part in the present revolution against his government.

Monroe Doctrine Involved.

The protest has aroused much speculation, especially in Latin-American diplomatic quarters here, as to whether intervention by the league would infringe upon the Monroe doctrine. While it is agreed that the league probably will take no action, some observers felt that certain European powers may take advantage of the opportunity to express disapproval of the application of the Monroe doctrine to Central American affairs.

One authority on international law here contended that the league is in a position to give a mandate to its American members to extend protection to Nicaragua from an attack upon it either by a member or non-member, dissenting from the general view that the league covenant would prevent any interference as contrary to the Monroe doctrine.

The failure of the United States to heed the protest of Nicaragua against alleged Mexican interference in the revolution, which was presented here also, is believed due to the fact that this government has refused to recognize Chamorro, and not because it countenances any activities similar to those with which Mexico is charged.

Secretary Kellogg, who left today for St. Paul for a brief visit, also is kept busy with the Mexican and Tacna-Arica situations. Mexico still withholds an answer to the last American note protesting against the oil and land laws which this government contends are confiscatory. Just before he left today Kellogg conferred further with Chilean and Peruvian ambassadors on the Tacna-Arica problem, and will attempt to revive negotiations when he returns.

CAR OF POTATOES SHIPPED FROM QUITMAN

Quitman, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—The first carload of sweet potatoes was shipped from Quitman, of this season's crop, Wednesday to Miami. They brought $1.75 a bushel and were shipped by the Brooks county exchange.

The manager of the exchange, I. L. Sellars, has recently made an extended trip and he said the potato crop in this immediate section was the best he had seen. The farmers here regard sweet potatoes as one of the dependable minor crops and make large yields per acre.

Lambright School Students Win Laurels as Dancers

Miss Frederica Patterson, who Saturday began a dancing engagement at the Rivoli theater in New York, is shown in the above picture holding Miss Eleanor Moffett in a characteristic pose in one of the exhibition dances of the Kelley Lambright School of Dancing. Both are students of the Lambright school and have had flattering offers in big New York productions.

Coincident with announcement that Miss Frederica Patterson, fourth student of the Kelley Lambright School of Dancing to star in Broadway productions within the past year, opened an engagement Saturday in New York, came news that Miss Eleanor Moffett, who also has danced in important roles in New York, will return to Atlanta as assistant instructor in the Lambright school. Miss Moffett will reach Atlanta for the opening of classes September 1.

Miss Patterson Saturday began an engagement with the Oscard Publix productions at the Rivoli theater in New York, having decided to accept this in preference to offers from Gertrude Hoffman and Arbertina Rosch. She was in New York only two weeks before having these flattering offers. Mrs. Lambright Saturday praised the work of Miss Patterson and predicted a great future for her. For two years Miss Patterson was assistant teacher in the Lambright school, and was a post graduate student at the same institution.

She trained four Denishawn dancers for her dance act and these will appear with her at the Rivoli.

Miss Moffett, who will be an assistant teacher at the Lambright school this year, is a graduate of that institution and has been studying at the Murray Anderson school in New York. She has appeared in Ned Wayburn's, Cole's studio and Kabeleff productions.

Miss Moffett has declined offers for parts in the "Great Temptation," Earl Carroll's "Vanities" and Wayman's productions to return to Atlanta for a post graduate course at the Lambright school.

Mary Grace and Katherine Hogan, known as the Hogan twins, who left Atlanta last spring to dance for the Wayburn acts at the Rivoli now are filling a series of engagements in a special act and are booked to appear in Atlanta at an early date.

Miss Lucy Mower Pearson, also a student of the school, who appeared recently in the Greenwich Village Follies and also a student of Payley Oukrainski, noted dancer, will return to Atlanta and assist in the opening of the Lambright school Wednesday. She has been filling an engagement in Chicago, and will remain in Atlanta for several weeks.

Drug Store Burglar Says He Was Seeking Means To Kill Self

Joe Wilson, 26, who gave a Wade street address, is being held at police station, charged with disorderly conduct, under a $200 bond, following his arrest late Saturday night by Detectives W. E. Blair and J. J. Chester as he came out of a Hurt street pharmacy.

According to the detective, Wilson broke a plate glass window to get into the pharmacy and after being in crashed another plate glass window to get out. As he attempted to escape he walked almost directly into the arms of the officers.

When questioned as to his presence in the pharmacy, Wilson is said to have told the officers that he was looking for some carbolic acid in order to kill himself.

The University School for Boys

FORMERLY PEACOCK SCHOOL

Thirty-first Annual Session Begins Sept. 9

The only select, private, nonmilitary school in Atlanta fully accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges. Individual and thorough attention; classes limited to twelve; all men teachers of college distinction; competitive athletics subordinate to academic work; Bible; work in both the Grammar and High School.

We cheerfully recommend the following patrons of our school, who are the foremost educators of our City and State, for references:

Mr. W. H. Glenn, Board of Trustees, Georgia Tech.
Governor Walker, Ex-Officio Member, Board of Trustees, State University System and Mercer.
Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, President of Oglethorpe.
Mrs. Katherine Connerat, Woman's Board, Oglethorpe.
Mrs. Arthur Tufts, Emory University.
Prof. R. P. Black, Civil Engineer, Georgia Tech.
Hon. Oscar Mills, Atlanta Board of Education.

The University School has a superior system of preparing and recommending students to college. Prof. H. H. Caldwell, Registrar of Georgia Tech, writes us the following UNSOLICITED letter: "Allow me to congratulate you on the stand you have taken in regard to recommending students to college. I wish that every High School and Preparatory School in the State would take the same position. Too many of our accredited schools have been issuing certificates of recommendations to students who have no business entering college."

Dr. M. L. Brittain, President of Tech, writes: "Two of our students, with HIGH SCHOLASTIC standing, Spencer W. Boyd and R. L. Neeley, came to us from the University School, and we believe that their new plan of recommending students to college will make the work of Prof. White and his co-laborers still more effective as a Preparatory School."

Spencer Boyd made the HIGHEST SCHOLASTIC AVERAGE AT TECH this year.

R. L. Neeley won the SCHOLASTIC TRIP OF THE LANGUAGE DEPARTMENT to SPAIN, CUBA and MEXICO.

THE CONSTITUTION'S REAL ESTATE REVIEW

:: :: :: :: CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH :: :: :: ::

PONDER REALTHY CO. WILL MOVE OFFICES

In announcing its plans to move their present offices from the Grant building to their field location at the intersection of Cascade road, Boulevard Granad and Sewell drive, in Cascade Heights subdivision, the Ponder Realty company believes that it is making a change that will be highly advantageous to itself and its customers. This is especially so, it was stated, inasmuch as city headquarters will be established and maintained with the well equipped Weyman and Connors company, at 58 Marietta street.

Cascade Heights is reputed to be making great strides under the managership of the Ponder Realty company, which is acting as development and selling agent for the Wey-Con company. The subdivision is located on Cascade road and Avon avenue, extending west a distance of about 300 acres, and containing virgin forest timbers of oak, pine, poplar, maple, dogwood and other varieties of trees as well as various types of shrubbery. Cascade Heights lies on a high prominence overlooking the city office buildings and surrounding territory.

The developers some time ago bought a White chassis on which they are building a handsome, easy-riding coach, which will be used for the convenience of home and lot owners and prospective purchasers. It was stated that the coach is expected to be completed and put into operation about September 12.

REALTORS CONDEMN WAGE SCALE RULING

A resolution condemning the ordinance recently passed by the city council, fixing the scale of wages of skilled labor in the employ of the city, was adopted at the regular monthly meeting of the officers and directors of the Atlanta Real Estate board, held Thursday night, August 25, at the Robert Fulton hotel. Several new members were elected to the board and the fall program was outlined and approved.

The following resolution was passed and the office of the board was instructed to send copies to the heads of the city government and the members of the city council:

"Whereas, it has been brought to the attention of the board of directors of the Atlanta Real Estate board that an ordinance was passed by the general council of the city of Atlanta on the 16th day ow August fixing the scale of wages to be paid to skilled laborers in the employ of the city or in the employ of parties making contracts with the city, where such contracts provide for work on the erection of public buildings, bridges, or other public work or the repair thereof, and also providing that eight hours shall constitute a day's work for said laborers, and

"Whereas, it appears that said ordinance was passed without even being referred to a committee and said ordinance was therefore acted upon without any expression by or reference to the people of the city of Atlanta,

"Whereas, this arbitrary increase in wages is an illegal expenditure of the tax payers' money without due process of law,

"Whereas, the city would be closing competition to outside business and would prevent outside investors coming into Atlanta on account of the wage condition in Atlanta, and

"Whereas, it is our firm belief that this will decrease the value of real estate and retard its development by fixing the cost of building at the minimum, and

"Whereas, this board believes that said ordinance is unconstitutional on the ground that it is an illegal expenditure of the taxpayers' money,

"Therefore, be it resolved, that this board does condemn said ordinance unqualifiedly and calls on the general council of the city of Atlanta to reconsider its action in the premises to the end that a public hearing may be had on the subject matter of said ordinance."

Dana Belser, recently elected president, presided, and stated that the activities extended to the members between this time and the first of the year will be constructive, and will offer each individual member an opportunity to aid himself in regard to the real estate business.

GEORGIA FARM LANDS ACTIVE, SALES SHOW

Activity in the sale of Georgia farm lands was evidenced by an announcement Saturday from the Massell Realty company to the effect that within the past 90 days they have sold and traded a series of farms.

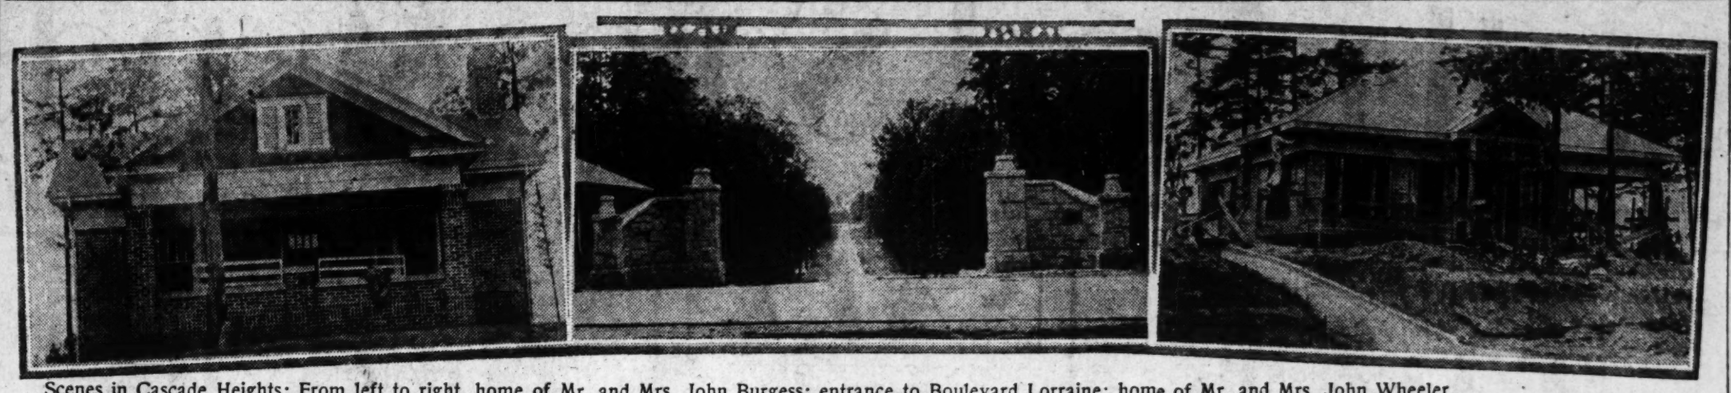

The second sale announced by the company within the last 30 days consists of a 261-acre farm in Monroe county, near Forsyth, Ga., which was sold to Mrs Carolyn E. Howard for a consideration of $12,500. "It is true that the 'bank scares' have made the rural population awake to the safety of real estate investments at all times," said S. A. Massell, secretary, "and in that manner trading has been increased somewhat, but the bulk of it is founded on substantial prosperity."

SMYTH BROTHERS TO AUCTION PLOT ON GLEN IRIS DRIVE

Activity in property transactions and developments in the vicinity of the newly erected Sears, Roebuck & Co. plant is evidenced by the announcement from Smyth Brothers Real Estate Auction company of an auction September 1 of 375 feet of land fronting on Glen Iris drive which will be sub-divided.

Glen Iris drive was lately paved from Ponce de Leon avenue to Edgewood avenue and is now a popular traffic thoroughfare emerging alongside the Sears-Roebuck plant. In addition to this attraction there are the Ford works and baseball park and a commercial center that has grown up to cater to the workers of these plants and the surrounding neighborhood. Those who have had property to sell or rent in this region have felt the benefits wrought by this new activity and are expecting still greater enhancements in property values.

Building Loans Promote Thrift, Declares Russell

(Horace Russell, prominent lawyer, secretary of the first Mutual Savings association and secretary of the Georgia Building and Loan league, has written the following article especially for The Constitution. He deals with one phase of real estate financing, which element has perhaps played the most important part in the development of Atlanta property.—Ed. Note.)

By HORACE RUSSELL.

Building and loan associations interest all good citizens because they promote thrift and they interest persons interested in real estate especially, because they encourage the purchase of homes. The real estate operators of Atlanta are overlooking the movement which fundamentally can contribute most to a sound and continuous development of their business.

Few of us stop to consider that we are borrowing probably more than three hundred million dollars on first mortgage security in this community and that probably 90 per cent of the money is borrowed from outside the state of Georgia and most of it from a small group of eastern financial institutions. The real estate profession in Georgia realizes that if this small group of eastern financiers need their money for a short time and discontinue loans in Georgia, every real estate operator in Georgia and many real estate owners in Georgia immediately suffer. It is not sound for us to sit by and see a condition exist which lays us liable to a financial depression for which we are not at all responsible and which is brought on by some condition of the New York money market.

Billions for Home.

Of all things which should stand independently and free of outside financial control, nothing is more important than that of real estate. We are not now independent. We are not now even in a reasonable measure dependent upon the money of our own people. We are almost wholly dependent upon foreign money lenders.

Building and loan associations can, in a large measure, solve this problem in Georgia. According to the latest report, building and loan associations have actual paid in capital of more than five and a half billion dollars. This figure means nothing to the average mind, but it does mean something to say that during 1925 these associations loaned nearly two billions of dollars on homes, financing more than five hundred thousand homes, and it also means something to know that of these five hundred thousand homes financed, at least 80 per cent of them were new homes financed by this money. In states like Ohio, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, where each state has nearly a billion dollars of paid in capital in building and loan associations, all of which is loaned on homes in the state where the money is owned, they have a very sound condition. In other words, in Atlanta, if the mortgage on my home matures and a certain insurance company is not at that time lending money in Georgia and a few other insurance companies are not lending money in Georgia, I will stir up some excitement right away and I will wish I had never owned a home or tried to. When the Ohio citizen goes out to borrow money on his home he is not dependent upon outside capital but nearly a billion dollars of his fellow citizens' money is deposited in building and loan associations of that state and restricted by law to the sole purpose of supplying his needs. There is no use for him to be excited, because there are several building and loan associations, any one of which can finance his home.

Loss Ratio Low.

From the standpoint of thrift, it is interesting to know that nearly 10,000,000 people are finding building and loan associations the best means for them to practice thrift, and it is further right impressive to see that the loss ratio in building and loan associations is very substantially less than that in any other known class of financial institutions and less than any other known form of investment, except government securities. If one million people in Georgia were practicing thrift through building and loan associations regularly, the very fact that they were saving their money to finance homes would stimulate an interest in home ownership.

There is another reason why building and loan associations are fundamentally sound—it is their method of home loan. The old method in Georgia has been a straight loan, repayable at the end of a definite period in one lump sum. The result of this system of home financing is that the small home owner never has this large lump sum and the loan is renewed from time to time. Another evil in this old system is that the straight loan, and especially when made by outside capital, is not sufficient for the average individual completely to finance his home and the result is second and third mortgages, which are fundamentally wrong.

Loan Company Methods.

The building and loan method of lending money is an amortized mortgage on the small home. If A has $2,000 saved up he can borrow from the building and loan association $4,000 on a $6,000 home and pay the money back at about $50 a month, which will include interest and a payment on the principal each month until the loan is completely amortized and paid off. This is in one single financing and avoids all of the expense of refinancing and all of the worry to him and his wife that so often deters home ownership, and at the same time gives him a payment less than rent would be on the property and a payment which he and his wife know they can meet, and finally it furnishes him a plan that results in absolute home ownership without a mortgage.

The United States has thought so much of the value of building and loan associations in this country that they have been entirely exempted from payment of income tax. They are practically the only business institution so exempted and in the long run they can operate on the 13 1-2 per cent that they would otherwise have to pay in income tax. (See section 231, revenue act, 1926.) The government has further encouraged individuals to invest their money in building and loan associations by providing for the entire exemption from income tax of as much as $300 in earnings therefrom in the hands of the individual (see section 213, revenue act of 1926), and the government also exempts from capital stock and all other special tax. The state of Georgia encourages the movement by exempting building and loan associations as follows:

Building Loans Exempted.

"That mutual building and loan associations operating only in the county of their charter and limiting their loans to members, shall not be assessed on their capital loan to stockholders or members thereof." (See Georgia laws, extraordinary session, 1923, page 65.)

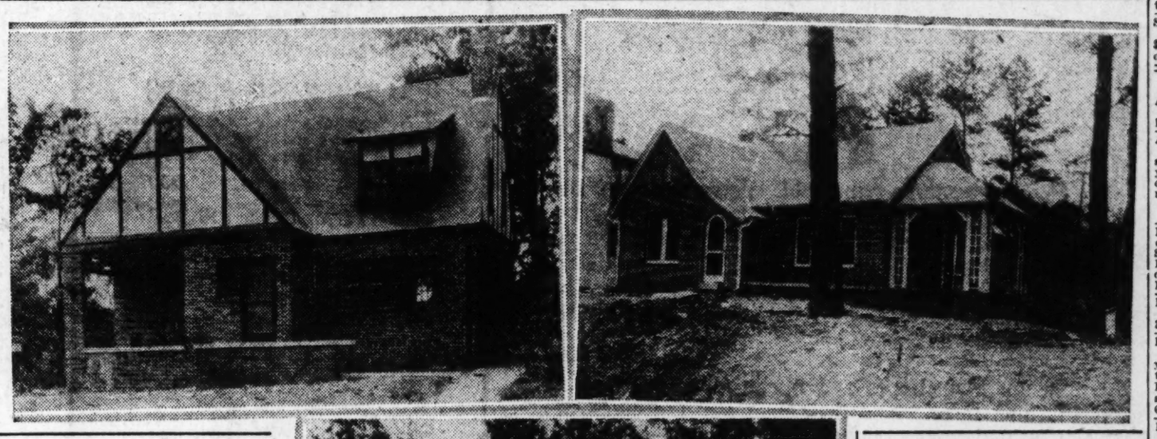

I became interested in this movement several years ago and have made a very thorough study of the question, and I firmly believe that the development of building and loan in Georgia is more important to the state than any other one thing that can be undertaken. The Georgia securities law, approved August 17, 1920, as amended August 21, 1922, places upon the Georgia securities commission the responsibility of regulation and supervision of building and loan associations. Pursuant to this law, the securities commission have set up a set of rules providing for the utmost security for investments in building and loan associations and providing for a careful state regulation and inspection. Associations must maintain their capital at par. No part of the money paid in on the par value of building and loan shares shall ever be used in any way except for loans on first mortgages on improved real estate or on its own stock or in investments in government bonds. They must be mutual and must be local. Many other restrictions are placed around them to the extent that every dollar in the association is represented by cash in the bank or a first mortgage on a local home.

Thrift Immense Important.

There is a very general sentiment over the state for the development of this movement. Five years from now building and loan will be well-known in Georgia. You may ask what can be done. The answer is that you can save your money and make some investment in building and loan and start your associates and employees to saving a few dollars a month. Select a sound association and begin at once. Three associations are actively at work in the city of Atlanta at this time—First Mutual Savings association, which has been in operation for more than two years, and Columbia Building and Loan association and Home Building and Loan association now in process of organization.

The points I wish to make are: first, that thrift is of immense importance to our people and can be stimulated by building and loan; second, that home ownership is vital to good citizenship and can be stimulated in the same way; third, that we have an unsound economic condition in borrowing so much money from the outside, and building and loan will at least form a balance wheel in this financial struggle, (and I would like space to point out that building and loan operates in an entirely independent field and would not affect adversely but would help every bank and other financial institution in the state.)

Atlanta Draws New-Comers From All Parts of Country

In announcing recent sales activities amounting to more than 85,000, Richard C. Shoup, of the real estate firm bearing his name, substantiates the fact that in addition to its large natural increase in population Atlanta is drawing ousiders from all sections of the country.

"Organizers of large commercial projects have selected Atlanta to settle permanently because it furnishes a fertile field in which to work, surpassed by no other section of the union," Mr. Shoup stated. Mr. Shoup bases his opinion on what he learns from clients of this class, some of whom are included in the following list of recent sales.

For a client, Ponce de Leon avenue facing Linwood, duplex to Nathan Siegel, for investment.

For Mrs. Josephine Cloudman, 91 East Merritts avenue, to Mrs. Louise Himmel.

For Massell Development company, lots on Lakeshore drive, Druid Hills, to Fred L. Phillips and B. F. Clark. Both Mr. Phillips and Mr. Clark will improve these sites with residences at a later date.

For P. M. Essig, lot on Eighth street, to Mrs. Mary C. Elliott, for investment.

For Judge Alex W. Stephens, lot on the corner of St .Charles and Fredericа to a client for a modern apartment.

For Spain Investment company, a house to be built on East Lake road, Druid Hills, for Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Kilpatrick. Mr. Kilpatrick is superintendent of the Woolworth company, and has moved to Atlanta from Jacksonville.

For Mrs. E. J. Spesshardt, 34 Cameron court, Druid Hills, to Mr. and Mrs. Walter F. Felton. Mr. Felton is moving here from Toledo, Ohio, and has incorporated the Columbia Building and Loan association. After 35 years' experience in building and loan work, Mr. Felton believes that Atlanta offers the best field in the United States for a new building and loan association.

For L. B. Holt, 21 First avenue, East Lake, to W. H. Adams.

For Druid Hills, lot 43, block 20, Druid Hills, to Spain Investment company.

F. B. REESE JOINS STAFF OF GRANT REALTY COMPANY

B. M. Grant company has announced the addition to its sales staff of F. B. Reese.

Mr. Reese is well known in Atlanta real estate circles, where he has been responsible for much activity throughout his long experience in the real estate profession. Although Mr. Reese is acquainted with all phases of the realty business, with the B. M. Grant company he will be in the sales department.

CONFUSED DUAL CEREMONIES.

White Plains, N. Y.—Dagmar Godowsky and Frank Mayo, of the movies are no longer married. An annulment was granted on her testimony that when they had a ceremony at Tia Juana he was already the husband of Joyce Hill, who got a divorce 24 hours later.

EARLE R. GREENE NEW SALES HEAD OF ADAMS-CATES

With the expansion and specialization of a residential sales department the A. S. Adams-Cates company has secured the services of Earle R. Greene to take charge of that end of its work.

Mr. Greene, who recently returned to Atlanta from Jacksonville, where for 18 months he worked with one of Atlanta's largest developers of Florida property, has had 15 years of experience in handling all classes of real estate and has specialized for a number of years in Atlanta north side residences. He will give his entire time and attention to homes, building lots, apartments and estates, and will have a force of several experienced salesmen, who will carry on the duties of the department with him.

Mr. Greene stated that although he "has traveled throughout this country and been in practically every state in the union, visiting some of the greatest residenial sections," he finds it "truthfully necessary to agree with those who believe that Atlanta's home section is superior and more beautiful as a whole than that of any other city."

New York—Chance for some young man to make a great hit with a girl. What is represented as the largest perfect blue diamond that has ever come out of the earth is on sale in a Fifth avenue store for a trifle of $300,000—127.01 carats, 1 5-32 by 1 9-32 inches.

Dorothy Mackaill is at First National's New York studios, where she is playing one of the featured roles in "The Charleston Kid."

Home Construction That Builds Permanence

Old-fashioned construction ideas and methods, rather than some of the new types of building, where substantial construction is often sacrificed in order to secure artificial flourishes, is the principle carried forward by J. Lawrence Turner in his building activities along the beautiful mile stretch from Druid Hills to Morningside, known as University drive.

While Mr. Turner in his construction work has taken advantage of every modern improvement that has been developed in the building science both in America and abroad, he has not lost sight of the contributions made by old-fashioned building ideals to the endurance of homes. "After I completed a tour in Europe and saw home after home that had weathered the winds of centuries with hardly a sign of depreciation," Mr. Turner said, "I realized that there was an art to that type of construction that had largely vanished from modern day building."

"It struck me," the builder stated, "that the main feature to be regained was the materials used in these buildings. For this reason, in all my home building, I have been careful to use old-fashioned long leaf pine, brick masonry and similar ideas that have been handed down from generation to generation. To this I add modern devices that have been proven, with a result in which I and my clients have found entire satisfaction."

BUSINESS LOTS

THESE are located in the live community centers. We list below some of the best available sites of this kind.

BUCKHEAD—One of the most promising of the outlying business communities; lot 50x130, at East Pace's Ferry Road. This is on the best side of the street. A few investments like this will make you independent. Price $11,000.

HIGHLAND AVE.—A community store center which supplies Atkins Park and many high-class apartment house dwellers; a fine lot, suitable for building a small block of cream brick stores; one of the most satisfactory of all investments. Price $10,000.

LITTLE FIVE POINTS—This lot has two street fronts; stores can be built on each end; brings the price down to $100 front foot, far below the selling price of community center store lots. NOT only in Atlanta, but in all cities, community stores are developing into excellent rent-paying investments for income purposes. If assured income and substantial yield, there is nothing more promising than a good block of community stores.

TURNING to the classified offers is doing a good turn.

CARRY ON! Read the classified ads. Carry off—their profits.

IN THE HEART OF ATLANTA

IN THE downtown retail section a store had been renting at the rate of $19,000 a year. Some time ago the lease expired and a new lease was made to another tenant for a long term of years at $55,000 a year. This one instance shows the value of real estate located in the heart of the retail section.

RIGHT in this particular district we have something to offer. Few owners of this kind of real estate ever desire to sell; the map shows the same owners who were there thirty or forty years ago. Property descends from father to son, but is rarely sold.

WE have one parcel that we would like to discuss with someone in a position to buy a downtown corner; it is right in the very middle of things; the income is $40,000 per year. Ownership and operation of a downtown corner like this constitutes a career in itself. We would like to discuss this property face to face with a prospective buyer.

Does the Old Bus Skip, Knock on Hills, Use Excessive Gas and Oil, Lack Power and Pep?

If so, it's not to be wondered at when you stop to figure out that the pistons on your car travel up and down 1,000 to 3,000 times per minute—

180,000 Per Hour

Just imagine what that means in going 15,000 miles. Other parts on your car wear under such usage, why not the cylinder walls? It's just "horse sense." Two surfaces in constant friction with one another—Result: Wear. New oversize rings without grinding the bore are useless for you cannot fit a round ring in an oval hole. The ONLY LASTING CURE is to regrind the cylinders and fit with new pistons and rings.

We are experts at this work. Call us on the phone or drop in and we will give you all the dope.

"We are co-laborers together with God."—I. Cor. 3:9.

What Price Tithing?

Yes, there is no use denying it, tithing costs something. It costs other things besides money, but it costs MONEY, whose value is often over-estimated and therefore hard to turn loose. That is the reason why some folks, at least, object to tithing. No, I don't mean all. There are a select few who have most probably started on the way of tithing and by that road have reached the much-desired goal of the larger stewardship—stewardship of self and all that he possesses. They object to tithing because they wish to "give a better account of their stewardship."

But what a big word and ideal is stewardship! Often it is of slow growth. The tithing-seed properly planted and nourished is likely to grow into full, stewardship like unto the "tiny acorn" which grows into "a prodigious piece of timber."

There are so many "babes in Christ" that must "larger grow" before they enter into the fullness of the whole gospel of stewardship.

To many minds the gospel of stewardship is so vague and so impossible of understanding that one is reminded of a story told by a preacher who had just performed the marriage ceremony of an adoring young couple. The happy groom turned gratefully to the minister and said, "What do I owe you?" The reply quickly came, "I make no definite charge—just pay me according to the value you put on your bride." "That," said the groom, "is beyond my power to estimate." You know the sequel—the minister was minus his fee! So it is sometimes that the stewardship ideal is as an arrow missing the mark. But the tithing idea being of smaller proportions is of so simple of computation, that even a child need not err therein. Yes, the tither learns to sacrifice a part of his money. But what of it? In becoming a tither you will be making a "Memorial" of God's unfailing gifts of love; you will find wonderful joy in "Obedience;" you will be developing "Nobility" of character; you will find "Enrichment" of soul; you will acknowledge "Yourself" as His very own.

What price tithing! Rather what is its worth? Rewards there are beyond compare. Do you see it? A great Christian denomination is calling for 500,000 tithers. Will you be a volunteer today?

"Neither will I offer unto the Lord, my God, that which doth cost me nothing."—2 Sam. 24:24.

Quilting Party.

The ladies of Immanuel Baptist church spent Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Brownlee. The morning was spent quilting for Mr. Edgar Dunstan, son of our beloved missionaries, Rev. and Mrs. A. L. Dunstan, of Brazil. Mr. Dunstan is in training at the Georgia Baptist hospital and is going to Brazil as a medical missionary. He was married August 26 and he and his consecrated young wife will sail for Brazil to join the forces of southern Baptist missionaries.

A beautiful luncheon was served by Mrs. Brownlee and Mrs. Rea, after which was held the regular missionary program, Mr. Dunstan making an interesting talk on "What Christ Means to Women."

Those present were Mr. Dunstan, Mrs. Rea, Mrs. Brownlee, Mrs. Coppage, Mrs. Donohoo, Mrs. Lindsey, Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Sprayberry, Mrs. Tye, Mrs. Wood and Mrs. Young.

Advanced Mission Study Notice.

The advanced course of mission study class will meet Thursday morning, September 2, at 10 o'clock, in Rich's conference room. Mrs. J. D. Rhodes will have charge of the study of "Today's Supreme Challenge to America," by Dr. J. F. Love, Richmond, Va. Mrs. Walton and Mrs. Rhodes request all the members to be present and as promptly as possible. They invite all who are ready for this course to get the book and meet with the class.

Mrs. Emmons Will Give Bible Lecture.

A most illuminating Bible lacture will be given by Mrs. M. R. Emmons Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at First Methodist church. All are most cordially invited to attend. Porter place entrance to church.

Deaconess Howard Assigned To Work In Augusta Field

Miss Frances Howard, deaconess, has returned to Georgia, after a year in Virginia.

MISS FRANCES HOWARD.

Miss Howard lived in Atlanta for several years at the Wesley Community house, first as an assistant to Miss Sarah Lowder, later being promoted to head resident of the same institution. She passed through Atlanta recently on her way to Augusta, where she has taken up work at the Bethlehem house under appointment of the board of missions, woman's section, of the Methodist Episcopal church, south.

Although Augusta is too far from Atlanta for her many friends here to see her often, it is good to know that she is in the state again and doing a work that the Georgia women have a particular privilege of aiding.

Already, since her arrival, a daily vacation Bible school has been launched and a great deal of interest shown in the work carried on in the program of health drills, memory work, dramatization of Bible stories, lessons in patriotism and music. The school was well attended, and proved quite a success.

Briefly Told

"Lewis" is an honored name among the federated church women, but the Episcopal representative on the executive board is Mrs. Henry W. Davis (not Henry W. Lewis), whose picture appeared on the page August 15.

Many friends throughout the state are congratulating Rev. Park Caldwell, of Saluda, Va., in taking as his bride, August 27, at the West End Baptist church, Miss Therea White, of Atlanta, who graduated last May at the Baptist W. M. U. Training school, Louisville, Ky.

"Moslem Women," the popular interdenominational study book for 1926-27, was studied last week by the Ponce de Leon W. M. S. class, also by the women of the sixth district at the Baptist tabernacle. Mrs. A. G. Sullivan, secretary, presided, and Dr. Will Houghton gave the opening devotional.

A beautiful wedding of August 26 was that of Mr. Edgar Dunstan, son of Dr. and Mrs. A. L. Dunstan, southern Baptist missionaries to Brazil, and Miss Florine Johnson, a graduate of Bessie Tift college. These fine young people will go to Brazil as medical missionaries and the good wishes and prayers of a host of friends go with them.

Miss Lucy Zachry, pastor's secretary at the Second Baptist church, was especially helpful at the recent mission study institute in her blackboard drawings, illustrating the book, "On Earth Peace." All present were unanimous in praise of her wholehearted hospitality.

After a profitable vacation, Miss Beulah Caraway is again at her desk at the "every ready" office secretary at B. W. M. U. headquarters in the Palmer building.

On Friday, August 20, Mrs. J. B. Young held an interesting mission study class for the G. A. S., R. A. S. and Sunbeams of the Immanuel Baptist church. "Two Young Arabs" was the book studied. Thirty of these girls and boys stood the test and received certificates. A picnic lunch was served by a committee from the W. M. S. of the church.

Mrs. Zachry Urges Use Of New Tither's Boxes

Mrs. J. H. Zachry, stewardship chairman, Baptist W. M. U. of Atlanta.

As stewardship chairman of the Baptist W. M. U. of Atlanta, Mrs. Zachry has developed her department of work to a new high level by constant thought and active service in presenting the subject at district rallies and at individual societies and by initiating attractive charts and posters. Mrs. Zachry has been for 15 years an active and beloved member of the West End Baptist church and W. M. S., teaching in the Sunday school and serving her society in various capacities. In the absence from the city of the president of W. M. S., she acted as president for six months of the year. Mrs. Zachry is not only a member of the executive board of Atlanta W. M. U., but has recently been honored by being elected a member of the executive board of the B. W. M. U. of Georgia.

NEW W. M. U. "TITHERS' BOX."

Every tither should own one of the beautiful new tithers' boxes recently issued by the W. M. U. They are really very attractive and may be had free for the asking at the headquarters in the Palmer building.

On one side is a horn-of-plenty, emblematic of God's generosity to us, with the verse, "The tenth shall be holy unto Jehovah." The reverse side shows the nine-tenths "for myself" and one-tenth "for God!" "Not grudgingly or of necessity, for God loveth a cheerful giver." On the other sides the verses, "Honor the Lord with thy substance and with the first fruits of all thine increase" and "Bring ye the whole tithe into the storehouse, that there may be food in my bosom, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord."

A real sermonette on tithing, isn't it? If kept before our eyes it will be a constant reminder that "every good and every perfect gift is from above" and that we should lovingly and joyously "render unto God the things that are God's."

MRS. J. H. ZACHRY,
Stewardship Chairman Atlanta Association.

Stone Mountain Baptists Hold Annual Meeting

The First Baptist church of Lithonia, Ga., was indeed a beautiful setting for the annual meeting of the Stone Mountain W. M. U. association on Wednesday morning, August 18, 1926.

The meeting was called to order promptly at 10 o'clock by the superintendent, Mrs. E. G. Walton. There was an unusually large attendance. The reports showed a marked progress in the year's work. A striking feature was the W. M. S. presidents were 100 per cent present and only one for the next year was absent.

Mrs. W. J. Neal and Dr. T. W. Ayers brought stirring messages. Other visitors included Mrs. Garner, Mrs. J. J. Wallace and Mrs. Lucy Ayers Pitman of Atlanta.

Mrs. Pitman led a beautiful consecration service for the newly-elected officers at the close of the program. Mrs. E. G. Walton of Stone Mountain was again elected superintendent and Miss Mary Granade of Conyers as Young People's leader.

New Wesley House To Open Formally Next Wednesday

Atlanta Methodists are much interested in the opening of the new Wesley house, located at 306 Whitehall street. The formal opening occurs September 1. Mrs. Bessie Allen has returned from her vacation and is very busy preparing for this event. Mrs. A. L. Norris is president of the city mission board, Mrs. J. A. Manget, treasurer and Mrs. Rapp, house chairman. The telephone number is WAlnut 9143.

Mrs. Costen J. Harrell, former president of the Missionary society of the First Methodist church, was delightfully entertained during a visit to Mrs. John Staton the past week. Mrs. Harrell with Dr. Harrell and little son, Julius, resides in Norfolk, Va., where Dr. Harrell is pastor of the leading Methodist church.

The countless friends of Mrs. Myra H. Boynton are sympathizing with her in the death of her son, George Boynton.

ST. MARYS SCHOOL FACULTY COMPLETED

St. Marys, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—The board of education has completed the faculty for the public school of this place. W. K. Hood, who was superintendent last year, has again accepted this position, and he will be aided by efficient teachers.

The prospects for a successful school are bright.

Splendid Work Accomplished By Episcopal Young People

The following article was written by Miss Billie Linthicum, a member of All Saints' Church Young People's Service league, who was a delegate to the convention of leaguers held last month at Sewanee, Tenn.

This article is lovingly dedicated to those who do not already know what good, constructive work the Episcopal young people are doing. We have a national organization known as the National Federation of Episcopal Young People. This organization has annual meetings and lays plans for a bigger and better church in the future, so far as young people are concerned. Our purpose as a national unit is to stimulate and extend the work of the church.

Practically every Episcopal church of today has in it an active, working unit known as the Young People's Service league. This league bridges the gulf of adolescence where the greatest leakage of the church is to be found. It aims at prevention and also enables youth to restate Christian faith in terms he will understand. It stirs initiative and equips young people for service. It develops leadership and self-expression.

The Young People's Service leagues have just had a conference at Sewanee, Tenn. At this conference there were delegates from Episcopal churches all over the United States. With our splendid faculty we received a store of inspiration and knowledge which will last us a lifetime. Not only did we work together, but we learned to play together. Everyone had a fine time.

I am now going to state briefly a few things that we learned. We must do service in all five fields—namely, parish, community, diocese, nation and world.

We must know how to get a crowd and how to hold it. This, of course, is easy. All we have to do is to invite and welcome every one to our league. After you get the crowd put on an interesting program that will not only keep them awake, but really inspire them and increase their store of religious education.

The league has many different types of program so that the members shall not become onesided. Some of our programs consist of talks and papers, others of outside speakers, such as missionaries, foreigners and church workers. One program which always proves interesting is the open forum or discussion of some outstanding question or issue of the day. The musical program offers a delightful variety, as it deals with the stories of our hymns and the lives of those who wrote them. Debates, pageants, etc. all offer variety of programs.

The league roll is called every Sunday night and must be answered with a verse from the Bible. Our league is a unit of true fellowship. It is recreational, it is social, it is educational; but, best of all, it is spiritual.

There are six live and working committees with their own specific duties, which are:

1. Prayer—To encourage family prayer and to see that Grace is said.
2. Publicity—To keep the church informed of what the league is doing.
3. Membership—To urge all persons between 15 and 25, who are connected with the church to become active league members.
4. Social—The duty of which is to work up the spirit of fellowship in the league; also to send greeting cards to missionaries and to league members who are away at school.
5. Censor—To look after behavior during social meetings.
6. Critic—Tells how each meeting might be improved.

The greatest thing that the league does is to develop leaders and church workers. We are a service league and we must serve. We must all be lifters and not leaners. The one big thing is—Jesus Christ served. Do we?

Hapeville Book Club Is Entertained.

The Hapeville Book club was entertained Friday afternoon with Mrs. L. T. Carter as hostess at her home on Whitney avenue.

The book hour was enjoyed with Mrs. J. M. Burks presiding. A discussion of new books to be secured for the club's library by the members and brought to the next meeting, proved to be most interesting.

A "conversation party" was held soon after the arrival of the guests, each one being asked to talk on some interesting subject for four minutes. A prize was offered the member whose subject and conversation proved to be the most entertaining. Mrs. T. P. Reddick was presented a lovely bird wall vase as the winner.

A contest of "Book Authors" was also enjoyed. Mrs. W. J. Gower won a lovely hand-embroidered vanity set as first prize. Mrs. J. L. Amason was given the consolation.

Tea was served at 6 o'clock. Miss Louise Carter and Miss Catherine Carter, daughters of the hostess, assisted in serving.

Those present were Mrs. T. P. Reddick, Mrs. Jere A. Wells, Mrs. D. W. Brown, Mrs. M. P. Bodie, Mrs. J. M. Burks, Mrs. W. J. Gower, Mrs. J. L. Amason, Mrs. E. L. Greene, Mrs. L. T. Carter, Miss Louise Carter, Miss Catherine Carter and Miss J. R. Cathy.

Baptist W. M. S. To Have Social.

The Woman's Missionary society of Woodward Avenue Baptist church will hold a social at the church on next Monday at 3 o'clock, it being the fifth Monday in the month. Mrs. T. B. Lewis will have charge of the program.

Delphian Chapter To Resume Meetings.

The Alpha Omega Delphian chapter will resume the regular semi-monthly meeting of the society September 2, at 3 o'clock in the parlor of the Piedmont hotel. Mrs. Kate Green Hess, the president, will preside. Mrs. C. W. McClure, chairman of the advisory board, will direct the program.

The Delphian movement is purely educational, including those subjects which are now offered in the leading colleges and universities, history, literature, philosophy, poetry, fiction, drama, art, ethics and music. Its aims are to gain knowledge of the foundation and growth of the present civilization and culture. Self culture and improvement and an opportunity for the business woman and the housewives, who have been out of college a few years, to keep abreast of the present day college graduate through the light of ancient history and archaeology are studied and discussed in the meetings in connection with present day culture and the problems of every day life.

There are no chapter dues and membership can only be obtained through the local membership secretary, after the chapter has been organized by the regular Delphian field secretary.

Third Baptist Girls' Auxiliary.

The girls' auxiliary of the Third Baptist church were delighted with their mission study class held last week at their church.

In July the organization met at the home of their leader, Mrs. J. T. Bowles, and made tray covers and kitchen towels for the Georgia Baptist hospital. The hostess served sandwiches and tea.

ATHENS COLLEGES PREPARE TO OPEN

Athens, Ga., August 28.—(Special.) In a few days more than 2,000 students will come to Athens to take up their studies at the University of Georgia, Lucy Cobb institute and the State Normal school.

The university opens for the entrance of members of the freshman class on September 8, while the formal opening will be on September 15, when members of the other three classes will register. It is planned to begin class-room work on the morning of the 18th. Members of the faculty will return a week earlier this fall and be here during "freshman week." Letters have been written to members of the three classes that have already been at the university in which the details of the plan of having the first-year men report a week earlier were explained and cooperation sought.

A larger freshman class than last year is expected this fall. Approximately 500 first-year men were registered for the 1924-25 term when a total of 1,794 regular students attended the university, while over 5,000 attended, including short courses, etc.

This is Chancellor Snelling's first year as chancellor, although the affairs of the university were under his direction last year as acting chancellor. Dr. S. V. Sanford is also in a new rale as dean of the university and president of Franklin college.

The State Normal school has an overflowing registration for the new term, and will have every available room in the dormitories and class halls filled, it is stated.

Dr. W. F. Hollingsworth has succeeded Miss Mildred Rutherford as active head of Lucy Cobb institute, and a large attendance at that school is expected. Lucy Cobb opens September 9.

The State Normal school opens on September 8.

TREATISE ON TOBACCO GIVEN TO GROWERS

Waycross, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—J. A. Kersey, manager of the Farmers' tobacco warehouse here is the author of a practical book on "Tobacco Culture." As part of its program for securing an increased production of tobacco the local chamber of commerce is arranging to place a copy of this book in the hands of every tobacco grower in the Waycross territory.

The books are being donated by Mr. Kersey.

MILK DEPOT SOUGHT BY WARE DAIRYMEN

Waycross, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—W. A. Seaman, president of the Ware county Dairymen's association, announces the association is negotiating with a prominent out-of-town man concerning the establishment in Waycross of a $25,000 milk depot.

This man has visited Waycross twice recently investigating local conditions and a definite announcement is expected soon.

FARM PROSPERITY GAIN TO BE SEEN AT FAIR

Doubling the number of prizes and reducing the size of space required for each county or individual exhibit in the agricultural department, the Southeastern Fair association announced Saturday that the department at this year's fair, October 2 to 9, would be more completely representative of all the agricultural resources of Georgia, throughout its eight climatic zones, than any previous fair.

"The increased farm prosperity of Georgia this year, with its resultant increase in the desire of people throughout the state to display their achievements at the fair, cannot be met by increased exhibit space as the fair association has annually spent all its funds in premiums and other immediate necessary expenses for developing a great fair and has not been able to accumulate a building fund," it was explained by Oscar Mills, secretary-manager of the fair association.

"The new arrangement of space, however, will enable a larger number of counties and individuals to secure display booths and will give the visitors to the fair a more complete, even if more concentrated, idea of what their state is doing in agriculture," he stated.

County exhibit booths are to be 30 feet wide by 16 feet deep instead of 45 feet wide as previously, and individual exhibits are to be 15 feet wide by 16 feet deep, instead of 20 feet wide as previously. Fifteen cash prizes, ranging up to $300, are offered for county exhibits, and the same number of prizes ranging up to $150 for individual exhibits, instead of approximately half that number of prizes as last year.

The agricultural exhibit units are all to be standard this year, the fair association having constructed a mammoth inclined display floor extending the entire length of the agricultural building on two sides. The uniformity of the exhibit booths will make the awards entirely dependent on the quality and arrangement of the agricultural products displayed, relieving exhibitors of expensive cabinet work and carpentry formerly necessary to make attractive exhibits.

LightOperaMusic Will Be Featured In Band Concerts

With "Mlle. Modiste," the popular light opera by Victor Herbert as the feature number, the Royal Purple Elks' band will present its regular weekly concert at Lakewood Amusement park from 3:30 to 5:30 o'clock this (Sunday) afternoon. "Mlle. Modiste" was one of the more popular light operas listed in the ballot for possible production during the 1927 light opera season.

It is planned to present each Sunday during the remainder of the Lakewood park season selections from one of the more popular light operas which were listed on the printed ballot issued during the last week of the 1926 season. The selections to be played by the band, it was stated by Oscar Mills, secretary-manager of the park, will have no bearing on selection of works for the opera season.

The program Sunday will be "America," "Olympia Hippodrome," "The Jolly Robbers," "Sweet Child," "Keep It Under Your Hat," "Medley of Old Popular Hits," "Tromboneology," "Estudina," "Sleepy Head," "Some One Is Losin' Susan," "Fontella, Mexican Dance," "Mlle. Modiste" selections, "Hostrausers March," and "Star-Spangled Banner."

John T. Lee will conduct the band, of which William Ritter is manager.

The light opera to be included in next Sunday's program will be selected on the basis of requests, which may be handed to the conductor written on the back of the printed program after the concert.

HOW I IMPROVED MY HEALTH
Did It in Less Than One Month

As Mrs. Weaver herself says, "I was never very strong." This is a mild statement describing her condition, for, according to her letters, she was subjected to no small amount of ill health. Fortunately, her sister was familiar with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and begged Mrs. Weaver to try it. "After three or four weeks," writes Mrs. Weaver, "I felt a great difference in myself. I would go to bed and sleep sound, and although I could not do very much work, I seemed stronger. I kept on taking it and now I am well and strong, do my work and take care of three children. I sure do tell my friends about your wonderful medicine, and I will answer any letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Lawrence Weaver, East Smithfield St., Mt. Pleasant, Pa.
If you knew that thousands of women suffering from troubles similar to those you are enduring had improved their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, wouldn't you think it was worth a trial?

Miss Stockton Weds William A. Dunson On Wednesday

At Kirkwood Presbyterian church on Wednesday afternoon, August 25, about 5:45, Miss Haley Stockton was married to William Albert Dunson, Rev. Franklin C. Talmadge, pastor of that church, performed the ceremony.

The bride was lovely in her dainty white bridal costume. She was given away by her mother, who wore soft gray.

The maid of honor, Miss Margaret Cunningham, was dressed in blue with a rose hat.

The other bridesmaids' costumes were uniform in their respective colors, all being in the pastel shades. Miss Alice Lee Sullivan was exquisitely quaint in yellow and Miss Mary Lou Sullivan beautiful in orchid.

The ribbon bearers were charming with their long shepherd crooks. Miss Allie Dunson wore nile green with flesh tulle on her crook, while Miss Elmer Clark wore flesh with nile green on her crook, and the effect was very attractive. Little Miss Mary Kirkpatrick, the flower girl, was dressed in pink.

Leslie Durloo acted as best man. George Carroll, Ruble Stockton, Jesse Shleton and John M. Hardin were the groomsmen.

Little Miss Bobbie Dell Stockton, in her pretty pale green-over-pink dress, collected the ribbons on one side of the church immediately after the bridal party left the altar, assisted by Master Francis Kirkpatrick, who collected the ribbons on the other side.

Miss Jackson Weds Walter P. McCurdy.

The marriage of Miss Martha Louise Jackson and Walter Philip McCurdy was an event of Saturday evening, August 14, at 9 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Clarence Jackson, 70 Albermarle avenue.

Miss Jimmy Whipple, as bridesmaid, made a charming picture in green georgette and tulle, and carried pink rosebuds. The groomsmen were George Jackson and Frank Jackson, brothers of the bride.

Mrs. Guy Torrance, the matron of honor, was lovely in a gown of pink georgette and tulle and carried pink rosebuds.

Sam Bell Howard was the little ring-bearer.

The bride entered with her father, Joseph C. Jackson, by whom she was given in marriage and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man Julius McCurdy. The bride was lovely in a gown of white georgette with trimmings of lace and ribbons. The veil of tulle was caught by a bandeau of orange blossoms. Her bouquet was bride roses and lilies of the valley tied with white tulle and ribbons.

Rev. Oro J. Moncrief, pastor of the First Baptist church of Decatur, performed the ceremony.

A reception followed the ceremony. Mrs. Julius McCurdy, Jr., kept the bride's book. Mrs. Jackson, mother of the bride, was dressed in black beaded georgette over satin with corsage of pink roses. Mrs. McCurdy, mother of the groom, wore powder blue georgette, with corsage of pink roses.

The bride and groom left immediately after the ceremony for St. Simons Island.

The out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Jackson, of Toccoa, Ga., and Mrs. Katie McCall, of Monroe, N. C.; Mr. George Jackson, of Charlotte, and Miss Martha Edge of Villa Rica, Ga.

The bride is a graduate of the Girls' High school. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. McCurdy, of Decatur, Ga. After graduating from Decatur High school he attended Emory university and holds a position with the Merchants and Miners' Transportation company.

Miss Elder Weds Wilmer Heery.

Swords-Jones Wedding Is Home Event

The marriage of Miss Nola Odelle Swords and Roy Maurice Jones took place Tuesday evening, August 24, at the home of the bride on Hudson drive.

The home was beautifully decorated in gladiolas, ferns and garden flowers. The bride's only sister, Miss Gladys Swords, was the only attendant, who preceded the bride and groom to the improvised altar of ferns and gladiolas. She wore a gown of flesh-colored georgette fashioned over satin.

The radiant bride was lovely in a gown of white duchess satin trimmed in pearls and rhinestones and wore a wreath of orange blossoms in her hair.

Miss Loie Latham rendered Lohengrin's wedding march and "Hearts and Flowers" was softly played throughout the ceremony, which was performed by Dr. F. C. McConnell, pastor of the Druid Hills Baptist church, the impressive ring ceremony being used.

Only the immediate family and a few close friends of both the bride and groom were present for the wedding. After the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Jones left for Signal Mountain and other points of interest near Chattanooga, where they will spend a week. After their return to the city they will be at home to their friends at their new home on Austin avenue, Inman Park.

Miss Braswell Weds Captain A. B. Shipp.

Fort Valley, Ga., August 28.—The marriage on Saturday, August 23, of Miss Emily Braswell, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Braswell, of Fort Valley, to Captain Allison Beverly Shipp, U. S. A., came as a surprise to many friends throughout the state.

The bride is one of Fort Valley's most beautiful young women and enjoyed a wide popularity at Bessie Tift college and at Stetson university, where she studied following her graduation at high school.

Captain Allison Shipp, a native of Cordele, has had signal honors in the military field, seeing service in Mexico and was with the 82d division overseas in the world war, having been decorated for bravery by General Pershing. He is now military instructor at Pennsylvania State college and he and his bride left on a motor trip through the mountains en route to State College, planning to reach there September 1.

Miss Jeffreys Weds H. J. Millikin.

St. Marys, Ga., August 28.—The marriage of Miss Nan Dozier Jeffreys and Harry Jackson Millikin was solemnized at the home of the bride, Fernandina, Fla., Monday evening at 8 o'clock, in the presence of relatives and a few intimate friends. The Rev. G. W. Woodward, of the Methodist church, performed the ceremony.

The bride, a lovely brunette, was radiant in an almond green crepe romaine ensemble suit, with small blond hat with pastel embroidery.

Her only attendant was her sister, Miss Dorothy Jeffreys, who was charming in white flat crepe. She carried an arm bouquet of chrysanthemums.

"The Store of Dependability"

Even Now, People Are Buying for Christmas

Charge purchases made during the remainder of August will not be payable until October.

CHRISTMAS with its joys and its demands for money is four months away—but a lot of fore-handed people are already selecting gifts of the more expensive kind and having us lay them aside until they are needed. Some of them are doing this just to be sure of getting what they want. Others are doing it so, by paying a part of the price each month, they will have them out of the way before the usual deluge of Christmas bills come in.

Miss Gladys Darrington Weds Ernest Hambrick at Home

A beautiful home wedding was that of Miss Gladys Darrington and Ernest Hambrick, which occurred at the home of the bride's parents, 111 LaFrance avenue, on Saturday evening, August 28, at 8 o'clock, the Rev. Dr. W. L. Hambrick, father of the groom, performing the ceremony.

The bridal party descended the stairs, preceded by the sister of the bride, Miss Margaret Darrington, who made a charming picture as flower girl costumed in a dainty dress of rose color carrying a huge basket of roses.

The staircase was artistically festooned with ferns and smilax. The mantels and chandeliers were made beautiful with roses and ferns, and bowls filled with roses adorned the tables. The bride's going-away gown was ashes of roses crepe—the top coat and hat matching in tone.

Mrs. J. F. Pitchford, sister of the bride, of Portsmith, Va., played the wedding march from "Lohengrin," and Miss Martha Anderson was the soloist, singing "Oh, Promise Me."

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David P. Darrington, of Atlanta, both of whom are prominently connected throughout Georgia, Mrs. Darrington being Miss Elisabeth Holle, of LaGrange, Ga. Mr. Hambrick is a progressive young business man connected with the Southern railway.

The guests included relatives of the families and a few close friends. Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Pitchford, Portsmouth, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Holle, of LaGrange, Ga.; Miss Sara Holle, of LaGrange, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Holle, of LaGrange, Ga.; Mrs. Charles Terry, West Palm Beach, Fla.

Mr. and Mrs. Hambrick will be at home to their friends at 12 Sydney street after their return to the city.

Miss Brazzell Weds Nathan Lang.

A marriage of interest to many friends occurred Sunday afternoon at Woodbine, when Miss Susie Brazzell, of Kingsland, became the bride of Nathan Lang, of St. Marys. The ceremony was witnessed by a few friends.

The bride is the pretty daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Brazzell, of Kingsland, Ga., and Nathan Lang has for years lived in St. Marys.

Miss Davis Weds W. I. Westbrook.

Rev. and Mrs. W. M. Davis, of Meigs, Ga., announce the marriage of their daughter, Annie Josephine, to William Iral Westbrook, of Live Oak, Fla., at 10 o'clock Sunday morning, August 22.

The marriage was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, the ceremony being read by the father of the bride in the presence of the immediate family.

Shortly after the ceremony the couple left for Dahlonega, Ga. They will be at home in Live Oak, Fla., after September 7.

Miss Gary Weds Charles E. Kilby.

Summerville, Ga., August 28.—The marriage of Miss Effie Catherine Gary, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. George P. Gary, of this city, to Charles E. Kilby, of Quincy, Fla., was solemnized at the Methodist parsonage Wednesday evening, August 18, the bride's father officiating.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Kilby left for Atlanta and points in Florida. Later they will be at home in Quincy, Fla.

Miss Eubank To Wed Mr. Tumlin At Home Ceremony September 12

The announcement of the wedding plans of Miss Annie Mae Eubank and Albert Loren Tumlin is of sincere and cordial interest, the marriage to take place Sunday evening, September 12, at 9 o'clock at the home of the bride.

The Rev. J. F McConnell, pastor of the Druid Hills Baptist church, will officiate and the occasion will assemble the immediate relatives and a few intimate friends. While the wedding will be quiet, simplicity and dignity will mark the impressive ceremony and a beautiful musical program will be rendered.

The bride will be given in marriage by her uncle, Phil P. Bethea, and a sister of the groom, Miss Janice Tumlin, will be maid of honor. The groom will be attended by J. B. Carlyon, of Jacksonville, Fla., as best man.

Miss Eubank is the attractive daughter of Mrs. Tidie Bethea Eubank and the late James Wesley Eubank and is loved and admired by all who know her.

Mr. Tumlin is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Boone Tumlin and is prominently connected with his father in the insurance circles of the city.

Following the marriage service the wedding guests will be entertained at a reception, after which the bride and groom will leave for a wedding trip by motor to the beautiful mountains in and around Asheville, N. C. Returning the first of October they will make their home with the groom's parents at 1829 Ponce de Leon avenue.

Miss Janice Tumlin will compliment Miss Eubank at a bridge-tea and Mrs. Eubank will honor her daughter with a shower and trousseau tea on September 4.

Miss Murphy Weds S. E. Williamson.

Mr. and Mrs. Matthew M. Murphy announce the marriage of their daughter, Alice Frances, to Samuel Edward Williamson, on Friday, August 13, at the rectory of the Holy Family church. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Joseph E. Moylan, in the presence of the bride's family.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs Williamson left for Wilkes Barre, Pa., their future home.

Miss Robertson Weds James Preston Clark.

Mr. and Mrs. Capus Robertson, of Mansfield, Ga., announce the marriage of their daughter, Anna Judson, to James Preston Cook.

The nuptials were solemnized by Dr. Evans at the First Central Methodist church of Chattanooga, Tenn., August 20.

Mrs. Cook is quite attractive and has many personal charms, while Mr. Cook holds a splendid position in Atlanta, Ga. After September 1 they will be at home to their friends, 530 Piedmont avenue, Atlanta.

Miss Hornbarger Weds Mr. Aiken, Of Miami, Formerly of Atlanta

A marriage of cordial social interest throughout the south was that of Miss Marjorie Hornbarger, niece of Judge Thomas B. Norfleet, of Miami, Fla., and Ernest Patterson Aiken, formerly of Atlanta, but now a resident of Miami. The ceremony was solemnized Friday, August 20, at the First Christian church in Miami, with Dr. Everett Smith officiating.

Mr. Aiken and his bride left during the evening for a motor trip up the east coast, arriving in Atlanta late this week where they are the guests of the groom's brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Willard Crawford Patterson, on St. Charles avenue.

The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Mack Hornbarger, of Missouri. She is a native of Arkansas, but for the past several years has made her home with her maternal uncle, Judge Norfleet, and Mrs. Norfleet, at Miami.

Mr. Aiken's father was the late Eugene Henry Aiken, of Oxford, Ga. His mother, who before her marriage was Miss Eugenia Scott, of Summerville, Ga., is a descendant of the Byrd and Hamilton families of Virginia.

Mr. Aiken is a veteran of the world war, having served with distinction in France with one of the first divisions sent over. He was later with the army of occupation in Coblenz, Germany. It was nearly a year after the armistice was signed before he returned to America and resumed civil life. At that time he became connected with the Atlanta branch of a national motion picture distributing company. Two years ago he went to Miami where he organized the United Sign company, of which he is president and general manager.

Miss Murphy Weds S. E. Williamson.

Mr. and Mrs. Matthew McElhenny Murphy, of Columbus, Ga., announce the marriage of their daughter, Alice Frances, to Samuel Edward Williamson, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Friday, August 13.

Designed Especially for this Shop

This dress of heavy Crepe Satin is an excellent example of a symmetrical cut. Each flounce is piped with the reverse side of the Satin. The dolman sleeves give the new feeling of softness. The draped girdle and chiffon flower are interesting features. Shown in Black and Wine. Sizes for Miss and Matron.

In coordination with a premier staff of style authorities and originators, our own buyers have every La Fay style designed expressly for our individual presentation. New Motifs are shown in advance of the season—but they are not exotic—rather they are designed in true symmetry of lines and grace of proportion. A La Fay dress has no counterpart in its style conception, in its quality of fabric or in its fine needlework.

A Distinct Value Triumph

For several years the organization with which we are affiliated has been perfecting every artery in designing, making and distribution for such an achievement. All the resources of this organization purchasing thirty million dollars of women's apparel have been used in this perfection. Without fear of contradiction we warrant every La Fay dress to be the greatest values ever shown for this price.

Exclusive Styles For the First Time

No other shop in this city can secure La Fay styles. So carefully are the originations guarded that every atelier where they are made is bonded to assure us that the styles will not be pirated. This exclusiveness of style, together with the newness of these same styles, affords the woman and miss the ideal dress at a price much less than expected. What is better, new styles will be shown continually.

Unusual cut and a distinct femininity characterize this smart creation of Satin Crepe. The coat is cut gradually shorter in front with a deep band of material reversed. The dress is trimmed with machine and hand embroidery, appearing also on the cuffs of the coat. The skirt is a repetition of double box pleats. Shown in Blue and Black, Black and Rose, Wine and Beige. Sizes for Miss and Matron.

La Fay is a trade mark registered in the U.S. Patent Office. Any and all infringements will be prosecuted to the utmost.

Atlanta Woman's Club To Exhibit Art Works of Thomas Delbridge

The Atlanta Woman's club will present an exhibition of the work of Thomas James Delbridge, well-known young Atlanta artist. It will be held in the Galleries Intime of the club, beginning Wednesday, September 1, at 2:30 o'clock and continue daily until the following Tuesday.

The exhibit will be sponsored by members of the fine arts committee of the Atlanta Woman's club, including Mrs. W. F. Melton, chairman, and Mrs. Marvin Underwood, co-chairman, assisted by the officers of the club, who are Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, president; Mrs. J. R. Hornady, first vice president; Mrs. DeLos Hill, second vice president; Mrs. E. V. Carter, recording secretary; Mrs. J. A. Carlisle, assistant recording secretary; Mrs. Eva Corrigan, treasurer; Mrs. W. D. Williamson, assistant treasurer; Mrs. Joel Hunter, auditor, and Mrs. D. F. Stevenson, corresponding secretary.

This exhibition will primarily consist of Mr. Delbridge's recent studies made in the environs of Atlanta. One of the most excellent of these, "Storm Clouds," was painted at the Atlanta waterworks and shows familiar scenes viewed through the eyes of an artist. "Vistas" shows some new aspects of Piedmont park, and many will be interested in Mr. Delbridge's interpretation of "Stone Mountain." "The Bridge" was done at the near-by Chattahoochee, and all artists have painted bridges from Rembrandt to Whistler. "Sunlight and Shadow" is a delightful inspiration intended to suggest a well known sketch at Brookhaven.

Portraits Exhibit.

A group of portraits will be exhibited, among them a recently completed canvas of Mrs. Ben Simcox. Pastels will also be on exhibition and a group of studies made for illustration.

Mr. Delbridge has many friends in Atlanta who are proud of his success and development in art. His first studies were made under Miss Amelia Smith and Lewis Gregg, both of Atlanta. Later he spent several years studying at the Art Students' league and the National Academy of Design, both in New York city.

Last year Mr. Delbridge was director of the arts school, founded by the Fine Arts club of Decatur, Ga. For the past eight months he has been studying at the Grand Central School of Art in connection with the Grand Central Galleries of New York, where he was monitor in the classes of George Elmer Browne and Edmund Graecean.

Tapestry Collection.

Last season Mr. Delbridge did sixteen paintings in full color from the collection of tapestries in the Widener galleries in Philadelphia.

Mr. Delbridge is a member of the National Arts club, New York city, and the American Art Alliance and has received a fellowship in the Louis Comfort Tiffany Foundation at Oyster Bay, Long Island. He has a vital and interesting exhibition on view now at Gloucester, Mass., and is a well-known exhibitor in New York and Provincetown, Mass.

Miss Harris Weds Charles B. Primm In Alabama

Russellville, Ala., August 28.—A late summer wedding, beautiful in its simplicity, was that of Miss Margaret Catherine Harris and Charles Brown Primm which took place at the home of the bride's parents, Dr. and Mrs. E. M. Harris, Wednesday evening, August 25, at 8 o'clock.

An altar of ferns and cut flowers with burning tapers in silver holders formed a lovely background for the ring ceremony which was said by Dr. J. M. McClesky, pastor of the First Methodist church.

The bridal party entered to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Mrs. James Gordon Bennett.

The bridesmaids wore bouffant gowns of taffeta in the pastel shades and carried exquisite arm bouquets of Columbia roses tied with tulle the shade of their dresses. They were Miss Mary Harris, sister of the bride, Miss Kate Frank Gilchrist, of Courtland, and Miss Lucy Gresham. The groomsmen were Dr. Bryce Harris, and John Harris, brothers of the bride; Robert Tweedy, of Courtland, and George Gaffny, of Nashville.

Little Carolyn Wilson, in a blue taffeta frock with silver ribbons, carried the ring on a white satin pillow. The lovely little flower girls, Mary Harris and Annie Lee Bennett, wore pink and white taffeta dresses and carried baskets of rose petals.

Miss Julia Harris, beautifully gowned in orchid chiffon, served her sister as maid of honor. The bride wore an exquisitely beautiful imported creation of white duchess satin heavily beaded in pearls and crystals and studded with rhinestones. Her veil fastened with orange blossoms was worn coronet style and her only ornament was a diamond bar pin, the gift of the groom. Her bouquet was of bride roses and lilies of the valley tied with chatelaine streamers. She entered with her father, who gave her in marriage. Paul Pettus, of Nashville, attended the groom as best man.

After an informal reception Mr. and Mrs. Primm motored to Sheffield where they took a late train for an extended western trip. their immediate destination being Colorado Springs.

The out-of-town guests for the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Primm, parents of the groom; Paul Pettus, George Gaffny and Miss Julia Harris, of Nashville; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Harris, of Atlanta; Dr. Bryce Harris, of the U. S. navy; Misses Katie Frank, Philippa and Edith Gilchrist and Robert Tweedy, of Courtland; Mrs. L. W. DesPrez and Miss Frances DesPrez, of Florence.

Miss Willis Weds Thomas T. McGee.

A wedding of impressive beauty was that of Miss Ruth Willis and Thomas Thelmer McGee, of Lawrenceville, Ga., which was solemnized Thursday evening, August 19, at 7 o'clock, at the Molena Baptist church.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. B. D. Ragsdale, of Macon, Ga.

The church was beautifully decorated in a color scheme of pink and white. The altar was banked high with palms and ferns interspersed with baskets of roses and gladioli.

A program of nuptial music was rendered by Clifford Fuller, of Chicago. Preceding the ceremony Mrs. M. W. Reid, cousin of the bride, sang "All for You" and "O, Promise Me."

The bridal party entered to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march.

The ushers were Roy M. Nix and Hubert McGee, brother of the groom, both of Lawrenceville, Ga. They were followed by Paul and Carey Willis, brothers of the bride, and Mrs. Irby Cook, of Manchester, Ga., and Mrs. W. S. Baker, of Macon, Ga. Mrs. Cook wore a charming model of lavender satin combined with gold lace. Mrs. Baker was beautifully gowned in flesh georgette. They both carried arm bouquets of pink rosebuds, tied with pink tulle.

Next came thetiny ringbearer, Nadine Baker, who wore a costume of lace-trimmed white georgette over satin, and carried the ring on a white satin pillow. She was followed by the matron of honor, Mrs. Shade O. Bartlett, sister of the bride, who was gowned in yellow georgette beaded with crystals. She carried an arm bouquet of pink rasebuds, tied with pink tulle.

The dainty little flower girls, Polly Jordan, of Molena, Ga., and Mary Elizabeth McGee, of Lawrenceville, Ga., dressed in blue and pink crepe de chine, preceded the bride.

The bride entered with her father, Dawson M. Willis, by whom she was given in marriage. They were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Sam Davidson, of Atlanta.

The bride was a picture of loveliness in her gown of white satin, made with close-fitting bodice and bouffant skirt, with trimmings of real lace. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and valley lilies.

Following the ceremony at the church, Mr. and Mrs. Shade O. Bartlett entertained at a reception at their home.

Immediately after the reception the bride and groom left for a wedding journey to North Carolina. The bride wore a smart going-away costume of black and white satin.

Mrs. Sharp Made Vice President Of Dixie Highway Auxiliary

Mrs. Norman Sharp, who has held the office of director of this district of the state in the Dixie Highway Auxiliary for more than a year, is in receipt of a communication from Mrs. Orren W. Massey, president of the National Dixie Highway Auxiliary, in which Mrs. Massey gives Mrs. Sharp full supervision of the entire state, as vice president, the highest state office in the auxiliary.

An excerpt of the letter follows: "It has been the policy to date to deal with all directors direct until the ability of each could be ascertained and no state as yet has been turned over to the vice president. At the last executive council meeting, it was decided that your work had proved so eminently satisfactory, that it was time to put Georgia in your hands, with Mrs. Oscar Peeples and Mrs. J. L. Walker as your assistants in other sections of the state."

Mrs. Sharp's Tea.

The committee has asked the assistance of the highway department and Mrs. Sharp has arranged to entertain her central committee at a formal tea at the Atlanta Woman's club, Friday afternoon, and on this occasion Hon. John N. Holder, chairman of the state highway department, and members of the commission will outline plans as to how the highway department can best assist the auxiliary in promoting the work of beautifying the highways, in a more extensive way. Other friends of the auxiliary will be present at this gathering.

The personnel of the central committee, assisting Mrs. Sharp in this work, includes Mrs. John R. Hornady, first vice president, Atlanta Woman's club; Mrs. H. G. Hastings, honorary president Fifth District Federated Clubs; Miss Frances Woodberry, president Overseas Girls; Mrs. Edgar Alexander, national democratic committeewoman of Georgia; Mrs. Tom Jolly, of Clarkston Woman's club; Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, president Atlanta Woman's club; Mrs. W. F. Melton, Star Service Legion; Mrs. M. L. Johnston, Clarkston; Mrs. Walker, Waycross; Mrs. Kate Green Hess, Mrs. Edward K. Van Winkle, Mrs. P. H. Jeter, of Decatur, president state Parent-Teachers' association; Mrs. Oscar Palmour, president Fifth District Federated Clubs; Mrs. Roy Jones, president Decatur Woman's club; Mrs. James T. Williams, Mrs. Oscar Peeples, Cartersville; Mrs. Eva Corrigan, Mrs. W. D. Williamson, Mrs. Ben Simcox, Mrs. D. R. Wilder, Mrs. W. R. Stewart, of Hapeville; Mrs. Fred Rice, Mrs. George Obear, Mrs. W. P. Dunn, Mr. Basil Stockbridge, American Legion representative.

Report Urged.

Miss Susan Myrick, secretary to the National Dixie Highway Auxiliary, urges the Georgia committee to prepare a full report of the splendid work done in Georgia, to be read before the national Dixie highway convention, which will be held in September. Much constructive work has been done in the different sections of the state by the auxiliary, in tree planting, memorial markers placed and all manner of beautification of the Georgia highways.

The committee has many splendid plans for a new line of work for the coming winter season, and will confer with members of the highway department in regard to these plans and ask the cooperation of the board in putting through this most constructive program.

Worth-While Club Studies History And Current Events

Mrs. E. G. Marchman entertained the Worth-While club Thursday morning at her home on Arlington street, and Mrs. A. G. Helmer, president, presided.

The Worth-While club is composed of a group of women who assemble twice monthly to study the constitution of the United States and the history of the states, according to national number.

A study of the executive department of the constitution is being made, embracing the official office of the vice president, how elected, his duties, salary, etc., how many vice presidents have become presidents and other facts.

A short history of South Carolina was read in turn by members, beginning with the party of Spaniards who landed in the year 1520. The history showed that forty-two years later an expedition was sent out from France to found a colony for the persecuted Huguenots. After a great deal of suffering they were rescued by an English ship and taken to England. It was found that a charter was granted to South Carolina April 3, 1663, and discontented planters from the island of Barbadoes and French Protestants soon built up a flourishing colony.

A sketch of each of the lives of the eighth state, including John Rutlege, Charles Pinckney, Charles Cotesworth Pickney and Pierce Butler was read by Mrs. Gaston Haskins.

"The Model Charter," written by John Locke, was read by Mrs. George Moody. The poem was read by Mrs. Oscar Ragland. "How He Saved St. Philip," written by Mrs. Strassbury. The "Edict of Nantes" was read by Mrs. A. G. Helmer and the famous South Carolina magnolia gardens, Clemson college and John C. Calhoun home were discussed, led by Mrs. R. A. McMurry, who spent her early life in that vicinity.

The next meeting will be held with Mrs. E. G. Marchman September 9, 10 o'clock. The state will be New Hampshire, the ninth and the state that clinched the constitution.

W. C. T. U. Originator Of National Movement

By M. Frances Meadors Burghard.

As originators of the national prohibition movement the national W. C. T. U. has entered the political fight this fall to impress on the people of the United States one fact; that prohibition is the best method of dealing with the liquor traffic.

National prohibition and the 18th amendment owes its origin to a proclamation by Mrs. Lillian M. N. Stevens, then national president, who called on congress in 1910 to make America dry in ten more years.

What Wets Want.

"No matter what the wets may say in their arguments in this campaign," says Mrs. Ella A. Boole, national president of the Woman's Christian Temperance union, "what they want is a return to hard liquor. They are working up a sentiment which they believe will sweep the country and result in a repeal of all liquor laws. That they are sadly mistaken is evidenced by the fact that outside of the state of New York and a few eastern cities the country is not at all excited about the wets' loud call for a return to the days of legalized liquor.

"The W. C. T. U. will exert itself to the utmost this fall to get a representative dry vote and thus show the country that the underlying sentiment of the United States is largely dry."

Call From W. C. T. U. President.

Mrs. Boole has issued a call to American voters to stand by our youth who have been made subjects of slanderous propaganda by wet politicians claiming that the young men and young women of America are engaged in a prolonged drinking orgy, by voting for dry candidates in the coming election.

"There has been no cheaper trick in all American politics than this false picturing of youth," said Mrs. Boole, "No meaner political slander has ever been invented than this business of rubbing smut on the boys and girls by the liquor interests and their friends.

"The American public has been treated to several graphic demonstrations of the untruth of the wet slander," continued the leader of the friends of youth. "Ten thousand young people marched in protest against this accusation in Atlanta, Ga.; a college executive, carried away by the excitement of the occasion, testified before the senate judiciary committee that students were drinking to excess and when he returned to his friends the students made him publicly disown every word he had said; a poll of American colleges shows a big majority of young men and women seriously in favor of prohibition, and only an inconsequential percentage in favor of a return to beer and wine. Charges that the every day lives of high school boys and girls have degenerated into drunken orgies have been investigated and found false. This nation is basically sound and the attempt by politicians to survey the country through a wet key-hole has produced the usual results that key-hole operators obtain.

"We know more about boys and girls than the wet politicians whose appetite has taken the place of judgment, conscience, or allegiance to the constitution. We declare unequivocably that the young people of this country, our own boys and girls, are clean, fine, upstanding, loyal patriots, of whom we are all proud.

"Poor parental authority, not prohibition, has given rise to the cabaret fringe of gilded youth. But the proper solution is to make liquor inaccessible, not to modify the laws so that drink will be more easily obtained.

"We intend to support only those candidates who do not try to climb into office by blackening the reputation of future America.

"We ask the voters of this country to repudiate the wet arguments, to support the constitution of the United States, and to carry as a united slogan, 'Stand by Our Youth.'"

Call for State Convention.

The 43rd annual convention of the Georgia Woman's Christian Temperance union will be held in the First Methodist church in Gainesville, October 26, 27, 28, 1926.

Members of the state executive committee, chairmen of standing committees and members emeritus of the state W. C. T. U., are members ex-officio of the convention and are duty bound to attend unless providentially hindered.

In addition to these each local union is entitled to one delegate for every 25 paid members; each young people's branch the same, and each local Loyal Temperance Legion is entitled to one delegate for every 50 paid members.

The amended constitution, recently adopted, makes the local presidents members of the executive committee, and they should be present. If any local president should be unable to attend she should appoint an alternate, who will take her place on the executive committee.

Any college in the state doing temperance work through a committee may be represented by a chaperon, the chairman of the committee, and one delegate for every 100 students.

Our comrades in Gainesville are preparing to welcome us with open arms; and though we must abide by our own law passed after full discussion in the open meeting last year, that delegates will pay their board, the session will be short, and the terms made by Gainesville hotels liberal.

Let us have a full delegation, and let us be much in prayer that God's blessing may rest upon the convention. (Signed) Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, president; Mrs. Marvin Williams, vice president; Mrs. W. G. Cotton, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Lelia A. Dillard, recording secretary; Miss Josephine Hammond, treasurer.

Appreciation for Fort Land.

In the next issue after the meting of the Georgia Educational association in Macon, the following extract appeared in an editorial in The Georgia W. C. T. U. Bulletin:

"A program for the observance of Temperance day will be published in the Georgia Teachers' Manual right away by Mr. Fort E. Land, state superintendent of education, under whose administration the educational system of the state has made such wonderful progress during the year that he received the heartiest indorsement by the convention."

At a meeting of the executive committee of the fifth W. C. T. U. district on August 3, 1926, in the home of the W. C. T. U. district president, Mrs. O. L. Taylor, 1343 Highland avenue, Atlanta,

"A resolution of appreciation was voted to State Superintendent Fort E. Land for including in the new Teacher's Manual a program for Temperance day in schools. During the tenure of office of the former superintendent, this was never done, and the law requiring the program in schools was not observed, except in certain sections where the W. C. T. U. furnished the programs, or the teachers themselves prepared a program."

Atlanta Woman's Club Plans New Features of Annual Bazaar

The great feature of the mammoth bazaar, which is an annual event of the Atlanta Woman's club, will be arranging the booths to represent the various states of the union, which will contest for a prize for the most attractive and artistically arranged booth. Other features will be concerts and department exhibits.

Mrs. John R. Hornady, first vice president of the Woman's club, is general chairman of the bazaar and will be assisted by Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, president and exofficio member of the committee, and 25 or more active and interested club members will form the central committee.

Aside from the magnificent display of articles of every description that will be furnished at this time, the committee will arrange attractive concerts in connection with the bazaar.

Mrs. D. F. Stevenson will have a beautiful booth, representing North Carolina; Mrs. E. M. Helbig will arrange an Ohio booth; Mrs. J. A. Carlisle and Mrs. James R. Little will have an attractive Alabama booth; Mrs. J. M. Manry will represent Virginia; Mrs. Seth Mellen will arrange a Kentucky booth, and Florida will have an able representative.

The state booths will conduct an interesting contest, the one displaying the most beautiful articles and the most attractive booth will receive an appropriate prize, while the club department booths will enter into another contest for the best exhibit.

The central committee will include Mrs. Hornady, general chairman; Mrs. Price-Smith, Mrs. Norman Sharp, Mrs. George Ripley, Mrs. Wilmer Moore, Mrs. D. F. Stevenson, Mrs. E. V. Carter, Mrs. George Turner, Mrs. T. G. Delph, Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, Mrs. E. M. Helbig, Mrs. J. A. Carlisle, Mrs. J. M. Manry, Mrs. Seth Mellen, Mrs. Norman Pool, Mrs. W. F. Melton, Mrs. Irving Thomas, Mrs. Alice Taylor, Mrs. J. S. Springer, Mrs. Arthur Hazzard, Mrs. J. R. Lee, Mrs. Joel Hunter, Mrs. Dun Wylie, Mrs. W. D. Williamson, Mrs. Eva Corrigan, Mrs. Delos Hill, Mrs. Ben Simcox, Mrs. Spencer Atkinson and others.

The committee will hold its initial meeting early in September at which time all details will be discussed and plans will be consummated for the greatest bazaar ever held in the city. All members of the club having lived in other states besides Georgia will be invited to take part in making their own state booth the prize winner in the contest, and if they will notify Mrs. Hornady, chairman, or Mrs. Price-Smith, president of the club, their names will be registered with their state committees.

NISLEY'S Beautiful Shoes

38 WHITEHALL STREET

MAGNETIC!

"Amazon"

Fashion issues a Reptilian edict for Fall. Nisley answers with Alligator Calf, a faithful reproduction of the Jungle's finest specimens. "Amazon" with its Paris heel and broad ankle strap is one of "The Avenue's" smartest shoes for Autumn. This is just one of the scores of new Fall patterns now on display. There's a style for every "type" at Nisley's.

PHENOMINAL as has been the initial success of Nisley's Beautiful Shoes, many of the stores are now virtually doubling their first year's business. The first buyers are coming back and bringing their friends along with them —an eloquent tribute to the character of a worthy product.

Why do they come back? What is the magnet that draws them to Nisleys? Every woman has her own individual reason, of course, but let us define briefly the outstanding characteristics of the shoes and service that have set a new standard of excellence and value in America.

First of all, they fit perfectly—and are carried in a range of sizes from 2½ to 9—AAA to D. They are authentic in style to the last degree. They are built of materials which insure the maximum in wear and are presented and fitted to the foot in an atmosphere of refinement by trained shoe men of the highest caliber.

Thirty Doorways to the Maker's House!

The Nisley Plan of direct distribution makes possible (at $5 a pair) all of the satisfying elements that have endeared Nisley's Beautiful Shoes to the feminine hearts of America. A plan that has won the admiration of the country's foremost geniuses and pronounced by them—the last word in the scientific elimination of unnecessary costs.

In the best shopping districts of America's Principal Cities you will find Nisley's stores—operated by gentlemen trained in the art of serving women courteously and efficiently. Nisley's Beautiful Shoes are sold by the same people who make them and therein lies the supreme advantage to the wearer. One Price, One Profit, One Policy.

"Old Midway"

In the center of the Georgia coast lies old Liberty county, the real cradle of American liberty in the province. It was so named because of the independence of the hardy pioneers in resisting the English stamp act in advance of any other portion of the province, and even in the face of Tory opposition and a half-hearted compromising attitude of other parishes where the fires of American liberty did not burn so strongly.

Liberty county, much like Canaan of old, had its charms of scenic beauty, the excellent character of its lands, and its prospects for development heralded abroad to such an extent that a company of persons who had migrated from Dorchester, New England, and settled on the northeast bank of the Ashley river, about 18 miles from Charleston, in May, 1752, sent three "spies" to inspect the land, like Joshua, Caleb and their companions had been sent into Canaan. The three brought back a goodly report and the council of Georgia granted the emigrants 31,950 acres of land surrounding Old Midway, so called from its supposed equal distance from the Oeechee and Altamaha rivers.

"On the 5th of December, 1752, Benjamin Baker and family, Samuel Bacon and family, arrived at Midway and proceeded to form a settlement. Soon after Messrs. Parmenus Way, William Baker, John Elliott, John Winn, Edward Sumner and John Quarterman arrived and began to settle. Finding a general disposition in the people to remove, the Rev. Mr. Osgood went into the new settlement in March, 1754, and the whole church and society gradually collected and settled there."

Thus began Old Midway colony and church settlement which has given to Georgia and the nation many noted publicists, historians, foreign missionaries, revolutionary generals, governors, scientists and authors.

Many of the colonists at Midway had their summer residences at Sunbury, just 10 miles east on the coast, and which city at that time was a flourishing port situated on a bold bluff, with imposing wharves and docks. Immediately south of Sunbury can still be seen in the woods and thickets the remains of the earthen bastions, moats and walls of the old fort used to defend the town against the siege by the British. The old fort, named Fort Morris, was captured by the invaders and called Fort George after King George, and on its recapture by the colonists was given its former name. It was from this fort that Colonel McIntosh sent to the British commander the daring response to his demand for surrender, "Come and take it."

Eminent Citizens.

From the earliest settlement of Liberty county its people paid much attention to education, culture, religion and science. In 1752, the year of the founding of the settlement, the Medway and Newport Library society (named from two important rivers of this section) was formed and up to 1849 this library contained 700 volumes in a more or less indifferent state of preservation.

Among the eminent men who have come from this old settlement and are buried in the churchyard there might be mentioned Generals James Scriven and Daniel Stewart (an ancestor of the late ex-President Theodore Roosevelt), who did valiant service in the revolutionary war and in whose memory congress several years ago erected a magnificent obelisk in the center of Old Midway cemetery. Within the walls of the cemetery, which is being preserved by the Colonial Dames as a real shrine of American liberty and independence, lie the remains of Button Gwinnett and Lyman Hall, two of the signers of the Declaration of Independence; the Rev. Abiel Holmes, father of the illustrious author, the late Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, and grandfather of the present Chief Justice Holmes, of the United States supreme court bench; the father of the illustrious LeConte brothers, Joseph, the geologist, and John, the botanist; Rev. J. S. R. Axon (lately spelled Axson), forebear of the first wife of the late lamented Woodrow Wilson; Major Moses Jones, aid to General Lachlan McIntosh, who was cut in two by a cannon ball while planting the standard of his country on the ramparts at Savannah; Audley Maxwell, who was a member o the first general assembly of Georgia, which met in Savannah on the 15th day of January, 1751.

Liberty county, especially that portion of it immediately surrounding old Midway church and involving the colony here, was the scene of many important events during the revolutionary war. Perhaps an event of greatest significance, ranking along with the act of the Boston tea party, the Mecklenburg declaration and the Wilmington, N. C., protest against the landing of the British stamp papers, was the dissent of the deputies from Liberty, then St. John's parish, was the election of Dr. Lyman Hall as a delegate to the Continental congress, with the expression of protest voiced by the parish against the despicable tax acts.

At this period this parish possessed nearly one-third of the entire wealth of the province of Georgia, and the following eulogy was pronounced on it and its inhabitants, who were remarkable for their upright and independent character: "Alone she stood, a Pharos of Liberty in England's most loyal province, renouncing every fellowship that savoured not of freedom, and refusing every luxury which contributed to ministerial coffers. Proud spot of Georgia's soil!"

General Daniel Stewart's biography recounts the fact that the decided position thus taken by these brave people made them the especial target of British animosity, and the enemy laid waste there as nowhere else, several severe engagements taking place in this county, the British following the etactics of the Indians in many of their fights, notable among them being that of Bulltown swamp, in which fell wounded Colonel John Baker, Captain Cooper and William Goulding when they were ambuscaded. About a mile and a half south of the church General Scriven was mortally wounded when he also fell into an ambuscade.

An interesting bit of history, about which has been woven a bit of fiction and which would make a most engrossing moving picture scenario, is taken from McCall's History of Georgia:

"On the 4th of June a party of British officers were engaged to dine with Thomas Young, at Belfast, on the River Medway, to celebrate the king's birthday; Captain Spencer, who commanded an American privateer, got intelligence of the intended feast and prepared to surprise them. He proceeded up the river in the evening and landed with twelve men, and between 8 and 9 o'clock at night Spencer entered the house and made Colonel Cruger and the party of officers prisoners of war. As Spencer intended to carry off some negroes, he kept his prisoners under guard until morning, when he received their paroles and permitted them to return to Sunbury. Colonel Cruger was soon after exchanged for Colonel John McIntosh, who had been taken prisoner at Brier Creek."

A stroll through the old cemetery at Midway church will prove a real treat to the student of colonial history, for on the stombs can be read a story of a section rich in martyrs to the cause o American liberty. It is indeed one of America's greatest shrines.

Bridge-Tea Honors Lovely College Girls.

Miss Sarah Hoshall entertained at a bridge-tea Friday afternoon at her home on Linwood avenue in compliment to Miss Betty Branon, who will attend Greensboro college, Greensboro, N. C.; Miss Margaret Ledbetter, who will attend the Florida State College for Women, Tallahassee, Fla., and Miss Allie Stephens, who will resume her studies at Wesleyan college, Macon, Georgia.

The reception rooms were beautifully decorated with yellow and white fall flowers. The tea table was covered with a handsome hand embroidered cover and a basket of garden flowers graced the center of the table.

After the game tea was served at the individual tables.

Miss Hoshall was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. T. L. Hoshell.

The guests included Miss Branon, Miss Ledbetter, Miss Stephens, Miss Virginia Boyer, Miss Eilleen McKinney, Miss Mary Claire Powell, Miss Dorothy Perkins, Miss Virginia Branch, Miss Louise Brewer, Miss Mary Louise Wilcox, Miss Grace Darnell, Miss Sarah Hoshall and Mrs. Oliver Coleman.

Miss Helen Ziegler To Reside in New York.

Miss Helen Ziegler will leave in a few days for New York, where she will study for a degree in bachelor of science at Columbia university. For the past three years Miss Ziegler has been superintendent of nurses at the Piedmont hospital and by her charming manner and efficiency has endeared herself to not only the faculty at the hospital but to the hundreds of friends from all over the state.

At a recent party tendered by the student nurses of the hospital, Miss Ziegler was the honoree and was presented with a handsome beaded bag.

Mrs. Lewis Gives Luncheon Party.

Mrs. Bessie McIntosh Lewis was hostess at a luncheon party Saturday at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel in compliment to Mrs. W. O. Tichenor, of Tampa, Fla., the guest of her mother, Mrs. S. J. Jackson, on Gordon street.

Luncheon was served in the Pompeiian grill room. The center of the attractive luncheon table was a vase of pastel shaded flowers which served as the only decoration. Following the luncheon the guests attended a matinee.

Covers were placed for Mrs. Lewis, Mrs. Tichenor, Mrs. Corrie Alley, Mrs. Donald Fairbanks, Miss Leola Baldwin, Miss Clyde Thompson, Miss Mary Yarbrough, Miss Gladys Mewborn, Miss Gladys Lane and Miss Marie Chambers.

Miss Milliren Weds Mr. Tubb.

Announcement is made of the marrage of Miss Mary Milliren, of Oklahoma City, to M. D. Tubb, of this city, which was solemnized Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock by Rev. N. O. Bray.

Mrs. W. L. Curry, of Oklahoma City, the bride's sister was the only attendant.

Mr. Tubb and his bride left for a short wedding trip to the mountains of North Carolina. On their return they will be at home at 453 North Boulevard.

Miss Roberts Weds Russell P. Hosch.

Of cordial interest to a wide circle of friends throughout the state was the marriage of Miss Corinne Roberts, of Braselton, to Russell P. Hosch, of Hoschton, which was solemnized Wednesday morning at 9:30 o'clock at the First Christian church of Winder. The ceremony was performed by the pastor, Rev. John H. Wood.

The bride, who is the daughter of William W. Roberts, of Braselton, is an attractive young woman of charming personality and wide popularity. She is a graduate of the fifth district A. and M. school and of the Georgia State College for Women. Since her graduation, she has taken an active part in educational work.

Mr. Hosch belongs to a prominent family of north Georgia. He is the son of the late Russell A. and Tabitha Hill Hosch, pioneer citizens for whom the town of Hoschton was named. He received his education at the University of Georgia. He was in service during the recent world war and is prominent in Masonic circles.

After their wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Hosch will be at home in Hoschton.

Y. W. A. Honors Miss Rauschenberg.

In lieu of the semi-monthly business meeting of the Y. W. A. of the Third Baptist church, the members gave Miss Ruth Rauschenberg, president, a miscellaneous shower shortly before her departure for Cincinnati, where she will be temporarily located. A light supper was served as was customary at these meetings and several games were played and enjoyed. Many beautiful gifts were received by Miss Rauschenberg.

Among those present were Misses Ruth Rauschenberg, Hilma Cole, Grace Ridley, Melba Mote, Edith Tarrant, Thelma Miles, Lula Peeples, Louise Robinson, Louise McCalla, Franke Echols and Mrs. C. A. Ridley, Mrs. R. L. Baker, Mrs. C. S. Morris, Mrs. Chambers.

Miss Kight Weds Don A. Drake.

The marriage of Miss Helen Kight and Don Ashley Drake was an event of Saturday, August 21, in the First Presbyterian church at Chattanooga, Tennessee.

Mrs. Drake is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilmor Fisher Kight, of Decatur, Ga.

Mr. Drake, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Drake, of Cleveland, Ohio, is with the B. F. Goodrich company as auditor for the southeastern district.

While in Atlanta they are making their home at the Granada apartments.

Swimming Tests Given to Juniors At Woman's Club

Many members of the junior department of the Atlanta Woman's club participated in the swimming tests held Wednesday morning in the pool.

Those qualifying to win tadpole symbol, which is the first series of feats, were Claudia Smaw, Mary Willingham, Betty Wilson and Carol Jane Farnham. The girls to win the second test for fish symbol were Claudia Smaw and Betty Wilson.

Skill was required in various ways, different strokes, floating, diving and endurance. Life saving methods are being taught and the girls passing these tests will have a very clear, concise knowledge of all methods in swimming, acquired through practical demonstration.

Miss Isabel Spring is the director and is herself an experienced swimmer.

Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, president of the club, stresses to the junior membership the importance of taking advantage of this opportunity to perfect themselves in swimming under the supervision of Miss Spring. All members from nine years old are eligible. There will be special events for older girls and the boys.

At the end of the season a cup will be offered for competition. Eligibility requires contestants to be members of the junior department and to have passed the three required tests.

Mrs. M. D. Farnham, chairman of junior department, and Miss Spring will be at the club every Wednesday morning between 10 and 11 o'clock when the tests will be given.

Last Word in Parisian Modes Described by Atlanta Stylist

BY ANNIE LOU HARDY.

The news that skirts will be worn short as ever, and that red is the prime favorite as far as coloring goes, comes direct from Paris, especially for the information of Atlanta women! And what feminine heart does not thrill to the "last word" from the smart Parisian coutouriers?

That the news comes direct from Miss Annie May Gallagher, eminent stylist of M. Rich & Brothers company, is positive proof that it is the "last word," for Miss Gallagher has been advising and gowning Atlanta women in the latest modes for many moons. So successful has she been in her chosen field that her exclusive taste has come to be synonymous with smartness in ladies' wear.

Famous Houses.

Of the famous French houses with which one is familiar, and of the fall openings with which Miss Gallagher has just finished, she writes: "They have been most interesting, and I feel that we have gotten some very lovely things. My favorites this season are Chernit, Louis Boulanger and Patou, but we have purchased from Lanvin, Lucien Lelong and a few others also. Styles are not so different from last season, but just enough to make them interesting. For the week-end, we went down to Deauville and saw some very lovely styles there."

Interesting bits gleaned from a recent letter inform one that beaded dresses for evening wear seem to be the thing, and that great stress is laid on sports dresses for daytime wear. Patou shows lovely sports costumes with sweater and coat to match, making a combination three-piece suit which is also lovely for day wear. And with a thought for Palm Beach habitues, Miss Gallagher says, "I have purchased some extremely lovely two-piece knitted things in a variety of marvelous colorings, which were made in Switzerland."

Rich's Salon.

"Black lace dresses, too, are very good," she says. These are not the regular black lace dresses, but wonderful, simple lines, and yet entirely new in silhouette."

Shopping has not been easy in Paris with the franc changing in value every day, but Miss Gallagher, with a corps of buyers, will return from Europe at an early date, bringing with her the loveliest of creations to delight the feminine heart. Complete costumes for every occasion, from milady's early morning shopping tour to the most elaborate ball of the evening, will be found in the French salon at Rich's, with Miss Gallagher always at hand to advise about the correctness and becomingness of each individual gown.

School of Oratory Plans Recital.

The Atlanta School of Oratory and Expression, 402 Wesley Memorial Church building, is planning a very interesting and instructive program for Friday morning, September 3, at 11 o'clock.

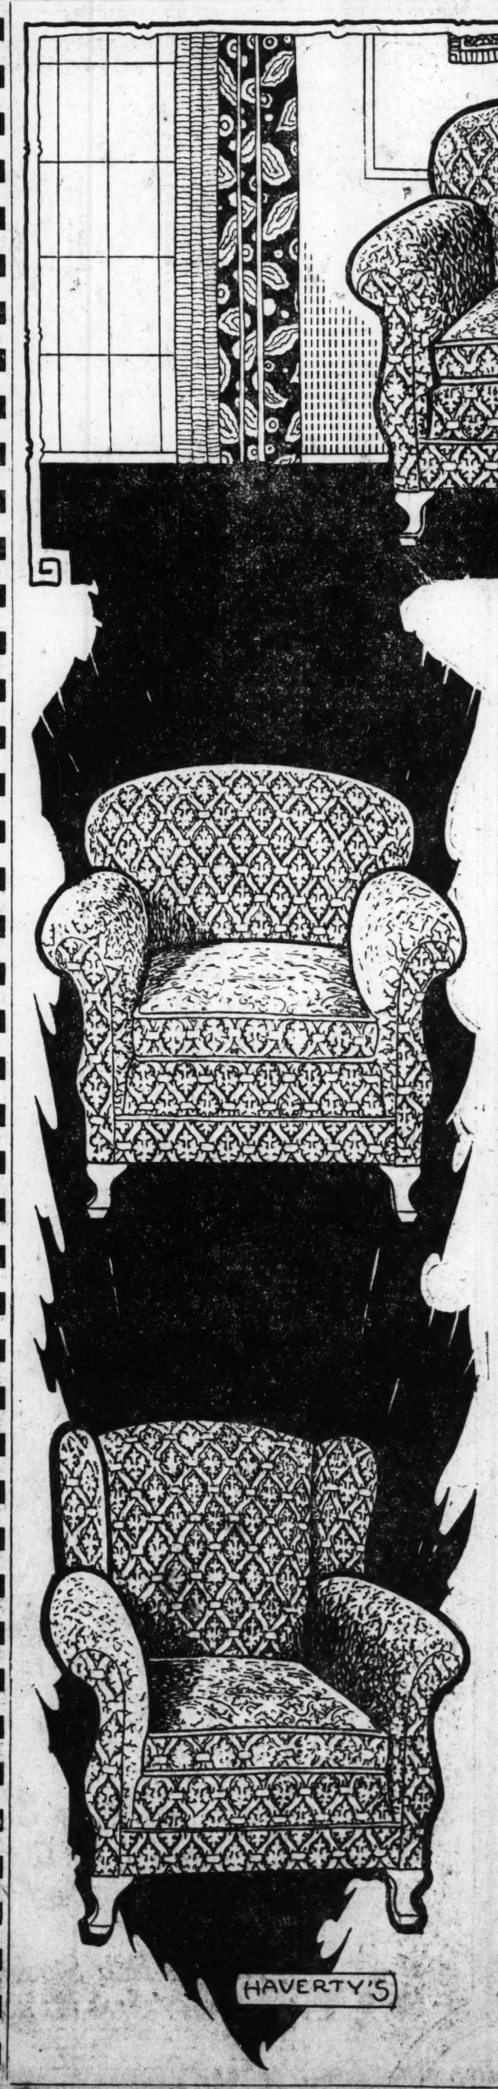

The program will consist of story-telling, stories, Bible reading, extemporaneous speech, impersonation of a dramatic scene and readings.

The public is cordially invited.

Miss Clark To Give Tea.

Miss Mildred Clark will entertain a group of young matrons at tea Monday afternoon in compliment to Mrs. Lane Stokes who is visiting her parents, Dr. and Mrs. W. O. Shelton, and Mrs. Jack Langford who was formerly Miss Virginia Flynt, of Griffin, and who has come to Atlanta to reside.

Six guests have been invited to meet these charming honor guests.

Keely's School Accessories

It's not a bit too soon for Mothers to plan the school wardrobes for the little Tots and the Junior Miss. Here are a few of the needs helpfully priced.

New School Hats
$1.98 to $8.95

Chic little felt hats just like the grown-ups wear, in miniature styles, yet the same new fall colors. Turned up and rolled down brims — adorable and smartly becoming for girls from 2 to 16 years.

Special Sweaters

All wool coat sweaters, belted and trimmed with two pockets. In red, coco, tan, brown, copen, plain or with a tiny trim of a deep shade of coloring. Kindergarten sizes, 2 to 6 years.

For campus wear or to school on chilly Autumn mornings—an all wool sweater in the smart coat model. We have a large group of patterns and colors for your selection. 6 to 14 years.

Bloomers
49c and 59c

Girls' bloomers of plain or striped lingette, with elastic band at waist and knee. In flesh or white. Sizes 2 to 6 years, 49c. Sizes 8 to 16 years, 59c. A good value.

Rain Capes

Bestyette rain cape in blue and red—just the thing for the very young lady of the family to wear to school on rainy mornings and end the worry and bother of losing the umbrella. 2 to 14 years.

"Slickers"
$5.95 to $6.95

For the college set and the high school miss a "slicker" will be the smart thing for "le sporting" wear on rainy days and to football games. Sport collars of corduroy with leather straps. Black, green and blue.

Body Waists
49c

These new body waists are of a very good weight material and will prove most serviceable for school wear. In all sizes from 2 to 14 years.

1-pc Pajamas
$1.25

One-pc. crepe pajamas for the youngest young miss of 2 to 6 years, in dainty floral patterns. A variety of colors to choose from.

2-pc Pajamas

Pajamas have come into mode for daytime as well as nighttime wear—two-piece styles in floral patterns are just the fashion for sorority tea parties for the school girl. 8 to 14 years.

Children's Drawers

"Home Beautiful" Show Experts Here To Build Home and Establish Business

MR. AND MRS. THOMAS LEASE DECORATING DEPARTMENT

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Thomas, nationally known as "Home Beautiful" experts.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Thomas, of Richmond, Va., nationally known for their work in promotion of "Home Beautiful" exhibitions in all sections of the United States, have come to Atlanta to make it their home and their place of business. They have leased the interior decorating department of Stephen Philibosian, Inc., 581 Peachtree street.

For more than four years now they have been regular visitors in a number of the largest cities of the country. Everywhere they have examined business possibilities and home advantages.

"We have decided to cast our lot with Atlanta," said Mrs. Thomas, Saturday. "In other cities we have been offered openings and home sites seemed desirable, but when we weighed all advantages Atlanta promised more.

Atlanta Offers Most.

"We have come to Atlanta because it seems to offer us more than any other section of the country. The city possesses numerous advantages not enjoyed by other sections. It has a strategic position from a business standpoint, it has the finest all-year climate in the country, its future possibilitiess are unbounded, all indications are that its growth has only started. From a home standpoint it is excelled by no place of its size in the country. Atlanta's beautiful residences are the talk of other cities. Its suburban developments offer unlimited recreational advantages.

"In order to settle down in one city we have been obliged to give up our 'Home Beautiful' exhibition work, but we have been able to capitalize our experience in our new line.

"In our connection with Stephen Philibosian, Inc., we will have even a wider range than we have had in home exhibitions. From now on it will never be necessary for the owner of a home to go to New York or Paris for any kind of interior decorations. We will have them in stock and if anything is lacking we will be able to obtain it in the very shortest possible time. We expect to provide for the wants of a large number of people and of organizations, little wants and big ones. There will be no contract too large for us to handle. Hotel contracts for decorations will be among the business sought, and this will not be confined to Atlanta but will cover the south, for we believe our business will be the largest in this entire section."

The Bigger, the Better.

"The bigger the contract the better," said Mr. Thomas. "Mrs. Thomas will drape an elephant if somebody is there to pay the bill. And if a customer is not satisfied with selections for interior decorating shown in Atlanta, Mrs. Thomas will go to New York or Paris, if necessary, to obtain what is needed."

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas came to Atlanta three years ago on invitation of The Constitution to present a "Home Beautiful" exhibition here and now have been in charge of three shows. They state that their location in Atlanta is in reality due to The Constitution.

Mr. Thomas was, up to a few years ago, connected with the newspaper business, as head of the advertising department of the Times Dispatch of Richmond, Va. His wife was a noted decorator.

About four years ago he became interested in the "Home Beautiful" project and decided that there was a paying business and one of immense cultural benefit to the people of the United States in showing home owners how to pack the greatest amount of value, comfort and enjoyment into the money expended for their homes.

Since that time he and his wife have been giving shows in 25 metropolitan centers. These included, Boston, Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse, San Antonio, St. Petersburg, Orlando, Tampa, Atlanta, Nashville, Memphis, Richmond, Louisville, Indianapolis, Charlotte and others.

Leaders in Their Line.

In this work they have become known as the leading home decorators in the country, and their advise has been eagerly sought. They have become acquainted with the output of all the large factories, and perhaps better than any other persons, know how to get quickly just the kind of article that is wanted by a person or for some particular decorating feature.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas are living at the Georgian Terrace pending completion of plans for erecting their own home here. Having furnished so many homes during their travels, only to see them dismantled after a few weeks, they are now determined to build and furnish one that will last. They claim that the only way to get the right kind of a residence is to build one to suit, not to suit yourself to one somebody else has built. As soon as the home plans are completed they will be joined by their family.

Husband and wife, by the way, are partners in the new business. The firm name reads: "R. H. and B. M Thomas."

League of Women Voters Stages Series of Pre-Election Rallies

The Atlanta League of Women Voters staged the first of a series of pre-election rallies at the Chamber of Commerce Friday, at which time the candidates for governor and the legislature were heard and questionnaires sent by the league to candidates were read. The second of this series will be held in the assembly hall of the chamber of commerce from 12 to 1 o'clock Tuesday, August 31. At this time the other policy determining candidates for office will be heard in 10-minute talks each. Among those invited to speak are Senator Walter F. George and Judge Richard B. Russell, candidates for the United States senate, and Mayor Walter A. Sims, Hon. Leslie J. Steele and Hon. William D. Upshaw, candidates for congress.

On Wednesday at the same time and place (September 1) featuring the third rally of the league, invited to speak will be: Hon. J. J. Brown, Hon. Charles A. Stewart and Hon. Eugene Talmadge, candidates for commissioner of agriculture; Hon. N. A. Ballard and Hon. Fort E. Land, candidates for superintendent of schools; Hon. A. J. Woodruff, Hon. W. R. Frier, Hon. George W. Lankford and Hon. Calvin W. Parker, candidates for public service commissioners.

League officers and members will be present at all times to explain the work and policies of the league and to answer any questions. Banners, literature, questionnaires and various other works of the league will be on exhibition.

Campaign to Continue.

In September the Atlanta League of Women Voters will continue the campaign to get out the vote for the fall elections. This campaign is a sequel to the league's registration week held earlier in the year. For six years the Atlanta league has been steadily increasing its efforts to get out the vote and this year the strength of the entire organization will be thrown into the campaign. The big aim of the league is to arouse the citizen to his and her duties and responsibilities as a voter. The Atlanta league is receiving wonderful cooperation from the 12 ward leagues in the city and from the civic organizations to make this campaign a success.

The Atlanta league has entered the contest, with other Georgia towns and cities, to win the "voters' prize"—a $200 cash prize with a beautiful silver vase, offered by the Georgia league to the city or town getting out the largest number of voters over a past election of like kind. The success of the get out the vote campaign will be a determining factor in its chance of winning this prize. Should the Atlanta league be so fortunate as to win it, the $200 would go to the ward securing the largest proportionate increase over the 1924 city primary.

Rummage Sale.

Once a year, in the fall, the Atlanta league puts on a mammoth rummage sale to help raise the league's budget. This event will occur this year Saturday, October 2, and the rummage committee has been working steadily for some weeks in an effort to make it the most successful yet staged by this organization. Members are requested to call Walnut 8264 and rummage will be quickly collected. Old phonograph records and cooking utensils, in addition to regular rummage, are especially desirable.

Ward Meetings.

The Second Ward league recently held a meeting at the home of Mrs. F. M. Sisk, with Mrs. George A. Matson, parliamentarian of the Atlanta league, as guest of honor and speaker. Mrs. G. L. Wentworth, chairman, was assisted in the program by Mrs. J. E. Cumbea, first vice chairman.

The Third Ward League of Women Voters held its monthly class in citizenship at league headquarters, 366-367 Candler Annex, Thursday, August 26, at 3 o'clock. Mrs. R. L. Turman, president of the Atlanta league, gave a talk to the class on election laws, rules, etc. In the absence of the ward chairman, Mrs. J. B. Morgan, Mrs. M. S. Moser, first vice chairman, presided.

The Seventh Ward League of Women Voters will present an educational and social program at the Wren's Nest in West End Tuesday, August 31, at 3 o'clock. Refreshments will be served and an interesting program has been arranged. Invitations have been sent to all active members of the ward and to past members and all are cordially invited to bring their friends. Mrs. R. L. Turman, president of the Atlanta league, will discuss phases of the elections and have with her the answers to the questionnaires sent by the league to the candidates running for offices to be elected in September. "This is a splendid opportunity for members who have not yet heard the candidates state their platforms, to hear how they stand on certain issues," says Mrs. A. L. Sloan, Seventh ward chairman. Miss Eleanore Raoul, executive director of the Atlanta league, will speak on the new charter for Atlanta and will explain the mammoth petition to be circulated by the league. Mrs. Guy L. Sink, executive secretary for the Atlanta league, will briefly discuss the get out the vote week and the importance of wholehearted ward co-operation to insure its success.

Woman's Civic Club of West End Indorses Endowment Fund

The Woman's Civic club of West End indorsed the Passie Fenton Ottley scholarship endowment fund for Tallulah Falls Industrial school at the regular business meeting held at the clubhouse Wednesday afternoon. Many members expressed appreciation of Mrs. Ottley and her loyal support of this wonderful school in the mountains of north Georgia. Indorsement was also given the city beautiful movement sponsored by the civic committee of the Atlanta Woman's club.

The executive board of the club met at 2:30 o'clock, at which time the vice president, Mrs. Fred Stewart, presided and announced tentative plans for the Bible class to be held during the winter.

Mrs. P. D. Johnson, chairman of the literary committee, announced programs arranged through December, the first meeting to be held Wednesday, October 6.

October Carnival.

Mrs. T. S. Sells was appointed chairman with Mrs. Henry Sanders co-chairman, for the annual carnival to be held some time in October. After the summer inactivities this will be in the form of a home-coming event, when all members and their families and friends will meet to make merry. Further plans will be announced soon.

Mrs. Myers Loveless, chairman of grounds, stated that her committee will entertain at a bridge-luncheon early in September at the clubhouse, the date to be arranged later.

At the suggestion of Mrs. R. Taylor Connally, chairman of ways and means, the various committees will raise funds through individual effort instead of the annual bazar. Mrs. Connally expects to call a special meeting of all chairmen to discuss these plans at a very early date.

The club will assist the Service Star legion on Forget-me-not day, September 25. Mrs. Tully Brooke, chairman of hospital, announced 1,600 bandages made for Grady hospital during the month of August, also magazines and flowers sent to Wards M and A.

Open House.

Mrs. C. C. Berry invited the members to the regular Monday evening open house affairs. These are very enjoyable and serve as a means of bringing the members and their husbands and friends together.

A warm letter of greeting was read from the vice president, Mrs. Jessie Manry, who has been spending the summer in Virginia.

Mrs. H. B. Nicholson, chairman of scholarships, stated that there were still two scholarships open, one through Mrs. Mabelle Wall and Miss Ardis Colby, in piano and class work, and one in the Atlanta College of Pharmacy, through W. A. Medlock. As these scholarships are competitive, Mrs. Nicholson urges all candidates to send in their applications immediately.

Ms Traylor To Be Bride of Mr. McClellan

Bearing great social import and of wide interest both in the south and the east is the announcement made today of the engagement of Miss Frances Pardee Traylor to Otey McClellan, of New York city.

Miss Traylor is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George McDonald Traylor, prominent Atlanta citizens who have for many years been identified with the social, financial and civic developments of the state. She received her education at the fashionable Gunston Hall, in Washington, D. C., later specializing in designing at Parson's School of Fine and Applied Arts, New York. Since finishing school, Miss Traylor has traveled extensively in Europe, having spent the summer season of 1925 on the continent, chaperoned by her mother, Mrs. Traylor.

Possessing a vivid brunette beauty, the lovely bride-elect inherits much of her charm from her mother, the former Miss Mary Couper, daughter of the late Major and Mrs. James M. Couper, representatives of old and aristocratic families of Georgia. She is the granddaughter of the late Colonel and Mrs. John M. Traylor, of LaGrange, being a descendant on her paternal side of a long line of distinguished southerners. Though never having made a formal debut, she has been a favorite with the members of the city's younger social contingent, having also been a belle in cities of the south and east where she has visited.

Miss Traylor is the sister of Mrs. Jack Thiesen and Mrs. C. T. Dunham, of Atlanta, and Mrs. Allen Putnam, of New York.

The groom-elect is the son of Mrs. Rosa Anderson McClellan, of Memphis, and the late John Lucius McClellan, members of the well-known McClellan family of Tennessee. He claims among his distinguished ancestors James Hewey Otey, first Episcopal bishop of the diocese of Tennessee and founder of the University of the South at Sewanee. On his maternal side he is a descendant of the renowned Thomas Nelson, Jr., revolutionary patriot, war governor of Virginia and signer of the Declaration of Independence.

The young groom-elect is an honor graduate of the University of Georgia. Following his graduation he studied law at Columbia university and is engaged in the practice of law in New York, where he and his bride will make their home.

His war record is an enviable one. He was commissioned as first lieutenant in the 319th field artillery of the 82d division and was stationed at Camp Gordon for some time. Following the armistice, he was attached to the American commission to negotiate peace and served on the commissions to Rome, Vienna and Constantinople.

The wedding of Miss Traylor and Mr. McClellan will be a brilliant social event of early fall.

Miss Lewis To Wed W. Bryant Woosley.

Of cordial interest today is the announcement made by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sumner Lewis of the engagement of their daughter, Lula, to William Bryant Woosley, of Shelbyville, Tenn.

Miss Lewis is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis, and is a popular member of the younger social contingent. Her mother was formerly Miss Daisy Holliday, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Styles Holliday, this family being one of the most prominent and well-known in Georgia. Mr. Lewis is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Lewis, Sr., and is prominently identified with the business and social life of Atlanta.

Miss Lewis attended Washington seminary, where she was a popular member of the Pi Pi sorority. She possesses an attractive personality, and has been one of the most feted young girls in the college set. She is of pretty blonde type and has a vivacious and charming manner.

Mr. Woosley, who is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Woosley, of Shelbyville, Tenn., comes from a family which has long been prominent in business and social circles in Tennessee. He graduated from Webbs school in Bell Buckle, Tenn., after which he attended Georgia Tech, where he graduated last June with a B. S. degree.

He is a member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity, and is popular both in the business and social world. His mother was Miss Martha Bryant, of Tennessee.

Visitors Feted At Driving Club.

The terrace of the Piedmont Driving club, presented a scene of unusual beauty Saturday evening when many members of society with their attractive visitors assembled for the weekly dinner-dance.

Y.; Alice Stearns, Ethel Hunter, Mrs. Catherine Saunders Blackmon, James Robinson, Jr., Albert Howell III, Jack Sharp, Nesbit Marye, Richard Hull, James Johnston, Mr. Coleman, Marshall Foster and Marion Kiser.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Adair were hosts at a party in honor of Miss Marian Goldsmith, of New York.

Among others having reservations were Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Manry, Mr and Mrs. Bockover Toy, Mr. and Mrs. John Lewis Holmes, W. L. Plummer, Colonel H. C. Merriam, Colonel H. S. Wagner, H. R. Calef, J. S. May and others.

Labor Day Program At Tate Springs Hotel.

A number of interesting events have been planned for the guests of Tate Springs hotel who are remaining until after Labor day.

A swimming meet will be held at the swimming pool next Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, followed by an informal tea-dance.

At 9 o'clock Saturday evening a brilliant ball will be given in the ballroom of the hotel.

Sunday evening the Nightingale quartet will give a program of spiritual songs in the green lounge of the hotel.

Monday afternoon a number of guests spending Labor day at the hotel will take part in the Gymkahnah games, which will be played on horseback. This will be followed by diving contests at the swimming pool and an informal tea-dance.

Among the Atlanta guests at the Tate Springs hotel during the past week were Mr. and Mr. H. B. Troutman, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Walker, J. K. Ottley, Frank Adair, Holland B. Judkins, Robert Gregg, J. P. Allen, W. S. Kincaid, Miss Nan duBignon, Dudley Cowles, Miss Louise Barnwell, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Abbott, Mr. and Mrs. Ted Brine and C. G. Turner.

Lovely Fall Brides-Elect and Bride of Past Week

The lovely trio presented above includes Miss Lula Lewis (upper left), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sumner Lewis, whose engagement announced today to William Bryant Woolsey, of Shelbyville, Tenn., is of wide social interest. At the upper right is Mrs. Beaumont Davison, Jr., of New York, who until her marriage on Thursday, August 26, was Miss Mellie Zellars, of Grantville. The wedding took place at noon at the Church of the Transfiguration in New York city. The figure at the lower right is Miss Frances Pardee Traylor, beautiful young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George McDonald Traylor, whose engagement is announced today to Otey McClellan, of New York, the wedding to be a brilliant event of early fall. Collier-Daniel Wedding Plans Announced Today

Society will be interested in the announcement made today of the wedding plans of Miss Eunice Collier and Charles B. Daniel, the marriage to be a beautiful afternoon event of September 14, taking place at 4:30 o'clock at the All Saints' Episcopal church. The Rev. Dr. W. W. Memminger, rector of the church, will perform the ceremony and the occasion will assemble a large number of prominent society.

The lovely young bride-elect will be given in marriage by her father, Rawson Collier and the groom will be attended by his best man, Clayton Daniel. The ushers will include John Pickett, John Knox, Wellborn Cody and D. O. Martin.

Misses Alice Hughes, of Henderson, N. C., and Freda Smith will be the two attractive bridesmaids and the junior bridesmaid will be Miss Nancy Collier, younger sister of the bride-elect. Miss Susan Rawson Collier, another sister of the bride-elect, will act as maid of honor.

Immediately following the marriage service, Mr. Daniel and his bride will leave for an extended trip to California, returning to Atlanta to make their home.

Monday evening, September 13, Mr. and Mrs. Rawson Collier will entertain at a buffet supper at their home in Woodcrest avenue following the wedding rehearsal, the guests to include members of the bridal party and out-of-town guests.

Popular Society Belles To Be in Fashion Show.

The following group of society belles will be beautiful models in the fashion show to be presented at the city auditorium on the evening of September 14 for the benefit of the Passie Fenton Ottley Endowment fund for the Tallulah Falls Industrial school: Misses Margaret Elder, Ethel Hunter, Ellen Newell, Callie Orme, Ida Sadler, Harriet Shedden, Florence Eckford, Gates Eckford, Connie Rice, Anne Stringfellow, Telside Pratt, Louise Nelson, Maria Brown, Frances Brown, Edna Belle Raine, Helena Callaway, Boyce Lokey, Mary Rhorer, Elizabeth Thillits, Mary Middleton, Virginia Torrance, Ann Spalding, Mary Sadler, Betty Davidson, Jennie Robinson, Katherine Murphy, Marion Wolff and Mrs. Russell Mellman.

Miss Harriet Shedden is in charge of the models group and is ably assisting Mrs. Eugene Harrington, general chairman, for the entire fashion show.

Following the fashion show, a dance will be tendered those who attend the show, the same ticket admitting those who attend the show to the dance, which bids fair to be a brilliant climax to the performance.

Recent Arrivals At Grove Park.

Asheville, N. C., August 28.—The social season at the southern mountain resorts, beginning late this summer, is finding at the end of August no slackening in activity. Each day continues to bring in new contingents, as well as "repeaters," that is, visitors of the early summer who then went east or to the seashore, and are returning now for a climax to their vacation in the mountains.

Among those last at Grove Park Inn are Mr. and Mrs. George W. Connors and Miss Josephine Connors, of Birmingham, who have returned to Asheville after a week at Greenbrier White Sulphur Springs, Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Mason, of Savannah, who have returned after a week at Atlantic City; C. J. T. Mooney, editor and publisher of The Memphis Commercial-Appeal, with Mrs. Mooney; Mrs. H. P. Nelson and Miss Margaret Nelson, who spent a few days at Blowing Rock; Mr. and Mrs. Alfred C. Newell, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woodruff, William Healey and John W. Grant, Jr., of Atlanta.

Reuben Arnold and Thomas Arnold have joined Mrs. Arnold.

With the close of summer camps, Miss Mary Ann Carr and Julian Carr have joined their mother, Mrs. Clark Howell; Miss Nancy Carr and Albert Howell, III. Miss Catherine Seiberling, of Akron, Ohio, has been spending August as the guest of Miss Nancy Carr.

Mrs. Stuart Witham has joined her mother, Mrs. A. W. Calhoun.

Mrs. Alex W. Smith, Jr., has joined her mother, Mrs. Carroll Payne, and Miss Helen Smith.

Ernest Woodruff, who spent early August with Mrs. Woodruff at the Inn, has again joined Mrs. Woodruff after a business trip, and is leading in a business conference of executives of the Coca-Cola company now being held here.

Myers, Fla., who are the guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Travis, of Fayetteville, and sister, Mrs. M. C. Davis, of College Park.

The home was attractively decorated with quantities of garden flowers. Following the bridge game supper was served. Covers were placed for eight friends of the honor guests.

Fall Season Is Welcomed By Society

Though society reluctantly yields up the gay summer season, September, the first month of fall, is welcomed with renewed activity in club and social circles, plans for the future presaging busy prelude to a brilliant winter.

Attention turns first to the pretty fall brides-elect who always occupy the center of the social stage in their own right. Returning travelers who have been spending delightful summer days in old world haunts, in foreign waters, in nearby mountain resorts and watering places, are being accorded a warm welcome. Lovely school girls who are preparing to leave at an early date for distant colleges and seminaries are being showered with farewell parties galore. Out-of-town visitors, too, come in for their share of attention, with many affairs planned in their honor.

Powell-Laws Wedding.

An outstanding event of the week and one of the first of the brilliant weddings scheduled to take place in the early fall will be that of Miss Frances Powell, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Arthur Powell, to Clarence Lunsford Laws, which will be solemnized at 6 o'clock Thursday evening at the home of the bride-elect on Peachtree road. The ceremony will be performed by Dr. Robert C. Rhodes, of Emory university, and Judge Powell will give his daughter in marriage. Miss Grace Powell will be her sister's maid of honor, and Scott Johnson, of New Orleans, will act as best man. A brilliant reception will follow the ceremony, which will assemble several hundred guests.

Taking place at 6 o'clock on Wednesday will be the marriage of Miss Frances Gaillard Hanahan, of Atlanta, to William Middleton, of Charleston, S. C., which will be solemnized at the Grace Episcopal church in Charleston. The occasion will assemble a large number of prominent Atlantans, who will go over for the wedding, as well as a representative gathering of Charleston society.

Another out-of-town wedding in which Atlantans are particularly interested is that of Miss Frances Gary, of Big Spring, Texas, to Dr. Charles K. Bivings, Jr., of Atlanta. The marriage will take place Wednesday at the home of the bride-elect in Big Spring, after which Dr. Bivings will bring his bride to Atlanta to reside.

Charming Visitors.

A charming former Atlantan who is receiving a cordial welcome in the city is Mrs. George Woodruff, who left a short while ago to reside in Birmingham. She is being extensively entertained on this, her first visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde King, on Ponce de Leon avenue.

Miss Eulalie Livandois, of New Orleans, La., is receiving much attention from the members of the younger set as the guest of Miss Harriett Wynne. After Sunday, Miss Livandois will visit Miss Helen Noble at her home on Penn avenue.

Mrs. Jack Carr has as her guest at her home on Ponce de Leon avenue, Miss Orlean Bullard, of Meridian, Miss.

Mrs. George W. Connors, Miss Josephine Connors and Miss Cecil Gray Johnstone form a trio of charming Birmingham visitors who are spending some time at the Biltmore hotel.

Miss Leonard Weds Clarence W. Scudder At Home Ceremony

A marriage characterized by beauty and simplicity was that of Miss Mary Elizabeth Leonard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Baylius B. Leonard, to Clarence William Scudder. The marriage was solemnized Tuesday evening at 8:30 o'clock at the bride's home in West End. Dr. Carl A. De Vane performed the impressive ring ceremony in the presence of a large gathering of friends and relatives.

The entire home was beautifully decorated with quantities of palms, smilax and baskets of roses and garden flowers.

The bridal party entered to the strains of the wedding march from "Lohengrin," played by Mrs. Jess Wilhoit.

The ceremony took place in the living room before an altar improvised in front of a large fireplace banked with palms and ferns.

First came the bridesmaids who entered alone. They were Miss Ellen Leonard, the bride's youngest sister, wearing turquoise blue georgette; Miss Ruth Barton, wearing green georgette, and Miss Margaret Barton in pale blue georgette. The gowns were fashioned alike over slips the same shade as the gowns and made with tight waists and full circular skirts. They carried baskets of varicolored garden flowers tied with tulle to match their gowns.

Miss Sara Leonard was her sister's maid of honor and wore a lovely gown of pink georgette trimmed with dainty ruffles piquted in silver. She carried a shower bouquet of pink roses.

The bride entered alone and met the groom at the altar. She was a picture of loveliness in her wedding gown of white satin. Godets of lace trimmed the full circular skirt and the waist was made basque effect with a yoke of georgette underneath which also had a band of silver lace. Dainty seed pearls outlined the godets, armholes and neckline of the gown. A court train beaded with seed pearls in bowknot design added to the beauty of the costume. Her misty silk veil was held to her hair by a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and valley lilies.

An informal reception followed the ceremony. The bride's table was covered with a handsome lace cloth and had as its central decoration a large silver basket filled with white roses. Placed at intervals around the table were four silver candlesticks holding burning white tapers.

Assisting the parents of the bride in entertaining were Miss Leila McCorley, Mrs. Royal Camp, Mrs. Clarence Crocker and Mrs. Harold Sanford. Mrs. Jess Wilhoit kept the bride's book.

The bride's mother wore a handsome dress of black lace over satin of the same shade.

The bride and groom left during the evening for their wedding trip. The bride wore a traveling dress of black silk moire and a close fitting hat of black felt.

Passie Fenton Ottley Fund Given New Impetus at Meeting

New impetus was given the movement now under way to create a scholarship endowment fund of $30,000 to Tallulah Falls Industrial school when a large and notably representative group of friends of the school assembled Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock in the new Athletic club at the call of Mrs. T. T. Stevens to discuss plans for completing the fund that is at once to aid the mountain children in whose behalf the school is owned and maintained, and to honor Mrs. John K. Ottley, for whom the scholarship endowment fund is to be named. Upward of 100 friends and workers for the school who attended the meeting turned the occasion into a round-table discussion and contributed valuable suggestions as well as pledges of support.

Keynote of Meeting.

With one-third of the proposed $30,000 fund already subscribed and interest in the movement increasing steadily the committee is enthusiastic over the outlook. The keynote of the meeting was sounded by Mrs. Stevens when she said: "The hearty response that has greeted our efforts since the plan for the Passie Fenton Ottley scholarship endowment fund was initiated three weeks ago convinces us that the cause of Tallulah Falls school is very close to the people of Georgia and definitely in the conciousness of all Atlanta. Not only is interest in the school and its great work for Georgia's mountain children deep and earnest, but the fact that the fund is to be named for one who has given twenty-five years of service to the school, and who has contributed richly to the educational advancement of the state has given a positive inspiration to our work.

"In the beginning of this new movement the committee felt that it might require several months to raise $30,000, but so generous has been the response to our appeal that already one-third of the amount has been pledged. And now we are renewing our efforts with the hope that the entire fund will have been completed before the board of trustees of Tallulah Falls school meets here in October, so that we may present the fund intact at that time."

As chairman of the central control committee of trustees charged with directing the movement, Mrs. Stevens related briefly the various steps by which the school has been brought to its splendid physical proportions and emphasized the necessity for an adequate scholarship endowment which would insure the financial permanence of the school.

That the proper functioning of the school depends upon a larger endowment than that now enjoyed by the school, and that friends of the institution are determined to raise the $30,000 to be known as the Passie Fenton Ottley Scholarship Endowment fund is indicated by the unanimous adoption of the resolution offered by Mrs. Thornwell Jacobs at this meeting, expressing appreciation for the work already accomplished by the trustees of the school, the clubwomen and the people at large, and indorsing the movement now in progress to create a new endowment fund of $30,000 to be named in honor of Mrs. John K. Ottley.

The plan by which the committee proposes to create the $30,000 fund embraces three features: endowment life insurance assigned to the school, direct gifts, and the staging of a big fashion revue in the city auditorium on September 14, the entire proceeds of which will go to the fund.

Endowment Policies.

Among those who have taken endowment policies for the scholarship foundation are: Mrs. Thornwell Jacobs, Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith and Mrs. T. T. Stevens, who have each taken out a $1,000 policy; and Mrs. Katherine Fitts has turned over to the fund a $2,000 policy. Among other gifts reported at Tuesday's meeting were three cash donations—from Cecil Cannon, from Mrs. H. G. Hastings and from Mrs. F. M. Robinson.

It is expected that the fashion revue and dance will add $5,000 to the fund. With M. Rich & Bros. Co. sponsoring the event and paying all expenses thereof, with Lewis J. Morton giving his services as director and Enrico Leide contributing his services as musical director and conductor, with the auditorium committee of the city of Atlanta giving the use of the auditorium without charge, and with more than one hundred Atlanta social favorites and celebrities participating in the event there is every reason to believe that it will net no less than $5,000 for the scholarship fund.

Among those participating in Tuesday's meeting was J. Prince Webster, who spoke in glowing terms of the splendid work the school is doing and pledged his support for the scholarship fund. Mr. Webster presented the committee a check for $100 in behalf of himself and his wife and pledged himself to double that amount provided 25 people would give an added $100 each to the fund.

Attend Meeting.

Prominent among those attending the meeting Tuesday and joining in the discussions were: Mrs. T. T. Stevens, Mrs. H. G. Hastings, Mrs. Howard McCall, J. Prince Webster, Mrs. Ira Farmer, Mrs. Paul Etheridge, Mrs. Price Gilbert, Mrs. H. M. Nicholas, Mrs. Kate Green Hess, Mrs. R. L. Beddingfield, Mrs. Arthur H. Hazzard, Mrs. James R. Bachman, Mrs. B. K. Boyd, Mrs. R. C. Shoep, Mrs. H. G. Carnes, Mrs. E. Hardaway Smith, Mrs. Cooper Pope, Mrs. Norman Sharp, Mrs. R. K. Rambo, Miss Tommie Dora Barker, Mrs. George W. McCarthy, Jr., Mrs. David Black, Mrs. Thornwell Jacobs, Mrs. Katherine Hillyer Connerat, Mrs. Charles J. Haden, Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, Mrs. F. M. Robinson, Mrs. Oscar Palmour, Mrs. B. M. Boykin, Mrs. A. R. Ragsdale, Mrs. J. D. Suttles, Miss Bessie Langhorn, Mrs. W. B. Lockspetch, Mrs. Frank L. Woodruff, Mrs. Frank McCormick, Mrs. Alva D. Kiser, Mrs. Charles T. Phillips, Mrs. Willard C. Patterson, Mrs. Eugene Herrington, Mrs. Bolling Jones, Mrs. James Ragan, Mrs. Lawrence Willett, Mrs. Jack Peavy, Miss Julia Sparks and Mrs. Alonzo Richardson.

Miss Avery Honors Miss Ruby White.

A lovely affair of Saturday afternoon was the bridge shower at which Miss Mae Alva Avery entertained at her home in Druid Hills in compliment to Miss Ruby White, a bride-elect of September.

The dainty tally cards were suggestive of a wedding and the prizes were hand-painted novelties. Miss White was presented with many beautiful and useful gifts.

Among those present were Miss Ruby White, Miss Mildred Brown, Miss Genevieve Connell, Miss Evelyn Donehoo, Miss Beatrice North, Miss Thelma Morang, Miss Frances Wells, Miss Callie Brown, Miss Polly Wing, Miss Helen Bradbury, Miss Pauline Gault, Miss Nola Higdon, Miss Minnie Lassister, Miss Lilly Hucks, Miss Vern Lee Avery, Mrs. Joe Long, Mrs R. B. White, Jr., Mrs. Horace Evans, Mrs. W. E. Pennington, Mrs. B. A. Pearce and Miss Mae Alva Avery.

Party Series For Miss Johnson.

Mrs. A. H. Archer entertained for her niece, Miss Zolite Johnson, Monday afternoon with a bridge party. Miss Elizabeth Gleason won first prize, while the consolation was given to Miss Hattie M. McIlheran.

The following guests were present: Mrs. Hearn, Mrs. Thompson, Miss Hortense Archer, Mrs. A. H. Archer, Miss Zolite Johnson, Miss Henrietta Thompson, Miss Hattie Marguerite McIlheran, Miss Elizabeth Gleason, Miss Sarah Sue Burnett, Miss Rachel Burnett, Miss Margaret Burnett, of Rome; Miss Carolyn Ridley, Miss Betty Horton, Miss Suzanne Adair, Master Billie Hearn.

Miss Mattie Marguerite McIlheran gave a spend-the-day party for Miss Henrietta Thompson and her guest, Miss Zolite Johnson, on Wednesday.

Miss Elizabeth Gleason entertained also for this lovely hostess and her guest at a matinee party at the Howard Saturday morning.

Miss Margaret Wallace gave Miss Henrietta Thompson and Miss Zolite Johnson a picnic and swimming party at Idlewood on Wednesday afternoon.

Miss Reba Bridger Is Complimented.

Mrs. I. A. Dent entertained four table sof bridge Friday evening in honor of Miss Reba Bridger, of Savannah, Ga., the guest of Mrs. Louis L. Warner.

The prizes were won by Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Lee and the consolations being cut by Mr. and Mrs. Louis L. Warner. Miss Bridger was presented with a box of hand-made handkerchiefs.

Many entertainments are being given for Miss Bridger. Mrs. R. W. Bost entertained three tables at bridge Saturday evening. Mrs. W. C. Lee entertained a few friends at luncheon. Mrs. Warner gave a large party Tuesday evening for Miss Bridger and Friday afternoon Mrs. John Simpkins entertained at a bridge tea.

Mrs. Bolling Jones Lauds Fund Plan At Tuesday Meeting

In a deeply inspirational vein Mrs. Bolling Jones, in speaking of the Passie Fenton Ottley Scholarship Endowment fund plan at the meeting of friends of Tallulah Falls school Tuesday morning paid a glowing tribute to Mrs. Ottley and urged the workers for the fund to redouble their efforts. Mrs. Jones, a trustee of the school and a tireless worker in its behalf, is trustee chairman of the school service tribute, and same gifts and she joins with hundreds of others in the plan by which the new endowment now being raised shall honor Mrs. Ottley.

Mrs. Jones spoke as follows: "This 'rally conference' (for that seems to be a good name for such a meeting as this) is one of stupendous meaning. This is not a meeting to suffocate Passie Fenton Ottley with all the exquisite flowers of love and appreciation which her years of service deserve. If so, the tributes would be so gentle, so pure, so sweet we should need angel tongues to express them and lay them down at her feet.

"Passie Fenton Ottley is the star in the endowment drama, but she wants you, and we want you, to find the wings of the morning and fly away to our 'Light in the Mountains' and catch the inspiration of that gleam which is the real reason for this meeting.

"Benjamin Kidd said, 'Give us the young and we will create a new mind and a new earth in one generation.' But this new creation can only be realized when the main body—we, the adult generation—is committed to it with whole-hearted devotion. We need a deeper sense of our responsibility to the present generation about to receive the inheritance of the ages. We must not only fix our eye upon the child but we must follow through. And now, why in this work for the mountain child at Tallulah Falls school shall we honor this one whose name the new endowment fund will bear?

"And here is the answer: For more than 30 years Passie Fenton Ottley has been our pilot. She has steered our ship through various adventures and brought it safely to harbor. She has never lost a ship. The service tribute which we propose is a fitting reward for her piloting—a tribute that she richly deserves.

"The Passie Fenton Ottley endowment fund asks that you bring on your cargo of money, of help and of service for the under-privileged mountain children who have no chance without that help.

"MRS. BOLLING JONES,
"Trustee Chairman of Memorials, Service Tributes and Name Gifts."

Fifty-Fifty Club Reports Meeting.

The Fifty-Fifty club held the regular August meeting with Mrs. Alice E. Means at her home on Lee street. The meeting was called to order by Mrs. E. W. Brogdon, vice president, who presided in the absence of the president. Each member answered the roll call with a quotation on summer. Mrs. Wilbur Jones announced the gift by Mrs. H. H. Turner, one of the charter members of the club, of twenty Toggenburg goats, valued at $1,000, to the Martha Berry school.

After the business of the club was completed the program chairman presented the following program:

"Famous Farmers"—Luther Burbank, by Mrs. Arnold Gregory; Cyrus H. McCormick, by Mrs. Coralie G. Wilson; "Cabinet Farmers," by Mrs. Sidney Smith.

Miss Aldine Ray Is Honored at Party.

A social event of interest Friday afternoon, August 13, was a birthday party given by Mr. and Mrs. V. L. Ray at their home on Chapel road complimenting their daughter, Aldine, on her seventh birthday.

The birthday cake with seven candles adorned the table and the color scheme was carried out in yellow and white.

Those present were Misses Elsie Mock, Elizabeth Moon, Margie Ray, Evelyn Fulgum, Dorothy Scott, Lois Palmer, Joyce Scott, Christine Pinkston, Christine Roberts, Annie Lee Copeland, Corine Palmer, Christine Smith, Evelyn Edmonds, Thelma Ray and Marie Roberts; Masters Robert Vaughn, Paul Collier, Jr., James Virgil Ray, Jr., Forest Cape, Jr., Robert Ballard, James Ballard, Herschel Palmer, Robert Hancock, Charles Vaughn and John Roberts.

Factors of Strength in Tallulah Organization

Miss Davis Takes First Vacation In Eleven Years

The whole state is happy that Miss Ann Carrington Davis, principal of Tallulah Falls school, is taking a real vacation for the first time in 11 years. Miss Davis has left the school many times in that long period, but always on some errand for the school or with a bunch of school children riding in the car. This time she will be away at least three weeks and is visiting her family in their lovely home at Westwood, Lynchburg, Va., and also making a delightful visit to the sesqui-centennial in Philadelphia and to Washington and New York.

In every place Miss Davis is observing and studying for the benefit of the school and she writes back enthusiastically of new crafts designs or new rock-work plans. But even so, she is getting the benefit of change, the tonic effect of entirely different sights and sounds and will come back refreshed and strengthened to the work where she is so much needed.

In her absence Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, vice president of the board of trustees, is in charge of the school and though Miss Davis is missed by her and the children at every turn, they are getting along famously and bending every energy to doing well what they know Miss Davis would have them do at this time of the year. Besides the regular work of the home the girls are canning vegetables and canning and preserving the luscious peaches in which Habersham county has abounded this summer.

They are also cleaning the entire plant from top to bottom as Miss Davis would be doing in preparation for the opening of school and in every way are trying to make her feel that her long-needed vacation has been the cause of no delay or hindrance in her beloved work.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick writes that everything is fine except the pouring rains which are washing up carefully filled walks, drives and terraces. "To hear this, however, we had only to think of the terrible drouth of last summer At any rate the swimming pool is always full."

Lexington Club Honors Mrs. Gohlston.

Mrs. J. W. Gholston, eight hdistrict president, was the honor guest at the August meeting of the Woman's club of Lexington, which meeting was held at the home of Mesdames T. W. and G. R. Crawford on Thursday afternoon, August 19, and was a celebration of the seventeenth birthday of the Tallulah Falls schools.

The regular routine of business and reports from standing committees was conducted by Mrs. Hamilton McWhorter, president, after which she introduced Mrs. Gholston. The entire club sang a song of welcome to our eighth district president, the words by Mrs. G. A. Barron.

Mrs. Gholston brought to the club a most interesting and encouraging message as to the success and brilliant prospects of the Tallulah Falls school. She spoke wholeheartedly of her love and aspiration for the eighth district.

Mrs. G. A. Barron gave a talk on detailed facts about Tallulah, after which Mrs. Joel Cloud introduced "Miss Tallulah," who was charmingly impersonated by Miss Louise Brooks as the "Heart of the Federation." Miss Brooks gave an original couplet pertaining to Tallulah. In answer to roll call each member on the club presented "Miss Tallulah" with a jar of canned fruit and each wafted to her a wish.

Miss Emily Cloud read "The House by the Side of the Road," after which the club sang "Georgia Land." Tea was served by the hostesses.

Lot Is Donated To Endowment Fund.

J. N. Ragsdale, prominent Atlanta citizen, has tendered a lot in his beautiful residential subdivison on Cascade avenue in West End to the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs to be sold for the benefit of the Passie Fenton Ottley scholarship endowment fund. Mr. Ragsdale made this donation through Mrs. Norman Sharp, first vice president of the federation.

In making this contribution, Mr. Ragsdale stated that he believed in the promotion of education for children in rural sections in keeping with educational advantages afforded the city child. Mr. Ragsdale further stated that he welcomed the opportunity to assist Atlanta club women in their noble work for the underprivileged child.

Mrs. Sharp has selected Mrs. R. K. Rambo, president of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. J. K. Ottley and Mrs. T. T. Stevens, general chairmen of the scholarship campaign, to act with her as a committee empowered to select the particular lot which Mr. Ragsdale will deed to the federation for the benefit of the scholarship endowment fund.

State President's Message To Clubwomen of Georgia

"To the Clubwomen of Georgia—Greetings!

"I hope all of you have had a restful, happy vacation and are ready to take up the work again with renewed interest.

"The Club Page today carries for the second time the names of the chairmen in the general federation. This is for the information of state chairmen and in the hope that not one will miss this page or fail to avail herself at once of the privilege of writing the general federation chairman for the outline of work for her particular department.

"The Club Page of September 5 will carry the names of the state chairmen for the present administration. This will be a handbook for the use of the clubwomen until the year book is issued and chairmen and club presidents as well as individual members are urged to get in touch at once with the chairmen and plan the year's work.

"If each club member realized the amount of thought, correspondence, changing and many other problems attached to the final completion of this directory they would avail themselves of the results of these efforts in a strong determination to make the next two working years of great value to the federation.

"May I once more remind chairmen and all office holders of the responsibility they have assumed in accepting these positions and urge them to hold them for the term to which they have been appointed? Resignations and changes are very detrimental to our work. Will you help me make the coming club year and the one following of such constructive value that they will be outstanding in the history of the federation? I am looking forward with keen interest to the revival of activities after the summer vacation, I am ready to help you in any way I can, and I am sure you are going to do your best for me and the federation in return.

"With my best wishes to each and every club and every club member for a year of pleasure and profit in the work in which we are all so happy and so interested.

"I am, sincerely yours,

"(MRS. A. P.) ELLA F. BRANTLEY."

Canton Woman's Club Honors Grandmothers At Lovely Luncheon

One of the most joyful occasions of the whole club year given recently when the Canton Woman's club entertained the grandmothers of Canton at a delightful spend-the-day party at the clubhouse. After the grandmothers had assembled and enjoyed a musical program they were ushered into the dining room where a noon luncheon was served, Mrs. A. B. Coggins said a few words of grace at the table. Mrs. O. G. Glover, president of the club made a brief talk in which she welcomed the guests. Mrs Olin Fincher responding in behalf of the grandmothers, her talk closing with these words: "We are truly glad to be here. We grandmothers of today will soon fade and pass away. Your kind deeds and thoughtfulness we'll never forget in our childishness."

Mrs. Joe Johnston, a grandmother who has meant much to the Canton club, gave a short talk.

Flowers were presented by little Miss Jean McCanless to the grandmothers having the oldest and greatest number of grandchildren, these were given to Mrs. George W. Brooke and Mrs. A. B. Coggins, and to Mrs. Harbin for having the youngest grandchild.

As the grandmothers arrived they registered and later the roll was called As this is an annual affair a record is kept of those present each year. One of the features of the day was the "improved" birthday cake from which souvenirs were given to each guest.

After dinner a delightful program was rendered as follows: Readings by Miss Jeffie Fincher; vocal solos by Miss Sara Bates, and old-fashioned music was played by Miss Dorothy Miller. A much enjoyed feature was the song, "Amazing Grace," sung by Mrs. Jabez Galt, Mrs. J. T. Edmondson, Mrs. Holbrook, Mrs. Pugh and Mrs. Bell.

A large number of the club's membership was present and the grandmothers present were: Mrs. A. B Coggins, Mrs. Jabez Galt, Mrs. W. M. Willingham, Mrs. A. K. Scott, Mrs. J. M. Cochran, Mrs. J. M. Holbrook, Mrs. Williams, Mrs. G. W. Brooke, Mrs. N. J. Coker, Mrs. J. M. Pugh, Mrs. E. C. Bell, Mrs. J. E. Johnston, Mrs. B. F. Berry, Mrs. L. J. Doss, Mrs. I. M. Edge, Mrs. J. E. Johnston, Mrs. B. F. Berry, Mrs. L. J. Doss, Mrs. I. M. Edge, Mrs. H. A. Stephens, Mrs. S. C. Kinnett, Mrs. John Bell, Mrs. Ben Howard, Mrs. J. T. Edmondson, Mrs. Joe Barton, Mrs. G W. Ledord, Mrs. A. R. Mosteller, Mrs. W. P. Bean, Mrs. W. F. Scroggins, Mrs. M. E. Hamilton, Mrs. A. C. Sewell, Mrs. Tom Hogan, Mrs. Alred, Mrs. M. T. Baskin, Mrs. Harbin and Mrs. E. A. McCanless.

Mrs. A. B. Tyler Named Press Chairman.

Announcement is made that Mrs. B. A. Tyler, of Dalton, has accepted the appointment of chairman of press and publicity for the seventh district. Let all clubs in the district take notice of this announcement and send club news to her and, whenever possible, arrange that subscriptions of the various papers of the district be sent her.

MRS. CHAS. B. McGARRITY,
President of Seventh District.

Mrs. Thornwell Jacobs Offers Resolution.

The following is the resolution offered by Mrs. Thorwell Jacobs and unanimously adopted at the meeting of friends of Tallulah Falls Industrial school held Tuesday morning, August 24, at the Athletic club, Mrs. T. T. Stevens presiding:

Resolved: That we, the committee of women assembled this 24th day of August, in the committee room of the Atlanta Athletic club, do hereby express our appreciation of the work already done by the trustees of Tallulah Falls Industrial school, and by the people at large who are so deeply interested in said school, and we present do heartily indorse this new movement for the greater endowment of Tallulah Falls Industrial school and the honor conferred upon our dear friend, Mrs. John K. Ottley, in making the new scholarship endowment fund a service tribute that will perpetuate her name.

MAUD K. JACOBS.

8th District Board Indorses Endowment.

In a telegram addressed to Mrs. T. T. Stevens, general chairman for the Passie Fenton Ottley scholarship endowment fund now being created for Tallulah Falls Industrial school, the executive board of the Eighth District Federation of Women's Clubs heartily indorses the Passie Fenton Ottley endowment and the plans for procuring the new scholarship fund.

The telegram sent from Comer and signed by Mrs. J. H. Burton, recording secretary; Mrs. W. L. Hodges and Mrs. J. W. Gholsten reads as follows:

"The executive board of the Eighth District Federation of Women's Clubs in session at Comer, Ga., heartily indorses the Passie Fenton Ottley endowment fund and the plans for procuring said fund."

Morgan County Clubs To Meet September 15

The Federated Women's clubs of Morgan county will meet in Rutledge, Georgia, September 15, at 11 o'clock with the Rutledge Woman's club as hostess Bostwick will have charge of the program. A full attendance is requested as this is the time for election of officers.

Mrs Richardson's Impressions Of 8th District Board Meeting

In the following story Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, general federation director in Georgia, gives some interesting impressions gained at the eighth district executive board meeting, which she attended with Mrs. Norman Sharp, state chairman of the junior membership, in Comer, Wednesday, August 25.

"Six o'clock is very early to rise and catch a train out of Atlanta for an all-day meeting, but the compensation came to Mrs. Norman Sharp and the director, when we arrived at Comer on Wednesday, and heard the plans of the eighth district as outlined by the chairmen present, at the home of the president, Mrs. J. W. Gholstin. The rains descended, and the floods came. Bridges washed out, caused some of those intrepid women to turn back and take a longer route, but while the delay was unavoidable their courage never failed, and the women from Lexington arrived but little late for the meeting. Mrs. Gholstin's beautiful home was the place of the meeting, its very atmosphere lending added charm to the graciousness of the hostess.

"Accounts of the meeting will be forthcoming officially, but the director and the chairman of the juniors had some impressions to which they would like to give expression. Sixty women braved the elements, bad roads and consequent danger, to be present. As the roll was called each chairman responded to her name with plans already made, and so enthusiastically presented that the work of the eighth district is already well under way.

"The district is thoroughly organized, every chairman appointed accepting the responsibilities of the office as well as the honor, the coordination and cooperation of each working toward the complete whole in a remarkable way.

"The feature of the morning was the presentation of a beautiful silver tray to Mrs. Walter Hodges, the retiring president. A work so well planned and organized handed over to the incoming officer commands the admiration of all clubwomen. The accomplishments of the district under Mrs. Hodges will prove the splendid foundation for the forward look for the future.

"Many of Georgia's outstanding clubwomen were present, including Mrs. S. C. V. Sandford, state vice president; Mrs. Lena Felker Lewis, state chairman of scrap books; Mrs. Walter Hodges, newly-appointed chairman of institutes; Mrs. Norman Sharp, state chairman of junior memberships. It was the privilege of Mrs. Sharp to give much helpful instruction regarding the junior work.

"The eighth district won the cup offered for junior memberships. The determination to keep it was very evident in the intelligent and far reaching planning for the next year.

"Mrs. Richardson brought the message from the general federation.

"The pages for the day were two lively university girls, Miss Carmichael and Miss Rowell. At the noon hour a note was handed the president, which read that a very splendid club husband was awaiting his guests, the women of the board, at the yard of the Baptist church, where a delightful barbecue was served. The vote of the body was that after all was said and done the greatest asset a clubwoman has is a good club husband.

"When one sees such organization as was evidenced at the meeting of this board, such earnest and enthusiastic planning for the future, there is every reason to believe that the Georgia federation has the brighest prospects for the coming year. It is the work of such women as are in the eighth district and such districts as the eighth, which makes the Georgia federation so great a power for good in the life of the state."

G.F.W.C. Chairmen Are Named For Consideration of Board

At the request of Mrs. A. P. Brantley, state president, appears below for the second time the appointments reported by the general federation committee, these appointments to be considered by the board in January, 1927. These readjustments will probably be adopted since the reclassification simplifies and readjusts the work.

Mrs. Brantley urges that all state chairmen will immediately avail themselves of the privilege of writing the general federation chairmen for the outline of work for their respective departments.

Atlanta Musician Heard in Colorado.

Miss Julia Oliver Eckford, a member of the music faculty of the Washington seminary, is studying this summer with E. Robert Schmitz, the French pianist, who will be heard for the first time in Atlanta in December. He will appear in concert under the auspices of the Atlanta Music club.

Miss Eckford was one of the performers at a musical given by the Colorado Springs, Col., Music club recently. The following, taken from The Colorado Gazette of August 13, will be of interest to her Atlanta friends:

"One of the most delightful events of the summer took place yesterday afternoon when the Colorado Springs Music club gave a musical-tea at the home of Mrs. Oliver H. Shoup. An appreciative audience of more than 200 people gathered to hear the well-known local and out-of-town artists. The program was brought to a brilliant close by Miss Julia Oliver Eckford, of Atlanta, Ga. 'If I Were a Bird,' by Henselt, and the Concert-Etude by MacDowell. She played with sparkling technical finish and great artistry."

Kle Club To Give Fall Dance.

The Kle club, social and charity unit of B. P. O. E. No. 78, met in regular business session Wednesday, August 25, at the Elks' home, the president, Mrs. Edward F. Bond, presiding.

This club plans a number of interesting affairs for the fall and winter, and with the idea of arousing fresh interest and securing additional members, the club will serve a Dutch supper in the Elks' dining room Saturday evening, September 11, beginning at 6:30, which will be complimentary to the club members and their families and to Elks and their families. Music and othe features of entertainment will be provided.

On September 15 at 9 p. m. the first of a series of benefit dances will be sponsored by the club members, under the direction of Mrs. G. E. Cooper and Mrs. L. J. Baley. A large evening bridge party is planned also for an early date.

The social meeting for September will be at the home of Mrs. A. D. Everett, corner North Jackson and Pine streets, on September 15. All club members are invited.

Mrs. Clifford Walker's Tribute to Mrs. Ottley.

Mrs. Clifford Walker, the "first lady of Georgia" and herself a zealous leader of educational work in the state, has paid a glowing tribute to Mrs. John K. Ottley for the years of fruitful service now finding new recognition in the plan of the control committee of trustees of Tallulah Falls Industrial school to create a new scholarship endowment fund of $30,000 to be named in her honor the Passie Fenton Ottley scholarship fund.

Although Mrs. Walker was unable to attend the enthusiastic meeting which on Tuesday rallied more than a hundred friends of the school in the interest of the scholarship movement she sent a message that was at once indorsement for the plan and hearty approval of the honor conferred upon Mrs. Ottley. Mrs. Walker said:

"Mrs. Ottley is one of Georgia's greatest citizens. For years she has labored unceasingly and generously for the cause of education and her notably constructive service and outstanding leadership in behalf of Tallulah Falls Industrial school makes it peculiarly fitting that the new scholarship endowment found now being raised should bear her name. No honor is too great for her."

Service Star Legion Honors Hospital Patients.

The Service Star Legion of Fulton county entertained the Disabled World War Veterans at U. S. base hospital No. 48, Tuesday afternoon with a program of music, readings and dances. The program which was presented in the Red Cross but was voted one of the best which has been furnished by Mrs. C. L. Anderson, program chairman for base No. 48, from the Service Star Legion.

Miss Thelma Chalman and Miss Sara Jarvis presented several solo dances which were thoroughly appreciated. Miss Clestelle McNeal rendered an entertaining and enjoyable reading. Miss Madaline Ward, Miss Ellen Graham, Miss Dorothy Cline and Miss Frankie Williams gave vocal and instrumental selections, receiving encores. Ice cream and cake was served on the lawn under the beautiful trees, while every bed patient was served and rooms furnished the wards by Miss Madaline Ward, Miss Ellen Graham and Mrs. E. B. Williams.

Garden Division Plans Flower Show For September 3

At a meeting of the garden division of the Atlanta Woman's club Thursday morning at the clubhouse it was decided to hold a flower show on Friday, September 3, in the palm room of the clubhouse, from 9 to 1 o'clock, at which time all flowers on exhibit will be for sale at a very moderate price.

Mrs. Joel Hunter, chairman of the division, appointed Mrs. Frank Fitten as chairman with Mrs. Frank Matthews and Mrs. S. B. Naff as co-chairman for the flower show.

All those entertaining at the regular Friday afternoon club tea will find it profitable to visit the show and purchase flowers for their tables.

Miss Irene Davis, of Thomasville, Ga., was a visitor of the garden division and spoke most interestingly of the Garden club in her city, and especially of the growing of roses. She urged every one who could possibly do so to visit the annual rose show in Thomasville next year.

Walker-Martin.

LaGrange, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—The wedding of Miss Lena Walker and David Sanders Martin was a beautiful event of Wednesday evening, August 19, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eldridge Gibson Walker in LaGrange. The ceremony was performed at 6:30 o'clock in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives. Dr. A. B. Vaughan performed the impressive ring ceremony.

The bridesmaids were Miss Elise Walker, sister of the bride, and Miss Frances Matthews, of Decatur. Mrs. Clyde Diven, of Atlanta, was matron of honor. Miss Lora Walker, twin sister of the bride, was maid of honor and wore cream colored chiffon, beautifully embroidered. Miss Annie Elizabeth Walker was the flower girl.

The bride and groom entered together. Miss Walker wore a going away frock of navy crepe beaded in platinum and with a jacket trimmed with touches of flesh georgette. Her hat was of navy velvet trimmed in green ribbon and her coat was of black satin with touches of green. She carried a bride's bouquet of roses and valley lilies.

Immediately after the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Walker entertained at an informal reception. Mr. and Mrs. Martin left immediately after the ceremony for Asheville, N. C., for a wedding trip after which they will be at home in LaGrange.

Mrs. Leigh Hostess At House Party.

Mrs. S. E. Leigh, of Grantville, Ga., is entertaining at a house party this week-end, her guests being Judge Anderson and Mrs. W. C. Adamson, of Carrollton and New York; Mrs. W. A. Ward and Miss Ellen Zellars Ward, of Atlanta; Mrs. I. N Orr and daughters, Misses Eleanor and Emily Orr, of Newnan, and Mrs. Braxton Blalock and son, Braxton, Jr., of Fayetteville.

Call Meeting of the Ponce de Leon P.-T. A. In Decatur.

A call meeting of the Ponce de Leon P.-T. A. will be held next Friday morning, September 3, at 10:30 o'clock in the school auditorium for the purpose of electing a president.

Mrs. W. S. Elkin, Jr., will preside, and urges all members to be present.

AMERICAN LEGION COMPLETES PLANS FOR SESQUI TRIP

The American Legion, department of Georgia, has completed arrangements for a special train to take members to Philadelphia for the sixth annual convention, to be held in that city October 11 to 15. Special train will start in Atlanta picking up passengers in the eastern half of the state at Charlotte, N. C., and points in Georgia north of Atlanta will join en route.

LOUISVILLE SHOPS ADDS NEW LINK TO CHANDLER CHAIN

The many patrons of Chandler's Boot shop will be interested to learn of the opening of another Chandler store in the heart of Louisville's shopping center on last Monday, August 23. The store was formally opened by an all-star cast of theatrical celebrities of the Strand theater, who acted as hosts and distributed flowers to those who attended the opening.

A splendid spirit of welcome was accorded the opening of Chandler's Boot shop by Louisville's commercial leaders, many floral offerings having been received from many of Louisville's largest financial institutions, trade organizations, merchants and various other civic enterprises that bespeak Louisville's commercial life.

Among those attending the opening were Irving, Harry, Sam, Mark and Simon Edison, proprietors; S. R. Brock, manager; C. E. Hadaway, general sales manager of the chain; Mr. Murnan, decorator; L. J. Westbrook, manager of the Nashville store; Mr. Arenson, manager of the Memphis store; Mr. Boudousquie, manager of the New Orleans store, and Mr. Hickman, manager of the Birmingham store.

METROPOLITAN TO SHOW EDERLE'S CHANNELSWIM

By speical air mail service officials of the Fox Films in New York have sent on its way to Atlanta exclusive pictures of the return to America of Gertrude Ederle, showing the splendid ovation and greetings given this wonderful swimming champion. Thousands greeted and eagerly awaited the chance to shake her hand upon the boat's docking. These pictures will be shown by Manager Crovo of the Metropolitan theater commencing Monday and for the remainder of the week.

This is the second scoop during the past two weeks Manager Crovo has been able to obtain, presenting to Atlanta picture fans the latest news events, he declares. These pictures were taken last Thursday and were ready to be sent to Atlanta Friday, arriving here Saturday in time for the first show Monday.

CITY NIGHT SCHOOL OPENS SEPTEMBER 7

Central Night school will open its doors Tuesday night, September 7, at 6:30 o'clock to students unable to attend day classes. The courses of study include elementary, academic and commercial high-school subjects.

No tuition is charged as the institution is one of the public schools supported by the city. Any person residing in the city limits is entitled to free tuition.

Prospective students are urged to register August 31, September 1, 2 and 3 from 5 to 8 o'clock in the afternoons at the school office, 138 South Pryor treet.

Mrs. Kaiser, Hospital Chairman, Renders Valuable Service

Mrs. Nat Kaiser, efficient chairman of the hospital committee of the Atlanta Woman's club.

Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith announces Mrs. Nat Kaiser as chairman of the hospital committee, one of the special committees of the club, which functions not only during the "fiscal club year," but during the entire year, rendering valuable service to the sick. Mrs. Nat Kaiser, the able chairman, has Mrs. J. Bomar White as secretary and Mrs. Sam Mitchell, treasurer.

Miss Mary Cayce and Miss Myrtle Lowery, with a large committee, have charge of Hospital No. 48, and each week a delightful program is prepared with the best talent. Major Johnson, who has charge of Hospital No. 48, and Mrs. Robinson cooperate with the committee and they follow the plans outlined by the staff of the hospital.

On August 31, the committee has arranged an entertainment worthwhile for the boys. Mrs. J. W. Gibson, chairman of Grady hospital, and her committee carry magazines, flowers to cheer the patients, and anything essential to the happiness of the boys. Mrs. C. A. Rhodes, chairman of Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children, and her committee work with Mrs. Robert Gregg, president, and bring joy to the many little ones in the hospital.

Others on the hospital committee are Mrs. Homer Jessup, Mrs Delaney, Mrs. H. C. McCutcheon, Mrs. P Mitchell, Mrs. Mather, Mrs. T. J. Ripley, Miss Mary Cayce and others. The hospital committee meets the first Wednesday in each month. All members are invited to be present.

Retiring Judge Ends Sixty Years In Public Office

Judge William Allen, 86, of Jacksonville, Tenn., who is well known in Atlanta, has declined to become a candidate for reelection as county judge, and on September 1 will round out 60 years of service to the Tennessee county, according to information received here Saturday.

Judge Allen will retire with the remarkable record of never having asked a man to vote for him in his life, according to his many friends, who claim his career is not equaled by any other county judge in the country.

The life of Judge Allen has been colorful in more than one respect. He made his debut in official life by joining the Union army as a spy in New York during the war between the states. After army service he settled in Jacksboro and was in the general merchandise business before entering politics.

When the veteran made his first race for a county office he defeated Captain Jeff Rogers, who is said to have declared, "If that young snipper-snapper beats me I will leave the state." Rogers was forced to keep his word after the election, locating in Iowa. Only once did he come back to Campbell county, continuing to make his home in the western state.

Judge Allen was reelected consecutively as county clerk until 1900, when he declined to be a candidate, serving as deputy clerk. Four years after he ceased to be a candidate for circuit court clerk John Allen decided to make the race for judge. He was elected by a large majority, and has held the office continuously ever since. He voluntarily relinquishes the place because of advancing years.

Muse Firm Shows Manhattan Shirts For Fall of 1926

The George Muse Clothing company has added a complete line of Manhattan shirts, pajamas and Mansco underwear to its furnishings department, and announces the first showing of the Manhattan fall styles for tomorrow.

The public is cordially invited to consider Monday as "fall style day," visit the Muse store with the idea of seeing the new styles for the approaching season, officials state.

"Monday will be a mighty interesting time to come in and get into fall styles," said an official of the store in announcing the addition of Manhattan shirts. "Not only is the Manhattan style range being shown, but every one of our 14 departments is a-sparkle with autumn newness.

"In shirts, a pronounced feature is the return of the silk shirt. In the Manhattan range, which is a safe guide to what's what, the silk shirt is prominent. It shows figured jacquards woven in between hairline stripes. It has a detachable collar of silk and the same design as the shirt.

"Another autumn style is Waverly Line stripe, shown in the shirts of percale. It is one of many novel ideas that are a marked feature of the new season. Many of these novelty designs introduce a stiff collar that matches.

"Subtle ornamentation is the guiding spirit of autumn in shirts. There is lots of color, deftly employed. The new season, in a word, is cheerful.

"Pajamas are of brighter colors and novel effects, printed as well as woven, with collars attached in many instances."

Lecture on Master Mind.

Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby, well-known lecturer, will speak in the mahogany room of the Ansley hotel this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Mrs. Ashby's subject will be "The Master Mind."

The public is cordially invited to be present and hear Mrs. Ashby.

A man's pains are due to his bad luck and his gains to his good judgment—so he thinks.

When trouble is brewing it takes more than hot air to kill the germ of suspicion.

New Dinkler Hotel To Open In Jacksonville Wednesday

President Carling L. Dinkler, of the Dinkler Hotels Company, Inc., announces next Wednesday, September 1, as the official opening day for Florida's newest hotel, Hotel Carling of Jacksonville, the latest link in the Dinkler chain of hotels.

The Carling hotel is located on Adams near Laura streets, adjoining the new Elks' Club of Jacksonville, is easily reached from all railroad stations and steamship wharfs, and is in the heart of the business and theater districts.

Hotel Carling contains 300 rooms, each with private bath or shower, wall fans, running ice water and all the latest equipment and convenience obtainable for the comfort of the guests.

The rate for room with bath for one person will be $3.50, $4, $4.50 and $5. A suite of rooms will range higher. The rates will prevail the year round, Mr. Dinkler said.

Mr. Dinkler desires to let it be known that Walter Chandler has been appointed manager, and Ralph Altmayer, assistant manager. Mr. Chandler has been associated with the Dinkler interests for more than a year as manager of the Andrew Jackson hotel at Nashville, which was opened August 1, a year ago. Prior to this Mr. Chandler was managing director for many of the prominent hotels in New York city. Mr. Altmayer has been with the Dinklers for the past three years as assistant manager of the Ansley and Piedmont hotels of Atlanta.

The hotel has been named in honor of Mr. Dinkler, who is president of one of the largest hotel companies in the south. His handling and operation of the company has caused it to grow steadily, and the outlook for the future promises even greater success and more hotels eventually for the chain.

The addition of the Jacksonville hotel to the Dinkler chain will make this company rank with the largest hotel operators of the United States, and especially in the southeast. Other Dinkler hotels are: Ansley and Piedmont hotels, Atlanta; Tutwiler and Redmont hotels, Birmingham; Andrew Jackson hotel, Nashville, and the Phoenix hotel, Wayeross.

Mr. Dinkler has associated with him, his father, Louis J. Dinkler, as chairman of board of directors and former president of the company; Henry C. Heinz, secretary-treasurer, prominently known in fraternity circles and civic affairs and vice president of the Citizens and Southern bank, one of the largest institutions of banking in the southeast; John Loti, vice president and assistant general manager, and Frank T. Reynolds, assistant to the president.

Baby Health Centers.

Dr. J. P. Kennedy, city health officer, has announced that baby health centers will be held this week at the following places on the days and hours named: Grant Park school, Wednesday, 2 o'clock; Andrew Stewart nursery, Wednesday, 2 o'clock, and Pryor Street school, Friday, 3 o'clock.

West End Woman's Club To Give Chicken Dinner Friday, Sept. 10

The membership committee of the West End Woman's club, Miss Elizabeth Young, chairman, will sponsor a chicken dinner to be held Friday evening, September 10, at the home of Mrs. Jeff Wright, on Adamsville road. Proceeds from the dinner will go toward the club building fund. Many new members are being received into the club, and very efficient work is being done by Miss Young and the membership committee.

To stimulate interest in the campaign for raising funds for completion of the new clubhouse, Dodson & Daniell, local jewelers, have donated to the club a handsome silver loving cup, to be presented by the West End Woman's club to the individual member raising the largest amount of money for the building fund, between this time and completion of the building about November 1. Every member of the club is eligible to compete for the loving cup, whether or not they are officers or committee chairmen.

The scholarship committee work is being carried on by Mrs. Chester W. Johnson, president, during the absence from the city of Mrs. J. M. Larkford, chairman. Mrs. Johnson announces that the following scholarships are open for applications: Bryan-Hatton Business college, Mayer Piano school, Paragon Shorthand school, Nellie Sullivan Dancing school, Atlanta College of Pharmacy, Mrs. Ryckeley's Beauty Parlor, University School for Boys, and others. Those interested will please communicate with Mrs. Chester W. Johnson, West 1985.

At the meeting of the ways and means committee, Mrs. Grady Andrews, chairman, which was held at the home of Mrs. C. M. Settle on Wednesday, plans were complete for the big benefit bridge to be given at the Ansley hotel on Tuesday afternoon, September 28. This committee is composed of Mesdames L. F. McClelland, E. C. Hudson, H. H. Turner, Jeff Wright, Charles B. Fife and Mrs. E. F. De Freese.

Following the regular business meeting which was held Wednesday at the home of the president, Mrs. Chester W. Johnson, on Cascade avenue, an informal reception was held honoring Mrs. Jeff Wright who so successfully conducted the advertisement ball in July from which the club realized a total sum of $661 for the building fund.

RUDOLPH VALENTINO AT METROPOLITAN

"The Son of the Sheik" Is Star's Last Film.

Interest in the approaching engagement at the Metropolitan theater, which starts tomorrow, of Rudolph Valentino's greatest screen triumph, "The Son of the Sheik," is at fever heat and is destined to prove the most important in the theatrical history of Atlanta.

Vilma Banky, beautiful and exotic Hungarian actress who came to America a few years ago and has since appeared to fine advantage with Ronald Colman in "The Dark Angel" and other films, as well as with Valentino in his last picture, "The Eagle," is once more opposite Rudy. She is Yasmin, the tortured dancing girl of the desert whose heart calls to the stern son of the sheik.

Montague Love, himself a star in pictures, plays the chief villain's role, and he is said to be so bearded and begrimed that admirers will hardly recognize him. In his robber band there is one chesty soul to whom a turban is a new thing. This famed beauty is none other than Bull Montana.

Agnes Ayres, who was finally the wife of the sheik when Rudy played that dashing lover several years ago, returns to the screen as a courtesy to her friend and out of gratitude to a picture which meant so much to her success. In "The Son of the Sheik" Miss Ayres is the wife of the sheik who thinks of the early days as the son, Ahmed, lives the passions of the desert.

George Fawcett, veteran at father roles in a hundred noted films, is the renegade Frenchman whose indomitable will causes so many pangs to his beautiful daughter, Yasmin. Other notables who support Valentino are baldheaded Bynunsky Hyman, smiling Erwin Connelly and Charles Requa. The significant role of S'rir, which will be remembered by many of the thousands of readers of Mrs. Hull's novel, is played by William Donovan.

Karl Dane, the famous "Slim" of "The Big Parade," has one of the leading supporting roles in the cast of "The Son of the Sheik," for it is he who plays Ramadan, the giant friend of Ahmed and protector of Yasmin.

Marche Militaire, by Schubert, and Enrico Leide and his famous Metropolitan orchestra, opens this week's musical program. The musical score is built from the Oriental repertoire, the two principal themes being "Kashmiri Song," by Finden, and "Araby," by Leide. Mr. Leide composed this original song for the first presentation of the "Sheik" during the season of 1921. The latest ballads and foxtrots will accompany the "Style Show, Parisian Modes," featuring Hope Hampton, which is to be shown among the extra added features. The latest issue of the Metropolitan news-views is also slated for presentation on this extraordinary program.

Anticipating immense attendance throughout the week's presentations, the theater management has arranged for special morning matinee each day, starting at 10 o'clock. This extra performance will aid materially in accommodating the great crowds that will be attracted by this stellar program.

Edmund Burns Cast.

Edmund Burns has been loaned to Fox Films by Cecil de Mille to play the leading masculine role in "Whispering Wires," under direction of Albert Ray.

THE SCREEN

The folks on the left at the top, apparently having a spat, are none other than Aileen Pringle and Tommy Meighan, who are on the screen at the Howard this week in the picture entitled "Tin Gods." Next is Rudolph Valentino and Vilma Banky in Valentino's last picture, "The Son of the Sheik," showing all this week at the Metropolitan. You will probably recognize the next picture as that of Tony and the man astride him as Tom Mix. Tom and Tony are at Loew's Grand this week in the picture "Tony Runs Wild." Last on the right at the top is dainty Viola Dana, who is starring at the Rialto all week in the vehicle, "Wild Oats Lane." At the lower left is Milton Sills as the genial O'Malley in the screen version of "The Making of O'Malley at the West End theater Wednesday. The loving couple next to O'Malley are the beautiful Corinne Griffith and Harrison Ford in "The Marriage Whirl" at the Palace theater Thursday and Friday. Right next to Corinne Griffith is Corinne Griffith. Yes, that's right. She's looking the other way this time, however. Corinne's partner in the second picture is Norman Kerry. They are showing at the Cameo Wednesday and Thursday in "Mlle. Modiste." Then we have a hard-boiled fighting man defending his "frail" against the world and all. That's Bob Custer, who's at the Tudor Thursday, Friday and Saturday in "The Devil's Gulch." At the lower right is a scene from "East Lynne," to be shown at the Alamo No. 2 this week. In the scene are shown Lou Tellegen and Alma Rubens, who play the leads in the picture.

'Wild Oats Lane' With Viola Dana Is Rialto Film

Robert Agnew Supports Brilliant Star in Underworld Drama.

"Wild Oats Lane," the screen melodramatic version of Gerald Beaumont's "The Gambling Chaplain," is the feature of the Rialto theater's program for this week.

The other numbers will include "Thundering Fleas," an Our Gang comedy, Pathe News, with the latest news pictures, and a musical score under the direction of Frank Turner.

The story of "Wild Oats Lane" runs something like this:

Leaving Sing Sing prison, where he had served a term for theft, the boy drifts into a small Pennsylvania town. He is embittered with the world and he attributes his downfall to evil companions daminated by the "dude." He meets the girl. He resolves to live down the past, but feels that he needs her help to succeed. Her father disapproves of him and objects to their marriage.

The boy leaves for New York, the girl promising to meet him there a week later. They are to be married immediately upon her arrival. The boy meets some of his crook friends and they hold him captive until they can pull off a big robbery. On the day agreed upon, the girl arrives in New York and the boy fails to meet her. Believing he has forsaken her, she drifts into the crowd and is lost. The boy writes her a frantic letter of explanation, but it is returned to him unopened.

Months later, in the Bowery, Marie has developed into an adventuress. Her heart is dead. She has severed all connection with her family and thinks of the boy in horror as being responsible for her degradation. In the neighborhood lives a priest to whom all crooks go. The girl does honest work on the side and she gives this honest money to the priest for his benefactions. The priest has among his dependents the boy, now a dope fiend. The priest gives the boy money and tells him to straighten himself out. It matters little to the world that the priest uses loaded dice when gambling with the professional gamblers in the neighborhood, for his winnings are devoted to the alleviation of the needs of the unfortunates who appeal to him for aid.

The "dude," much feared by everybody, wants the girl, but she disdains him. The "dude" kidnaps the girl, but she makes her escape. She meets the boy, but when he seeks to embrace her she turns from him. He asks her to shoot him, but, taking the revolver he gives her she directs it upon herself. The priest intervenes and explanations follow and the boy and girl are married. Their regeneration has begun and the future looks bright to both.

'TONY RUNS WILD' AT LOEW'S GRAND

Tom Mix, the dashing hero of the western plains, will appear as the star in his latest picture, "Tony Runs Wild," at Loew's Grand theater this week. This popular star has shown steady improvement in his work and there also has been a pronounced improvement in the quality of his recent pictures. With his wonder horse, "Tony," he has completed, under the William Fox banner, one of his most attractive pictures in "Tony Runs Wild."

The setting for "Tony Runs Wild" is along the Apache trail in Arizona's land of wonderful scenery. The action of the story carries the picture to the exterior and through the interiors of the ancient cliff dwellings, homes of a race that vanished from America centuries ago.

Famous mining properties, one of the most highly developed ranches of Arizona's famous cattle country, and miles of the scenic roads through the district appear in the picture. The final scene is in the celebrated Box canyon, a natural corral near the cliff dwellings.

The story gives Mix and "Tony" an opportunity to perform more of their feats of strength and skill, and thrills that are new even for this pair of film stars make this the most striking of Mix's long line of thrilling productions.

"Tony" is pictured as the leader of a band of wild horses. He is captured and tamed and then released. At the climax of the production, in the final scene, he answers his master's call, leads his wild mates in a rush that saves the hero and the heroine from being shot to death by desperadoes. Mix himself says this is "Tony's" best picture and "Tony" says it's Tom's best production.

In addition to Mix the cast includes Jacqueline Logan, Lawford Davidson, Duke Lee, Vivian Oakland, Edward Martindale, Marion Harlan, Raymond Wells, Jack Padjan, Arthur Morrison and Martin Faust.

GEORGE O'BRIEN DONS SAILOR SUIT AGAIN

George O'Brien is back in the navy, in "The Blue Eagle," the Fox photoplay.

He wore the blue jacket and the bell-buttoned trousers during the world war. Also, he won the Pacific Coast Fleet light-heavyweight title.

So, it was only natural that he was the right man to be George D'Arcy, a fighting sailor, in the picture.

Because he happened to have the only dress uit that was properly tailored, Philo McCollough got his first leading role back in the sold Selig days.

Thomas Meighan Stars "Tin Gods" On Howard Screen

"Tin Gods" is the old, yet ever new story of "the man who came back." The tale of a politically ambitious wife and how she wrecked her family.

Tom Meighan is introduced as the husband of a politically ambitious woman who ruins his love by her lack of interest in their home. Due to her neglect, their child is killed, and Tommy leaves for South America.

There, he forgets home, friends and job—taking to drink. A dancing girl places him under her care when he succumbs to a tropical fever. Gradually she shows him the mistake he has made. Soon he recovers his health, goes to work and lives in complete happiness.

"Tin Gods." The title's significant for more than one reason. Principally because it figures as a milestone in Thomas Meighan's career. The picture will have its first showing at the Greater Howard theater all this week, starting tomorrow, and Atlanta theatergoers will be introduced to a brand new Tom Meighan.

Renee Adoree, heroine of "The Big Parade," and Aileen Pringle, a fairy princess of a hundred plots, appear opposite the star in his latest Paramount picture, William Powell, Hale Hamilton and a little boy, Delbert Whitten, Jr., appear in the supporting cast and do capable work.

Gus Edwards' "Gingham Revue," with a bevy of lovely lookers and lively, too, is the Howard's Publix stage presentation this week. The production has all the pep that the two preceding Edwards' shows, "The Garden of Girls" and "Kids in Kandyland" possessed, and then some. The setting is a truly rural one and the show is as refreshing as a breath of new mown hay—sure to please all. The company consists of 15 people, seven principals and a baller chorus of eight girls, Clifton Crane, Florence Forman, Mortimer Chadbourne, Billy Randall, Ruth Betzner, Nancy Corrigan and Arline Coleman are the leading performers.

Some marvelous dancing is contributed by Miss Forman, Mr. Crane and Mr. Randall, while Miss Coleman, Miss Betzner and Mr. Chadbourne hold up the vocal end.

In reverence to the memory of Rudolph Valentino, most beloved of all screen stars, and in commemoration of his supreme achievement as a motion picture star, the Howard has arranged to present this week, in addition to its regular program of entertainment, a reissue of "The Sheik." Rudolph Valentino's greatest contribution to the cinema art, and one of the most sensationally successful pictures in the history of the screen.

BIG BILL SLATED FOR LOEW'S STAGE

Popular jazz music will be pitted against the classics of olden times in "Berlin versus Liszt," the headline act on the new bill of vaudeville, which opens for the week, Monday, at Loew's Grand theater.

Alex Hyde is the star in the new creation and it is of a unique nature. Popular music is played under the "Berlin" banner, while the older classics are played under the "Liszt" side. Irving Berlin's melodies as contrasted with the compositions of the school of Franz Liszt develops a novel theme for the new act.

Assisting Alex Hyde will be several talented musicians and singers, including Leonette Ball, Madaline Soisson, Ralph Belmont and Tom Rolfe. The act is so arranged that it appeals to all classes of taste and provides something for the ear of the trained music lovers as well as for the lover of popular jazz tunes.

Preparations are now under way at Loew's Grand for the celebration of twentieth anniversary week, which will bring a notable program to Atlanta. The week will be observed to celebrate the twentieth anniversary of the advent of Marcus Loew in the show business and the Loew forces have prepared special programs all over the country for the event. The week will bring many good things to the lovers of amusement in Atlanta.

Besides the headline act, "Berlin versus Liszt," this week there will be several other acts of extraordinary merit. Carl Mason and Fritzie Gwynne will appear in their ludicrous black face comedy skit. They also feature several pretty musical numbers.

One of the comedy surprise hits of the bill will be "C. R. 4," a big singing and dancing act presented by four men with special scenic effects. They also produce several dancing numbers.

The Worths will present a novelty musical and dancing skit which will include a speedy and spectacular selection of the best dance creations and music on the xylophone by Ashley Paige at the xylophone.

Bert Ford and Pauline Price in "Dancing On a Silver Thread" will offer a new style of dancing on the wire.

Tom Mix and his wonder horse, "Tony," are shown in America's most scenic section, the Apache trail, in Fox Films latest production, "Tony Runs Wild."

Jacqueline Logan has the faminine lead and others in the cast include Lawford Davidson, Duke Lee, Vivian Oakland, Edward Martindale, Marion Harlan, Raymond Wells, Jack Padjan, Arthur Morrison and Martin Faust.

Alamo No. 1

Conway Tearle, Alice Terry and Wallace Beery Monday and Tuesday at the Alamo No. 1 in "The Great Divide," one of the most faithful expressions of the American west that has ever been seen in the theater. While three men fought to own her, she stood at bay. A lonely girl in the perilous lands of the west, while three men matched their luck and played cards for her possession. Here is love as it is in the primitive, a story of passion and loyalty, untamed as it is real. Romance and action.

Last chapter of the Bar C mystery Wednesday and Thursday. This is said to be the most interesting chapter of this picture. Also Art Mix in "The Lightning Range." First time shown in Atlanta.

Jack Hoxie is on for Friday and Saturday in "The Demon," one of Hoxie's latest pictures. They couldn't stop him with ropes or guns, so they called him "the demon." Supported by the Universal ranch riders. Comedy, "Brainless Horseman."

Forsyth Players Opening Is Set For Labor Day

The illness of a leading member of Forsyth Players, scheduled to open here Monday in "Little Bluebeard," has necessitate postponement of opening for one week, when a special Labor day matinee will be given Monday, September 6.

A new leading woman, a favorite before Broadway footlights for the past season, has been secured to take the place of Miss Bessie Eyton, who was stricken ill, and arrives today for a week's rehearsal with the company.

"We dislike very much to delay opening," officials said, "but we rather delay than have the slightest thing to mar our opening. We have a great company and we are going to give real shows."

With a cast made up of the best stock company players before the public the past three years, Manager Marty Semon promises Atlanta theater-goers the class of entertainment and quality of productions rarely seen in a city the size of Atlanta. Neither money nor trouble was spared in assembling a bevy of pretty and talented women and a number of men whose playing has attracted wide interest in the east.

In next week's opening show the Forsyth will occupy the center of the theatrical spotlight in a production that has been proclaimed one of the liveliest portrayals of French love comedy ever presented in this country. All the amazingly interesting scenes, the embarrassing and tangled positions the play plot leads its stars into and the real humor and catchy lines—all will be seen and heard in "Little Miss Bluebeard."

In the two leads Director Harry McRea Webster has brought to this city a duo of stars whose work has been outstanding in play productions in New York and other big eastern cities. In the supporting cast will be found such musical comedy and stock stars as Gus Forbes, long a noted figure in theatrical work and a great favorite in Atlanta; Bessie Warren, a character woman who has played in the best shows over the past sometime; Lillian Wilck, second lead; Miriam Seymour Hicks, ingenue; Allan Devitt, second male lead; Frank Milam, juvenile; Jay Mulrey, a comedian of the first water, and others equally as well known.

S. K. Fried, stage manager, is an experienced theater man of many years success behind him, while William A. Peters, scenic director, will show the first week's audience just how important scenic effects are in a play of the calibre of "Little Miss Bluebeard."

At the Tudor.

Instead of the usual melodrama or action picture for the first half of this week, the Tudor theater steps away from its usual policy and will present a return engagement of the very popular Harold Lloyd picture, "For Heaven's Sake," which had a record breaking run in one of the larger theaters recently.

Numerous and frequent requests for a return engagement of "For Heaven's Sake" caused the management of the theater to secure this picture for an early showing, and will do so on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

"For Heaven's Sake" is rated as one of the very best of the famous Harold Lloyd comedies, and the management was not surprised at the large number of requests for a repeat showing.

The program for the last half of the week, starting Thursday and continuing through Saturday, consists of one of the best western pictures shown recently, this picture being Bob Custer's latest offering, "The Devil's Gulch," the story of a man who swore vengeance on the bandit, "Twin Hands," for the murder of his brother, and of the whirlwind adventures he went through to achieve his promise. A Fox comedy and International news.

The lady with the beautiful eyes and the highly developed sense of balance is Florence Forman, who furnishes many excellent bits of dancing and other entertainment at the Howard this week in the prologue entitled "The Gingham Review." In the center are two members of the new Forsyth Players. They are Gus Forbes, an old favorite among Atlanta theatergoers, and Lillian Wilck, who will doubtless become as popular as Gus already is. At the right are Mason and Gwynne, who are furnishing fun, wit and humor for our entertainment this week at Loew's Grand theater.

'GINGHAM REVUE,' PUBLIX OFFERING, ON HOWARD STAGE

Another Gus Edwards show is announced by the Greater Howard theater as its Publix stage presentation for this week. This one is called Gus Edwards' "Gingham Revue," probably so designated because there is no gingham to be seen in the production. The truth is, the Howard management says, the production—the feminine part of it—is all costumed in gorgeous silk, the gowns for the most part being fashioned from checkered material which looks like gingham at a distance but isn't. You have guessed it—they are all made of silk gingham, so the Howard theater press department says.

The production is staged in a rural setting and the company consists of 15 people, seven principals and a ballet of eight lively girls. In the cast are Clifton Crane, Florence Forman, Mortimer Chadbourne, Billy Randall, Ruth Betzner, Nancy Corrigan and Arline Coleman—some of them dancers, some of them singers, but all of them real entertainers. The Howard theater press department states further: "Nobody who saw "Kids in Kandyland" at the Howard a few weeks ago will want to miss his new Gus Edwards show." Well, we'll be there for one, even though we don't expect to see a better revue than the one given by the Kandy Kids. We don't think it can be done.

Coming to Metropolitan.

Constance Talmadge's director recently resorted to novel—and drastic—methods to have the star and her leading man, Tullio Carminati, enact a scene in a realistic manner.

Miss Talmadge and Carminati were supposed to leap to their feet in surprise during the filming of "The Duchess of Buffalo," Constance's new comedy-drama of Russian life, coming soon to the Metropolitan theater.

"You're seated on a divan, and when the grand duke suddenly enters the room you spring up, frightened," explained Director Sidney A. Franklin. The scene was made several times, but the action failed to satisfy the director.

Finally, Franklin concealed Count Philip D'Esco, master of properties, behind a screen, and armed with two pistols. At the moment Miss Talmadge and Carminati were to arise Franklin gave a signal and D'Esco fired the six-shooters into the air.

And this time the players' fright was real, although Franklin had some difficulty explaining the necessity of the trick to Constance and the excitable Latin actor, who formerly was leading man and managing director for the late Eleanora Duse.

"The Duchess of Buffalo," a Hans Kraly story of an American dancer who goes to Russia, was produced by Joseph M. Schenck for First National.

West End Theater.

This week's billing at the West End theater promises much to the patrons of that house, with an array of stars seldom equalled. Corinne Griffith, Milton Sills and the famous dog star, Peter the Great, are the week's headliners.

For the first two days of the week dainty Corinne Griffith will star in "The Marriage Whirl," one of her most successful pictures. "The Marriage Whirl" was adapted from J. Hartley Manners' successful Broadway production, "The National Anthem." It is a story dealing with the influence of jazz on the younger generation. It portrays country club life and the night life of New York, in a true and unflinching way.

For a run of Wednesday only, Milton Sills will be seen in "The Making of O'Malley," a vivid heart gripping story of a New York policeman and a society heiress, especially fitted for the stalwart vigor of the star—outstanding exponent of two-fisted roles. Supporting Sills is an exeellent cast headed by Dorothy Mackaill.

Thursday and Friday will bring to the West End screen Peter the Great, dog star, who is featured in "Wild Justice." Filmed in the lonely snow country of the high Sierras, "Wild Justice" presents a rapid succession of exciting events against the majestic background of the snow-clad hills. The story revolves around a mysterious murder and presents Peter the Great in an almost human role.

On Saturday, the feature is "The Flame of the Yukon," a thrilling melodramatic picture of the Canadian northwest, featuring Seena Owen and Arnold Gray.

Palace Theater.

A wonderful canine actor, Peter the Great, appears at the Palace theater Monday and Tuesday in a thrilling story of adventure and heroism in the far north called "Wild Justice." George Sherwood and Frances Teague play the leading roles of the picture in which the great police dog is featured. Patrons of the Palace will feast their eyes on a gorgeous display of feminine apparel Wednesday when "The Perfect Flapper," with Colleen Moore, comes to the popular community playhouse for one day only. This picture, aside from being a beautiful production, is one of the most entertaining of the little star's plays. Phyllis Haver, Frank Mayo and Sydney Chaplin do splendid work in support of Miss Moore.

Corinne Griffith and Kenneth Harlan offer a thrilling love drama with intense heart interest in "The Marriage Whirl" at the Palace Thursday and Friday. The picture is based on a story of the love lost on the stormy seas of country club high life and the night life of gay Paris. Nita Naldi plays the part of the gay Toinette to perfection in support of Miss Griffith.

Saturday the Palace will close the week with Tom Tyler and his buddies in "Wild To Go." In this picture are a quartet of actors that guarantee the fastest, snappiest, western action that ever hit the screen. There will also be another chapter of the Palace serial story on the Saturday program.

At the Cameo.

On Wednesday and Thursday the Cameo offers the return engagement of the latest Corinne Griffith production, "Mlle. Modiste," the story of an American business man who injected American methods into a modiste shop in Paris, caused a girl to lose the man she loved, but made everything come out all right in the end.

In the cast of "Mlle. Modiste" are Willard Louis and Norman Kerry. The picture is a riot of beauty, rivaling even a gigantic fashion show in the elaborateness of its settings and the exquisite beauty of the numerous gowns.

On Friday and Saturday the Cameo brings back "High Steppers," a drama of modern, jazz-mad youth, who trip to the pace set by the devil, and who will have an accounting with him in the end; a story of one man and one woman who tried to fight away from the wild life. In the cast are Lloyd Hughes, Mary Astor and the new sensational beauty, Dolores Del Rio.

Showing Monday and Tuesday at the Cameo is the story of a beautiful woman, tricked in her girlhood days, who was given a second chance to make good, and how she did it. The picture, "Her Second Chance," starring Anna Q. Nilsson and Huntly Gordon, is different in a way, and is packed with dramatic puaches making it delightful in the extreme and very entertaining.

Alamo No. 2.

It is doubtful if any stage play ever has been shown to more people or in more cities and towns than "East Lynne," which William Fox has put on the screen under the direction of Emmett Flynn, and which opens a four-day run at the Alamo No. 2 theater Monday. This perennial favorite has been in the repertoire of every stock company for the last two generations; it has played on Broadway, New York, Podunk Crossing and Hog Eye, Texas; it has thrilled the social elite as well as the gallery god in nearly every country on the globe.

Why?

Because the story of "East Lynne" is one that never gets out of date. It doesn't depend for its appeal on the passing fad or fancy of the moment. It doesn't deal with "votes for women" or "the flapper problem" or "why men leave home" or "whose hootch and why"—no, it isn't the sort of play that dies out when the particular popular complex of the moment gives way to another.

For the story of "East Lynne" is based on intense love interest, on the devotion and self-sacrifice of a woman for her ideal—and what more universal and lasting appeal need a picture or a play have than those elements?

True, there is a tragic note to "East Lynne." But that is one of the reasons the play has lived these decades in the hearts of theatergoers. Audiences like pathos; the most successful plays and books deal plentifully in the more serious, even tragic, sides of life. Yet there must be a leavening of humor to afford relief from what otherwise would be too depressing an atmosphere of gloom.

So "East Lynne" is rounded out with its humorous situations mingled appropriately with the more somber vein of the main story. It is a picture that leaves a lasting impression on the mind and heart.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

HERBERT ADAMS.

HERBERT ADAMS.

Herbert Adams, author of "The Secret of Bogey House" and "The Crooked Lip," was born in London and as a boy tried his hand at writing humorous verses and short stories, several of which found their way into print. He was just over 21 when he wrote his first novel entitled, "The Virtue of Necessity." This was not a success, and Mr. Adams dropped his pen and entered business. His friends jokingly suggested that it was his gift for fiction that made him go in for real estate. Over 20 years later he again started writing and "The Secrets of Bogey House" was immediately popular. (Lippincott.)

The Red House Mystery. By A. A. Milne, author of "Mr. Pin Passes By," also several other stories which were kindly received by the reading public. The introduction tells of the whys and wherefores of his deciding to write a detective story instead of what was expected of him—"a well-known punch humorist was to write a humorous story." And he wrote the story. Some two years afterward Mr. Milne decided he would write a book of nursery rhymes when he was informed that it would be preferable for him to write another detective story, and this he has done—"The Red House Mystery." The following comment is by a well known critic:

"The puzzle of this story is not so much 'who did it,' as 'how it was done.' A problem of identity also enters into it, the solution of which comes as a startling surprise. The scene is a manor house in an isolated English village not far from London. There in the little red house are gathered the owner and a party of friends, and the owner's secretary, Matthew Cayley. The master of the house announced one morning at breakfast that he expected a ne'er-do-well brother from Australia. The party with the exception of Cayley, then depart for the golf links, and an hour later a man is found dead in the office off the hall, near the front door. Through that door there enters Antony Gillingham, a whimsical wandered of money and leisure, in search of a friend of his who happens to be in the party. Gillingham, and his friend, with the assistance of the secretary, Cayley, play Sherlock Holmes and Watson, and considering that they are new at the game, they play it with amazing ability and finesse. Small clues lead to big discoveries—the position of a key in the door, the finding of a collar in a linen basket, are treated with such gravity that an accumulation of these details creates the highest tension, and it is a jaded reader who won't forget both clock and bed and read on to the end."

Our first introduction of Mr. Milne is from the attractive nonsense verse written for the charming Christopher Robin, a contribution that made everybody happy, but one day he discovered his father's preference was a good detective story and that is really the reason that he switched his original talent of entertaining the young and the old as well to writing detective stories that causes thrills and thrills and the burning of the midnight lamp. (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.)

NEW FICTION RECEIVED.

The Strange Adventure of James Shervinton, is the latest book by Louis Becke, whose stories are widely read and enjoyed by the many readers of sea tales. The author's other books are as follows:

By Reef and Palm,
Pacific Tales,
Rodman, The Boatsteerer,
Helen Adair,
Yorke, The Adventurer,
The Adventures of a Supercargo,
Under Tropic Skies.
(J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia.)

The Ivory Graves, a novel by Sir Hector Duff, who weaves a most interesting story around a young Englishman who found himself minus his ancestral estates. Not being the least daunted by the news that he was left penniless he started out to make his way and did not stop until he reach d Africa. It was not long before he had won the respect and the confidence of the natives and upon his deathbed an old warrior, chief of the tribe, told him the secret of the Ivory Graves.

This is not the commonplace mystery story nor does the author draw on his imagination for the setting, for he knows and loves Africa and has given his readers the opportunity of reading a story of this faraway country in which the characters seem realistic. (Doubleday, Page & Co., New York.)

Van Patten. By B. M. Bower, whose stories have placed his name among the popular writers of the Golden West. In this, his last story of the west, he has selected Van Patten as the central figure who, upon his appearance in Paradise, Colorado, found himself behind the bars, but the young cowboy soon leaves the place behind him and makes for the hills. This is the beginning of a story in which love and adventure go hand in hand and with the same amount of action expressed as Van Patten used when with his Texas pony he was scouting for stolen horses and for the villain who had kidnaped the girl he loved. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

King of Dreams. By G. R. Warmington, who writes most interestingly of Imuthes, Prince of the lost House of Egypt. This is a vivid drama of the days of Christ—a Biblical drama that the reader will find entertaining. (Doran's Book.)

The Wrong Letter. By Walter S. Masterman, with a preface by G. K. Chesterton, who writes "I can say with all sincerity, nay, with all solemn responsibility, that this detective mystery deceived me."

This is another mystery story which in attempting to untangle the detectives are led into many strange and mysterious paths. (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.)

The Erratic Flame. By Ysabel de Teresa, is located in New York city, the great metropolis which has now of its own a colorful Bohemia that will soon outrival that of any city in Europe. The author weaves a thrilling story around Alexis, a distinguished violinist, who finds himself bored with his home, wife and his everyday surroundings, so he takes refuge in a deserted mountain, and the story that follows is the romance that the author has woven around a man who is a great genius. The frontispiece is by Simkha Simkhovitch. (The Macaulay company, New York.)

ANDREW JACKSON'S CAMPAIGN

Andrew Jackson's Campaign Against the British or The Mississippi Territory in the War of 1812. By Mrs. Dunbar Rowland.

In the Review of Reviews, Dr. Albert Shaw, its editor, expresses himself with reference to this volume as follows: "It is a very interesting work on Jackson's coast campaign against the British. It seems to have more popular interest than most special research studies in particular periods or phases of American history. For my part, as a reader of books in the field of American history, I should say at once that I would be glad to have it in my own library."

Andrew Jackson was indeed an American and one of the finest of the outstanding citizens of America. He became a national figure in the battle of New Orleans in the second struggle against the British for American independence. This no doubt was a strong influence in his election as president of the United States.

Mrs. Rowland emphasizes the fact that she has brought to light a good deal of new material which throws light on many significant events in American history as she very clearly shows the growth of nationalism in the new states and territories on the southern boundaries of the republic.

The volume contains many interesting pictures of well-known Americans and places surrounded by historical events. (The MacMillan Co., New York.)

ELBERT HUBBARD OF EAST AURORA.

Elbert Hubbard, who is better known as the writer of "The Philistine," and in "The Little Journeys," has been made the real subject of a volume of more than 500 pages. Felix Shay, who for many years was associated with Elbert Hubbard at East Aurora, was general manager of the Roycroft Shops, and, therefore, knows his subject perhaps better than those who only knew Mr. Hubbard as a passing acquaintance.

Mr. Shay has written the story of a man who was more widely known through his writings, and while he combined art and business he was successful in every undertaking. As the writer says, "he conducted a unique enterprise, created opportunities for an entire countryside, and still found time to write the contents of three magazines for 20 years. He further writes of one of the most picturesque characters we have ever known:

"Here is Elbert Hubbard at his prime, writing and studying, learning and teaching, playing catch, pitching hay, riding horseback, working with hand and head, dashing from end to end of the continent on lecture trips, laughing at his enemies, entertaining his hosts of friends. It is a remarkable portrayal of a remarkable character."

Mr. Shay, in looking among his papers preparatory to writing this volume, came across a note written just before he sailed on the ill-fated Lusitania in which he said: "You know me better than any living man."

The writer to make the contents of this volume applicable has made it a book of many moods, full of humor followed by much seriousness. In fact it is an Elbert Hubbard book, for you will study him as you read the pages about him and his work.

Thousands of men and women yearly visited East Aurora to see Elbert Hubbard, or even to get a glimpse of the noted worker, having been a constant reader of his books. The foreword by Henry Ford will be of interest. There are interesting pictures, two of Mr. Hubbard, many cartoons and sketches. (Wm. H. Wise & Co., publishers, New York. Price $3.50.)

POETRY AWARD.

A prize of $100, offered by the Women Poets under the auspices of the Poetry Society of America, for the best book of poems written by a member of the society during 1925, has been awarded to Lew Sarett for his book "Slow Smoke," published by Henry Holt & Co. The judges were Daniel Henderson, chairman; Mrs. May Riley Smith and Harriett Sampson.

The membership of the society, of which Arthur Guiterman is president, includes most of the leading poets of America. The Women Poets is an affiliated group.

Of the four books of poetry finally considered by the judges, three were by western poets. They were Neihardt's "Song of the Indian Wars," Leonard's "Two Lives" and Sarett's "Slow Smoke." The remaining book was Torrence's "Hesperides."

"Sarrett's book," the chairman of the committee states, "appealed to the judges because of the high and even excellence of its lyrical and narrative poetry, its intimacy with earth, its singing quality, limpid beauty and tenderness.

"Also 'Slow Smoke' seemed to the committee a book of outstanding significance because in it the poet has so freshly and charmingly interpreted wilderness life."

CURRENT MAGAZINES.

The Forum for August carries a varied table of content., the first article by Rebecca West, covers several pages, in which she goes rather deeply into the subject of divorce. This is followed by a subject which, is discussed by several well-known writers, — "Is Civilization Contagious?" The first subject, "The Diffusion of Culture," is by G. Elliot Smith; next "The Life of Culture," by Bronislaw Malinowski; Paul Monroe discusses "Student Politics in China," with reference to which he says that the students in China are better informed on modern political topics than is any other class of the nation.

Cardinal Gasquet, whose picture appears in color in the front of the magazine, writes an article on "Revising the Bible," with editorial foreword which the reader should not overlook.

The Atlantic Monthly for August almost presents a tableau in the beginning by selecting the first article "Home!" written by a return American, for just at this time there are numbers of Americans returning from abroad who have been spending sometime sightseeing, and in most instances the sight of Bedloe's island brings up the feeling that, after all, there is no place like home; "Playing At Providence," by William F. Guest; "Protection From the Pol.," by John Barker White; "The New Secession," by Langdon Mitchell; "Soldier and Statesman of the Civil War," are among the many interesting articles that crowd the pages of this issue.

LITERARY DRIFTWOOD.

Ian Hay, known more familiarly as Major Ian Hay Beith, is spending most of the summer at his London home in Berkeley Square. He has an occasional chat with P. G. Wodehouse and "gets about a bit," but the life of so prolific a writer is not a leisurely one. Major Beith, aside from being a popular lecturer, is the author of 15 books.

Charles H. Haskins, Gurney professor of history and political science at Harvard, and former dean of the graduate school of arts and sciences, has been selected as a corresponding fellow of the British academy. Professor Haskins is author of "The Normans in European History."

Capture of Jefferson Davis

By JOHN BEN PATE, Amboy, Ga.

In 1865, when the South was overpowered and lay bleeding at the feet of the Northern conquerors, many of the South's great leaders sought to escape.

Jefferson Davis and several others fled through the South, hoping to escape by reaching southern ports.

In the Davis cortege was a tall, handsome man, who had been a soldier in the Mexican war, vice president of the United States and had also been a candidate for the presidency of the United States and had served several terms as a United States senator from Kentucky and as a true southerner, he joined the secession and was appointed secretary of war, in the cabinet of the Confederate states. I refer to John C. Breckenridge.

Another was a former United States senator and who had been a fiery secessionist and an orator of national reputation.

He was appointed secretary of state in the Confederate cabinet and had won his spurs as a brilliant, dashing, brave, fighting Confederate major general and this man was our own Bob Toombs.

These two men superbly mounted, separated from Davis at Big Creek, seven miles southwest of Hawkinsville and each begged their ex-chief magistrate to follow them, but Davis declined.

The equestrians came on down the old Troupeville road, by James Pate's, and Benjamin Rainey's where they spent the night in the home of Uncle Nas Henderson.

Mansion in Woods.

This home in the pioneer days was a mansion in the backwoods. The old house still stands well preserved. They both escaped capture and in a few days another, a creole, who was once superintendent of the West Point Military Academy, a noted brigadier general of the Confederacy, who defeated McDowell at Bull Run, who would have routed Grant at Shiloh had not Bull reinforced him, who at Charleston defeated Gilmore and Dohlgren, who resisted General Butler and held Petersburg against Grant until General Lee arrived, and contested with Sherman in his march to the sea.

This distinguished gentleman, drank water from the old well in the lane on James Pate's farm, and while reposing in the gentle arms of sweet Morpheus, was sheltered from spring dews or gentle showers by the same roof that protected the other notable men just mentioned.

Rev. Elias Turner, a noted pioneer preacher, was well acquainted with these facts, which he often related.

My father, Bennett Pate, drew the water out of the wells from which General Beauregard drank.

Beauregard also escaped, and a year later while in Europe, declined the chief command of the Roumanian army, and later declined a similar offer from the khedive of Egypt.

Champions of a righteous cause, men who had won laurel leaves that seemingly had faded and lost their luster, who fought a vain fight and worn themselves out, whipping Northern armies.

They lost their wealth and government positions, but won for themselves an everlasting place in the history of a nation, born of pure motives, short-lived and died in defeat, and shall forever live in the memories of all true-blooded southern men and women, for all ages to come.

The Davis party, about 75 in all, traveled in their heavy lumbering wagons on down the river road and reached Abbeville late at night, and paused long enough to search the courthouse, probably for supplies as the Confederacy had adopted the tithing system, for the maintenance of the armies, and all tithes were brought to the courthouse to be sent to the army. But Mr. George F. McLeod, now living, who was in charge of the tithes in Abbeville, had the day before divided it all out to the poor people, knowing the armies had surrendered. Finding nothing, they took the Irwinville road and about daybreak they stopped at the ford of House creek, and cooked breakfast and fed their stock. After resuming their journey, they soon got stuck in an old pond and it was several hours before they got their wagons out of the mire, and this part of the road was so badly damaged that it was never traveled again.

Traveling those three path trails, winding through beautiful forests of towering pines, I sometimes wonder if none of that party didn't call to mind Dr. Pendleton's beautiful poem, "The Land of the Long Leaf Pine."

The roads, bad enough at all times, had been poorly worked during the war, and traveling was slow and tedious, and it was nearly night when Davis struck camp, in a pine grove a few hundred feet below the ford of a branch, a few miles north of Irwinville.

Mr. George F. McLeod, not knowing anything about Davis, was returning to Hawkinsville after having disposed of the tithes that I have just mentioned, when he was met by lieutenant Colonel Pritchard with a detachment of federal calvary.

They asked Mr. McLeod if he had his parole and he told them no, and they replied that he better get one, and then asked concerning the wagons ahead. Mr. McLeod replied that he had seen nothing of them. But when he reached Hawkinsville, he saw great placards everywhere, offering $100,000 for the capture of Davis, and $50,000 each for Toombs and Breckenridge.

Uncle Josiah Keen, now living, was then but a thirteen-year-old boy and went to Players old watermill that day, and passed Davis and on coming back in the late afternoon met the Yankee cavalry in pursuit, who stopped him and inquired concerning their wagons ahead, as they claimed them to be theirs and told him how hungry they were. They rode up and examined Uncle Joe's sack of meal, but as Yankees know nothing about corn bread's value as food rode on.

At Abbeville, the Yankees had divided their squad of soldiers, 300 'tis said went the river road by Bowen's mill and 300 took the Irwinville road. The crowd that went by Bowen's mill traveled faster and at Irwinville found they were ahead, and turned back to meet the other squad and by chance or the guiding hand of providence, met exactly where Davis was camping.

Fired on Each Other.

It seemed that each party of soldiers must have been determined on the destruction of Davis for as they met between daylight and sun-up, they instantly opened fire, and Uncle Josiah Keen says there were two killed and sixteen wounded. And Uncle Jerry Turner said that he heard Yankees the next day say that 40 were killed and wounded. Mr. J. L. Hobby, of Rebecca, Ga., was a small boy and lived in a half of a mile and saw next morning, several dead horses lying around.

The soldiers that were killed at this place were buried in the Stubbs cemetery at Abbeville, Ga. They ripped planks from the ceiling of the courthouse and made coffins, but afterwards they were removed to Andersonville, Ga.

It seems to me that God allowed them to take their vengeance on each other, and that Davis should not be harmed. Uncle Joe Hancock, our venerable ordinary, was a small boy, but heard the guns across Alappaha river. Uncle Joe lived at Coal Springs in Turner country.

Uncle Jonathan Smith, who lived where Rebecca now is, swam Allapaha river to find out the news and to report to his neighbors, the sad intelligence: "Davis is captured." It is commonly reported that Davis, a Mexican war veteran and a former commander, stopped the fighting, by stepping out and commanding that no more blood be shed. That he was the man they were hunting.

It was sheep shearing day at Rev. Jacob Young's, and the neighbors were gathering together to shear sheep. And as usual, each brought his gun. At this point a federal officer rode up with about a dozen soldiers, and saw cribs full of corn, and smoke houses full of meat and plenty of lard.

They told Mr. Young that they would send their wagons after supplies, but the wagons never came. It was supposed by those present, that the officer not knowing the custom of the pioneers to carry guns hurried away, thinking they were planning to take Davis away from them.

On their way back they stopped at Mr. Lewis Ball's and fed away every ear of corn and every bundle of fodder, and took all the meat and flour, leaving Mr. Ball nothing but his large family and one bushel of corn, that he had left at Player's old watermill that day. Mr. Ball lived 11 miles southwest of Abbeville, and was the grandfather of Uncle Berry Turner, and Uncle Berry was a small boy and distinctly remembers it all. He said while the ywere eating, one friendly inclined soldier, came into the house and was examining the old flint and steel rifle, which was accidentally discharged. Uncle Berry said an officer instantly leaped into the building, knocked and kicked the soldier out of the door into the yard.

All the while, Uncle Berry said Mr. Davis silently sat in the wagon. Uncle Berry understood that they had sent Mr. Davis' family back on another road under a military escort.

That night, May 10, they camped in Abbeville, and the old oak still stands towering high in whose boughs the zephyrs of May sang a sad old requiem over the bowed head of a hero of Monterey and Buena Vista, who had occupied a seat both in congress and the senate, who had been secretary of war under President Pierce, also the leader of the democratic party in the senate prior to the civil war, and was the president of a republic, now a lone prisoner of war, in the hands of the government, which in his young manhood he had fought to defend on extraneous soil.

He was cruelly imprisoned, but finally put under bond, and was never tried, for he had not violated the Constitution of the United States.

Although 58 years have passed, yet the battle-scarred trees tell the sad tale of this bloody fratricede of the long ago.

The state now owns the land upon which Mr. Davis and his party camped and were captured by the federal soldiers.

This land is to be beautified by the state in cooperation with the Georgia division U. D. C.

The bugles of Wheeler are to be heard no more, and the war drums have sounded their last Confederate charge.

MESSAGE FROM DIRECTOR OF DAVIS HIGHWAY.

Daughters of the Georgia Division, United Daughters of the Confederacy:

Since my letter to you in March, asking that you contribute as generously as possible to the funds for the Jefferson Davis highway, only 12 of the 120 chapters in the state have contributed to the building and maintaining of our Memorial road to the chieftain of the Confederacy.

While this is comparatively a new phase of our U. D. C. work, it is very important, as a memorial to the only president of the Confederacy, and because of its historical significance.

The route is already accepted officially in the states of Alabama, South and North Carolina, and Virginia by the respective state departments and many historic places of interest marked appropriately, others with temporary markers.

In Georgia this particular route includes practically the route traveled by President Davis and his party through Georgia, including Abbeville, Ashburn, Augusta, Albany, Bartow, Cuthbert, Dawson, Dublin, Eastman, Fitzgerald, Louisville, McRae, Sylvester, Reidsville, Clayton, Vidalia and Savannah.

If the route passes through your county and town mark the route by permanent markers, if possible, or temporarily until a more convenient time. I would also like to suggest that you beautify the highway by planting of dogwood and crepe Myrtle, they will be beautiful during the spring and summer, and so typical of our beloved southland.

Please remember to bring this before your chapter members at your first meeting in September, and send your state chairman a generous check for the Jefferson Davis highway.

Cordially yours,
(Miss) CLAUDIA CULPEPPER,
State Director Jefferson Davis Highway.
Fort Valley, Ga.

P.-T. A. Council To Hold Meeting

The regular meeting of the executive board of the Atlanta Parent-Teacher Association council will be held Monday, August 30, at 10 a. m., Rich's conference room. A full attendance is urged.

The regular meeting of the P.-T. A. council will be held on the first Thursday of September, at 10 a. m., at Edico hall. All presidents are urged to attend this council meeting as there are important matters to discuss, and to have present, if possible, the full quota (five) from their schools.

Cherokee Lodge Wins Honor.

Cherokee Rose Lodge No. 606, Ladies' Auxiliary to the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, had the honor of being one of the two Georgia lodges invited to exemplify the work of this organization at the Dixie Boosters convention held in Memphis, Tenn., August 19, 20, and 21.

In one of the largest meetings ever assembled in the Chisca hotel twenty-three members of this lodge in an impressive ceremony draped the charter and held the memorial services for their beloved sister, Bertie Fulks.

Atlanta P.-T. A. Council To Hold Initial Meeting

The executive board of the Atlanta council, T.-P. A., is called to meet Monday morning, August 30, at 10 o'clock, in Rich's conference room. All past presidents of the council are invited to be present. The following representatives were elected for the term: First ward, Mrs. H. T. Loehr, corresponding secretary; second ward, Mrs. T. E. Robinson; third ward, Mrs. W. C. Byers, treasurer; fourth ward, Mrs. O. H. Matthews; fifth ward, Mrs. Cliff Barnes; sixth ward, Mrs. M. D. Farnham; seventh ward, Mrs. W. L. McCalley, secretary; eighth ward, Mrs. R. L. Cliett, second vice president; ninth ward, Mrs J. C. Malone; tenth ward, Mrs. Gaston Haskins; eleventh ward, Mrs. J. P. Hunt; twelfth ward, Mrs. H. G. Parks; junior high, Mrs. Charles J Foster, president; senior high, Mrs. W. L. Schell, first vice president.

Attention is called to the fact that the council will meet in September, according to a change in the constitution, the initial meeting being called for September 2, at 10 o'clock, at Edico hall, Peachtree and Harris streets.

The president from each school with four other representatives, constitute the council, and a full attendance is urged, as a number of important matters are to be decided. An effective and constructive year's work depends upon your continued cooperation.

MRS. CHARLES J. FOSTER,
President.

Two Cups Are Awarded At Camp Highland Saturday

Atlanta and Arlington, Ga., shared honors on Saturday at Camp Highland when the two silver loving cups offered annually at the camp for the best all-round campers of the season were awarded, one to Miss Audrey Umback, of Atlanta, and the other to Miss Frances (Orange Crush) Martin, of Arlington. The older of the two awards is made each year by William E. Arnaud, prominent attorney and one of Camp Highland's best friends. This cup, which has been given for five successive years, is awarded to the best camper of 16 years or over. The other cup, offered this year for the first time by Dr. J. G. Earnest, one of Highland's pioneer godfathers, is given to the girl under 16 years of age who is adjudged the best camper by members of the camp staff.

As is customary at Highland, the award of the cups came this year as the culmination of the open house day program which marks the closing week-end of camp. After a performance in the afternoon by the Camp Highland players, the cups were presented by Miss Lucy Marvin Adams, former director of Camp Highland. Miss Adams, who has been camp director for the past seven years and who left Highland August 1 to take up her new work with the Y. W. C. A. national board in New York, was in Atlanta Saturday, en route to New York, and it was by the very urgent request of Mr. Arnaud and Dr. Earnest that she arranged to be present at the performance Saturday afternoon and to present the cups.

Miss "Orange Crush" Martin, who was chosen as winner of the much prized Arnaud cup, came to Camp Highland for the first time during the season of 1923, and since that time has been numbered among the camp's most loyal and popular adherents. She spent about a month during June and July of this summer at the camp, and it was her wholehearted participation in the Highland activities and in the Highland spirit that caused her selection as best senior camper for 1926. Miss Martin, who is 16 years of age, graduated this spring from the Arlington High school and expects in the fall to enter Converse college in Spartanburg, S. C. Her parents are prominent citizens of Arlington, Ga., and two of her sisters are also well and pleasantly remembered at the camp.

Miss Audrey Umback, who has the distinction of being the first winner of the Earnest junior cup, is also a camper of long standing, having spent parts of several summers at Highland. This year she has spent the entire summer at camp, and has been an outstanding figure among the many excellent campers who have visited Highland during this season. She has taken part in every program presented at camp this summer and has joined in the athletics and other activities enjoyed at the camp. She is 14 years old, a pupil of the William A. Bass Junior High school, where she stands high in her studies and in other school activities. She is a member of the Bass Girl Reserves, taking a prominent part in this organization.

These two splendid representatives of Camp Highland take their places in the ranks of the other best campers who have been awarded the Arnaud cup in the past four years. These include Miss Dot Morris, of Atlanta; Miss Frances Kellar, of Savannah; Miss Rose Wotton, formerly of England, now of Atlanta, and Miss Mary Mann, of Atlanta.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

SUNDAY AUGUST 29th, 1926

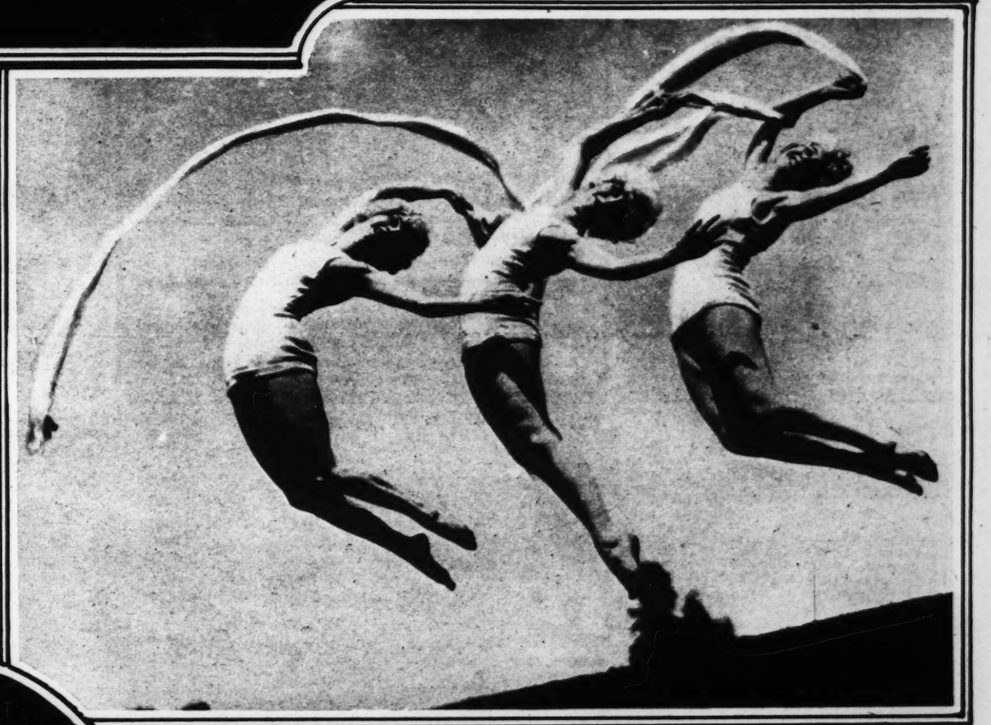

MAN FIGHTS SEA BEAST—James Madden caught a live octopus in the ocean near his home at Venice, Cal. He rented a diving suit and a tank of water, hauled the octopus into the tank and encountered the monster in a hand-to-hand combat to test the fish's strength. He says he had heard much of the tremendous strength of the octopus—and now he believes every word of it!

FOUR FAWNS IN THE DAWN—Marion Morgan dancers rehearsing just after sun-up in a field at Los Angeles. They are portraying the roles of gamboling fawns in leaps which even a fawn might envy.

TREES IN THE WIND—This trio of maidens is interpreting "Trees in the Wind" realistically, with grace and litheness in an early morning rehearsal of Marion Morgan dancers.

FAMOUS GEORGIA AUTHORESS WITH THE TWO GIRLS WHO "ADOPTED HER"—Corra Harris at her Georgia Farm, "In-the-Valley," at Rydal, and the two girls, Bessie and Trannie Raines, who she says in her story about them, "adopted her." Bessie is the manager of her farm, and Trannie her housekeeper. Mrs. Harris in her inimitable style, tells the story of their association with her, in a signed article published in one of the news sections of today's Constitution.

"HOWDY, OSTRICH!" "CLUCK, CLUCK, KID!" This conversation is going on between the largest of the three baby ostriches and Madalyn Bybee, 16 months old. Madalyn's father runs an ostrich farm at Los Angeles. Whenever she wearies of her dolls, she amuses herself with live pets in one of her daddy's cages.

WRECKED BY THE WIND—The Hammond home at Glen Cove, L. I., was struck by the Kansas twister which visited Long Island. Firemen are standing guard over the debris left in the path of the tornado.

A SMILE THAT CAN BE CALLED WINNING—It won for Miss Hannah Gruder $25,000 which was left to her by Dr. Howard Louraine, a wealthy physician, of Chicago. He was first attracted to Miss Gruder, who lives at 235 Eldridge street, New York city, by the blue-eyed girl's sparkling smile when she was only twelve years old. Authorities finally found Miss Gruder after the doctor's death three months ago.

FISHERS WORSHIP IDOLS—Boulogne, France, has honored the king and queen of fishers at a great Sea Harvest. In the procession, Zabelle, the queen, and Batissi, the king of fishers, are followed by queens of beauty from the centers of France.

"CRUSADERS' ENTRY INTO CONSTANTINOPLE," one of the world's greatest masterpieces, was painted by Delacroix. For story of this painting, see today's Constitution Magazine.

BETTY BRONSON AND HER BABIES—Both of these dolls in the arms of the motion picture actress are Cinderella dolls. By merely turning the doll over, Betty changes plain Cinderella into the Fairy Princess. The trick is done by making the doll with a head at either end and by sewing a double-faced dress to the center of the body. The dress drops down, concealing the opposite character. Photo shows Miss Bronson with her doll in its two positions.

WHAT ARE THEIR GOVERNORS SAYING?—Mayor Jimmy Walker, of New York city, welcomes Miss Georgia and Miss South Carolina, "old-fashioned belles of the south," to the Philadelphia exposition. An onlooker asked if the Carolina governors were still carrying on that historic conversation about the length of time between juleps.

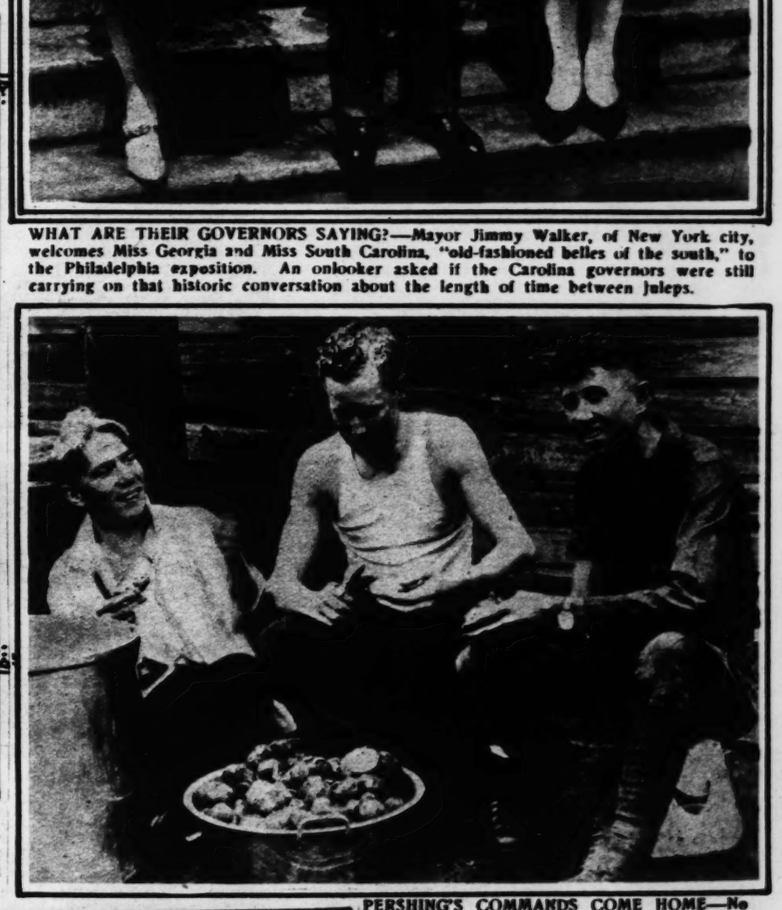

IN ADVANCE OF OPERA—A gorgeous opera wrap from Paris. Material, beige shade. Fur trimmings are of chinchilla. Models of this style will be in fashion this season, with many other wraps to be shown in Atlanta style centers.

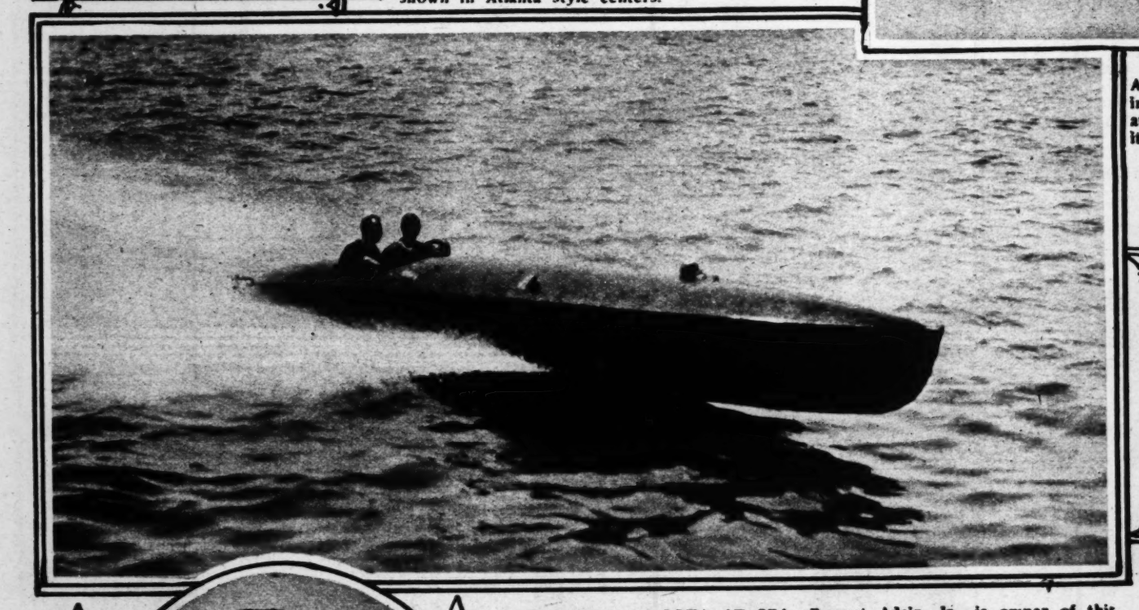

HE'S A SEA-COWBOY—Captain Charlie Thompson, fisherman and guide of Miami, has lassoed a seacow in the shoal waters of the Florida keys.

OVER THE COP—Miss "Jakie" Aman has chosen this unusual jumping-off place for her athletic training at Washington, D. C. She can stand it if the motorcycle officer can.

PERSHING'S COMMANDS COME HOME—No telling how many soldiers have been put on K. P. (Kitchen Police) by General Pershing. Now the general's son is seen peeling potatoes on K. P. Many a man who felt the army hadn't done right by him when he was sent into the mess hall for duty may find some satisfaction in seeing Warren Pershing, the central figure of the three, working with his buddies at the Citizens' Military Training camp in Fort Snelling. Hard at it, yez galoots; heah comes the sergiat!

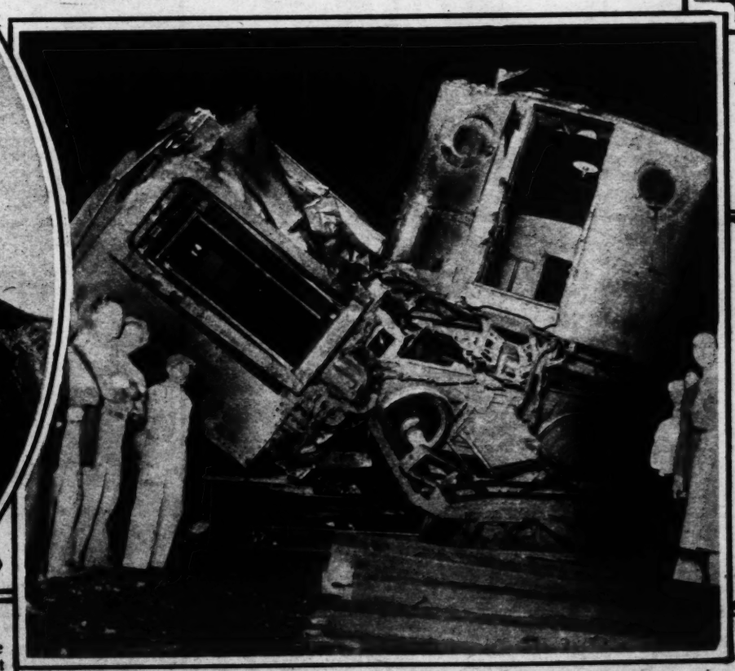

THE SARA DE SOTA AT SEA—Forrest Adair, Jr., is owner of this speed boat which raced in the gold cup race, a national event off Long Island.

SHE'S CHAUFFEUR AT 18—Mary Elizabeth Pearson, student at Swarthmore college, Pennsylvania, works between college terms as a taxicab driver. Fares say she is clever at the wheel.

ELLSWORTH BECOMES HEIR—Backer of the Amundsen expedition over the north pole has just inherited half of the more than two million dollar estate left by his father, the late James W. Ellsworth.

SIX DEAD, SIXTY INJURED—When the Long Island railroad's "Millionaire Special" ran into an open switch at Calverton, L. I., dead and injured were found inside the two "death cars" shown in the photograph of the wreck.

REMEMBER THE FIRST ONE?—The phonograph was considered a wonderful thing 49 years ago. On the anniversary of the invention of the talking machine by Thomas A. Edison, his employees and assistants have presented him with a gift. He is shown with straw hat in hand at his home in Lewellyn Park, N. J. At his left, Mrs. Edison and at her left, their son.

28 DOGS PER MINUTE—That's the record set up by the winner of this hot-dog contest among New York girls.

STRIKING PICTORIAL EVIDENCE OF ATLANTA'S REMARKABLE DEVELOPMENT is presented in these two aeroplane views of the new north side business section bounded by Carnegie way on the south, Ivy street on the east, Baker street on the north and Spring street on the west. The two photos were made only three years apart. Top photograph taken three years ago—bottom, from approximately same position, only a few days ago.

Another airplane view showing Atlanta great retail district south of the viaduct and the location of the vast improvements scheduled for that section will appear in a forthcoming issue of The Constitution's Pictorial Gravure.

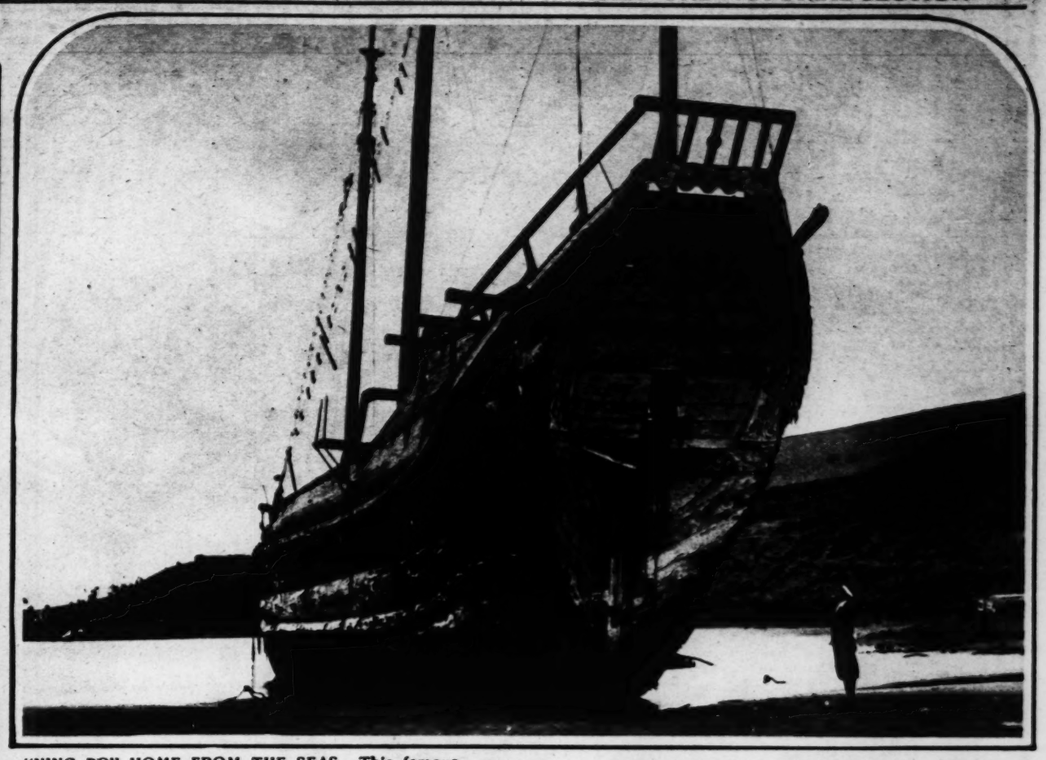

In the top, photograph taken of the great Elks' parade at its international convention in Atlanta three years ago. The excavation marked (1) is the site of the new R. H. Macy & Co. building, progress of the work on which is shown in (1) in lower photo. (2) in upper picture is shown in the new Wynne-Claughton building, (2) in lower. The Congregational church, corner Ellis street and Carnegie way, is shown in (3) in both pictures. The new Capital theater, under construction, is shown in (4) lower photo. (5) in lower is the new Keith theater fronting Cain street. (6) in top photo is site of Henry Grady hotel, which completed is shown at (6) lower. (7) lower, new Atlanta Athletic club. (9) lower, new Norris building on Peachtree street. (10) in both pictures, Majestic building. (11) in lower, location new J. P. Allen & Co. building, now under contract. (12) in both, Winecoff hotel. (13) proposed Candler garage fronting Carnegie way and Spring, with entrances to new theater and to Macy's. (14) Red Rock building. (15) top and bottom, Masonic temple. (16) bottom, Capital City club. (18) both, Howard—(19) both, Grand—theaters. (20) both, First Baptist church. (21) both, Aragon hotel.

FLEET OF SEVEN SUBS LAUNCHED IN ATLANTA ATHLETIC CLUB'S NEW POOL—Not submarines—none of those dreadful nautical things, although each of these seven mermaids does take to water as lightly as a sailboat—but sub-debs. They were snapped by Kenneth Rogers, the lucky photographer of The Constitution, guests at Miss Margaret Snelling's swimming pool party, the delightful occasion which opened the season in the pool of the handsome new town clubhouse of the Athletic club. Reading from left to right, sitting: Katherine Moon, Martha Pritchard, Jane Tway, Marguerite Snelling, Emily Elder; standing: Jacqueline Moore, Burnardette Clark and Elizabeth Little.

"NING PO" HOME FROM THE SEAS—This famous Chinese pirate craft will be junked, unless yachtsmen of southern California succeed in having the weather-beaten bark saved. Launched in 1769 and brought to this country in 1911 for exhibition, "Ning Po" has rested on the sands of Catalina islands for more than 10 years. The ship is built of solid teak. Her masts are solid tree trunks of ironwood.

A STAGE DECORATION—America has no more deserving producer of theatricals and motion pictures than Marcus Loew. His ability and sympathy for the public has been recognized by France in the French Legion of Honor decoration which General Maxine Mengendre is pinning upon Mr. Loew's lapel.

THIS SHAWL COST $6,000—And is worth it! One year of painstaking effort was required to fashion the shawl by hand in Madrid, famous for the fancy needlework of its peasants. Miss Marguerite Gill, of Los Angeles, brought the shawl from Spain.

PUGILIST McLARIN AND 13 SPARRING PARTNERS—Jimmy McLarin, prize fighter of the coast, boasts a wife and 12 children. When his opponents in the ring fail to make it interesting for McLarin, he always can find an argument at home, for the entire family shares Jimmy's plucky spirit. Reading from left to right, top row: Harold, Minnie, Margaret, Sammie (also a pugilist), Mrs. McLarin, Jimmy, Olive and Ethel. Bottom row: Jack, Robert, Mildred, May, Kathleen and Susie.

MURIEL AND HER BROTHER HURDLE—Miss Muriel Gunn taking the hurdles with her brother, Norman. She is the 19-year-old athlete who twice broke the record for the women's broad jump at Stamford bridge. She has won also the first prize offered by the Mitcham Conservative association for an original speech against socialism. She holds two certificates for piano playing, is an accomplished needlewoman and a dandy pastry cook.

KOALA, BUT NOT COCA—This Koala bear is said to be the only one of its kind in the United States alive. It is in Los Angeles, Cal., is four years old and weighs just 11 pounds. Those familiar with the habits of the creature declare that it never drinks water.

A DAM THAT WILL BREAK THE FORCE OF FLOODS—Santa Anita dam, smallest of six dams under construction in accordance with the country flood control program, is half completed. The dam is to be 225 feet high, crossing the canyon 75 feet at the base and 600 feet at the top. Water will back up to a distance of three-fourths to one mile.

DECORATED, THEN DESERTED—Edward Payson Weston, veteran hiker, shown in the center of the photograph, was taken into the home of Sergeant Robert Smith, of Brooklyn, after Smith had found the aged pedestrian, once decorated by King Edward VII, in straitened circumstances.

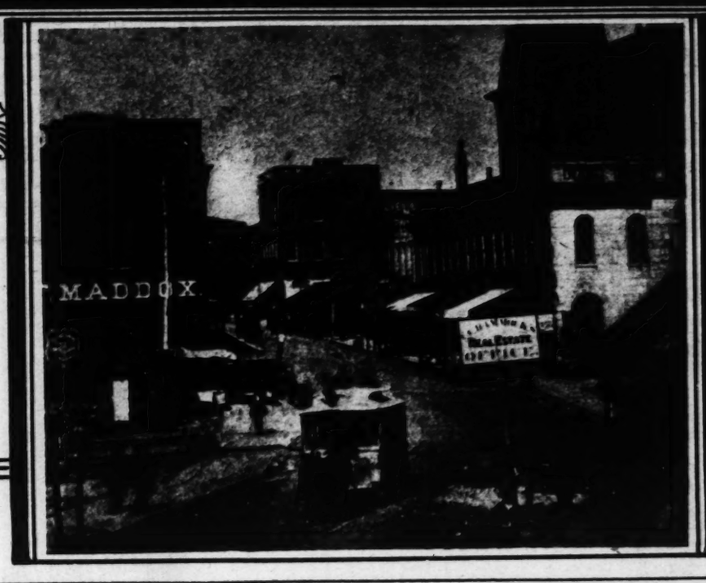

HAVE YOU A DIVING APPARATUS WITH YOU?—You can carry one like this in your vest pocket, just in case you should need it during the day. Commander Le Prieur, of the French navy, has put his idle hours to practical use by inventing this pocket-diving device. Compressed air tube attaches to back and operates unassisted with sufficient oxygen for 10 minutes' submergence. The new invention does away with the old helmet and air tube.

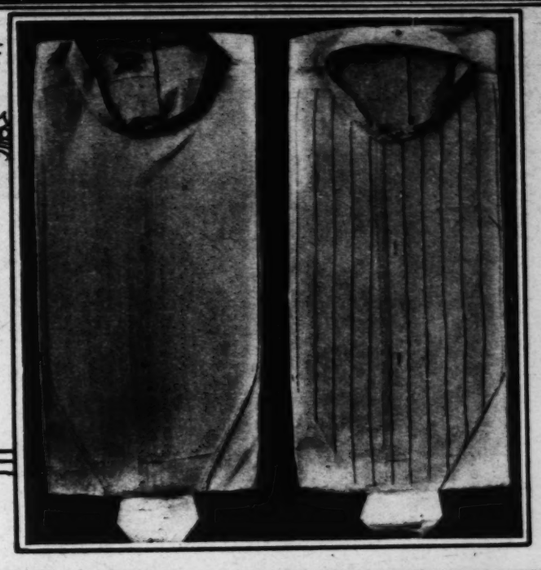

24 DOZEN EGGS FALL 1,500 FEET—And none breaks! This delivery of eggs by parachute was accomplished at Curtiss field, New York. Cup plates between layers of eggs and other conventional improvements in packing assisted the record-breaking shipment.

Right—Atlanta in the eighties when shirts had stiff fronts. Left—The "boiled shirt" of 1875, and a gay stripe of 1883. Now on display in Muse's windows.

Right—A full dress Manhattan shirt that took in the bright lights in 1885; and a prized fancy stripe of '85. These shirts are on exhibit at Muse's.

MUSE'S Presents Manhattan SHIRTS for Fall 1926

In the gallant eighties, when Atlanta was heroically coming up after the Civil War (and Muse's was starting in a one-story store on Whitehall)—the best known shirt was Manhattan—
For Fall, 1926, we still find that the best known shirt is—Manhattan.
So you know how gladly we announce "Manhattan Shirts at Muse's"—along with Manhattan's other worthy products—pajamas and Mansco Underwear—introducing the correct style tendency—
The Manhattan range complete—
Tomorrow will be a mighty interesting time to drop into Muse's—and get into Fall.

A-top is pictured the Fall shirt of pure silk—showing figured jacquards woven in between straight sparkling lines—a new Autumn note! It's collar matches. It is $10.50.

Right—This Manhattan of percale shows the new Waverly Lone stripe—one of the novelty ideas that are a marked feature for Fall. It has stiff collar to match, $2.85.

Left—This woven madras, with clipper figures introduced between single stripes, shows the subtle ornamentation that is "the best thing" for Fall. $4.50.

Pajamas of brighter colors and novel effects—printed as well as woven—with collars attached in many instances—are the style note of Fall. The pajama pictured to the left, is a broadcloth with bright diamonds on a subdued checker tone. $5.

The Muse Shops in Hotels Henry Grady and Biltmore accompany our main store in showing the Manhattan Shirts, Pajamas and Underwear.

MOVIE ACTRESS IN COSTUME—Marian Nixon, Universal actress, wears an elaborate costume of silver cloth, souffle and ostrich—an evening gown. Plain silver pumps with rhinestone buckles are worn with hose to match. Every one of Miss Nixon's fashionable pieces of apparel is obtainable in similar form and style at Atlanta's great merchandise palaces.

110—AND HAPPY—Aunt Sarah Jett, 110 years old, is a real old-time Georgia "mammy," living at Decatur, Ga. She was the "mammy" who nursed E. L. Jett, former head of Atlanta's police force. Aunt Sarah was given to Chief Jett's mother as a wedding present.

A MERMAID AT 67—Mrs. Anna Van Skie, of Santa Monica, Cal., performed her usual 10-mile swim on her 67th birthday. From Venice, Cal., she swam five miles up the coast and back in about nine hours.

ROCK-A-BYE—ALMOST GOOD-BYE—Had it not been for the tree Miss Olive Stone, noted parachute jumper, might have been dashed to death in a Crystal palace leap in London. She hung from her perch for an hour before she could be rescued.

HEADDRESS OF HELENE. For opera and formal wear, this style is of Spanish origin. It was shown for the first time at a fashion salon in Paris. Material is gold net, spangled with rhinestones and pearls, a single pearl clasp pinned on the crown.

"GOOD LUCK, TRUDY!"—Lillian Cannon, another aspirant for honors of the channel, wishes Gertrude Ederle success as the American girl starts for the sea.

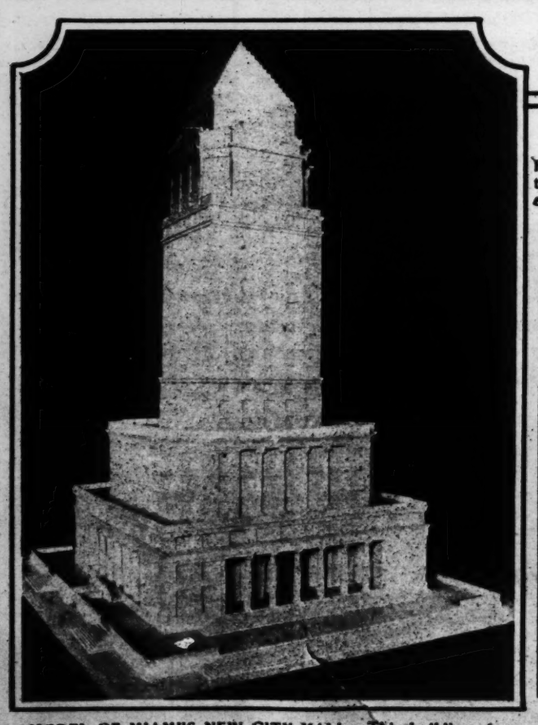

FRANCE COVERS HER WITH FLOWERS—Upon her return to France, after swimming to England, Miss Ederle was covered with congratulations and bouquets. Here she is in Paris.

GERTRUDE TAKES THE WATER—At Cape Griz Nez Miss Ederle walks into the water and begins her conquest of the waves—a feat never before achieved by any woman in the world.

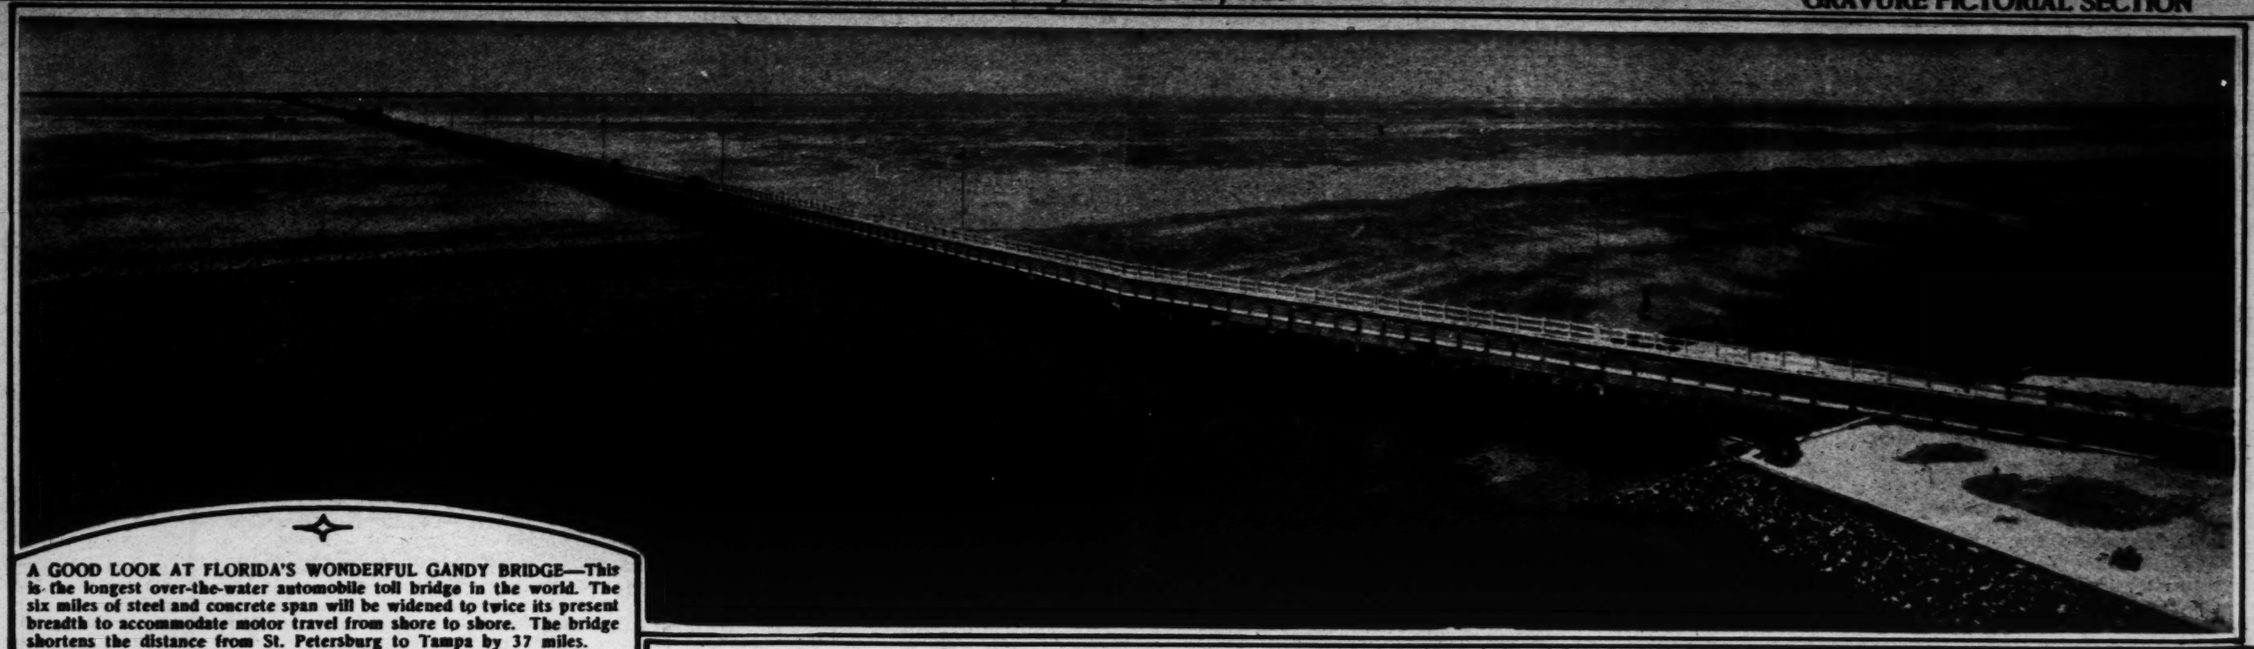

SWEET MEETS SWEET—Miss Martha Lawson, charming visitor to Asheville, N. C., being complimented with a vacation greeting—the NORRIS Variety Box of exquisite candies.

MODEL OF MIAMI'S NEW CITY HALL—This building, for which A. Ten Eyck Brown is architect, is 27 stories high with a summit pyramid approximately 50 feet in height

FANNIE HURST AND HER HUSBAND—Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Danielson are shown as they appeared on returning from abroad. Mrs. Danielson is Fannie Hurst when she writes fiction.

A GOOD LOOK AT FLORIDA'S WONDERFUL GANDY BRIDGE—This is the longest over-the-water automobile toll bridge in the world. The six miles of steel and concrete span will be widened to twice its present breadth to accommodate motor travel from shore to shore. The bridge shortens the distance from St. Petersburg to Tampa by 37 miles.

FRECKLES

OTHINE

Removes This Ugly Mask

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine from any drug or department store and apply a little of it night and morning and you should see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful complexion.

Be sure to ask for double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove your freckles.

BUT WE'LL REMEMBER HER! A fellow might forget even such a well-known person as Addison Sims, of Seattle, before this young lady would slip from mind. She is Miss Leona Fengler, "Miss Seattle," the Washington city's entry in the national beauty contest in Atlantic City.

Millions know how to Keep Slender

In every crowd now note how slenderness prevails. Fat has become the exception. It is a blight to beauty, health and fitness, and people have learned to combat it. Go ask your friends how they lost their fat and follow their example.

The leading way for 19 years has been Marmola Prescription Tablets. No abnormal exercise or diet is required. People simply take four tablets daily until the weight comes down to normal.

Those delighted users have told others until the use of Marmola has spread the world over. Your friends will tell you if you ask them. People who know are using over a million boxes yearly.

Go try Marmola—you owe that to yourself. Watch the weight come down, the vitality go up. Note the change that appears in a month. You'll be glad you learned about it.

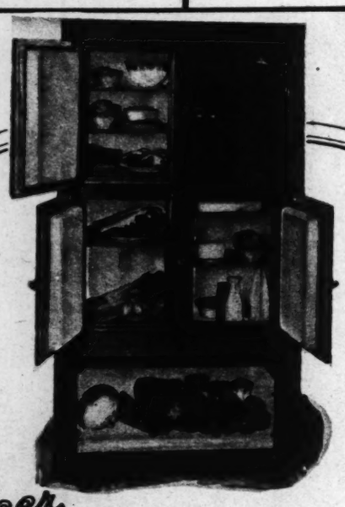

All druggists sell Marmola at $1 a box. Or it is mailed direct in plain wrappers by Marmola Co., 1760 General Motors Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

THE PRESIDENT

A Big Six Custom Sedan (for seven)

$2245

f. o. b. factory, including 4-wheel brakes, disc wheels, broadcloth or Chase mohair upholstery, and other equipment as listed

Standard Six Custom Sedan $1385
Big Six Custom Brougham $1985

THE PRESIDENT, a Studebaker Big Six Custom Sedan, was designed, built, and christened in honor of America's executives—the only automobile ever expressly created for men at the helm of the nation's industries.

The President is replete with all the characteristics of a custom creation—designed with a long, low-swung custom body on a 127-inch wheelbase—lacquered in rich ebony with a belt of thistle green striped with Siskiyou yellow, or in Croaton green with an ebony belt delicately striped in ivory. Equipped with disc wheels, four-wheel brakes and a ventilating system (exclusively Studebaker) which insures fresh air without drafts or moisture—enriched with the silvered figure of Atalanta above its radiator—and powered with the quiet Studebaker L-head motor which recently set a new transcontinental record by crossing from New York to San Francisco in 86 hours and 20 minutes.

The President not only solves the problem of keeping up appearances consistent with executive position, but simplifies the problem of keeping down expenses. The sky is the limit as to quality in The President—but we come back to earth to put a price on The President—$2245—which is the only departure from custom precedent in The President!

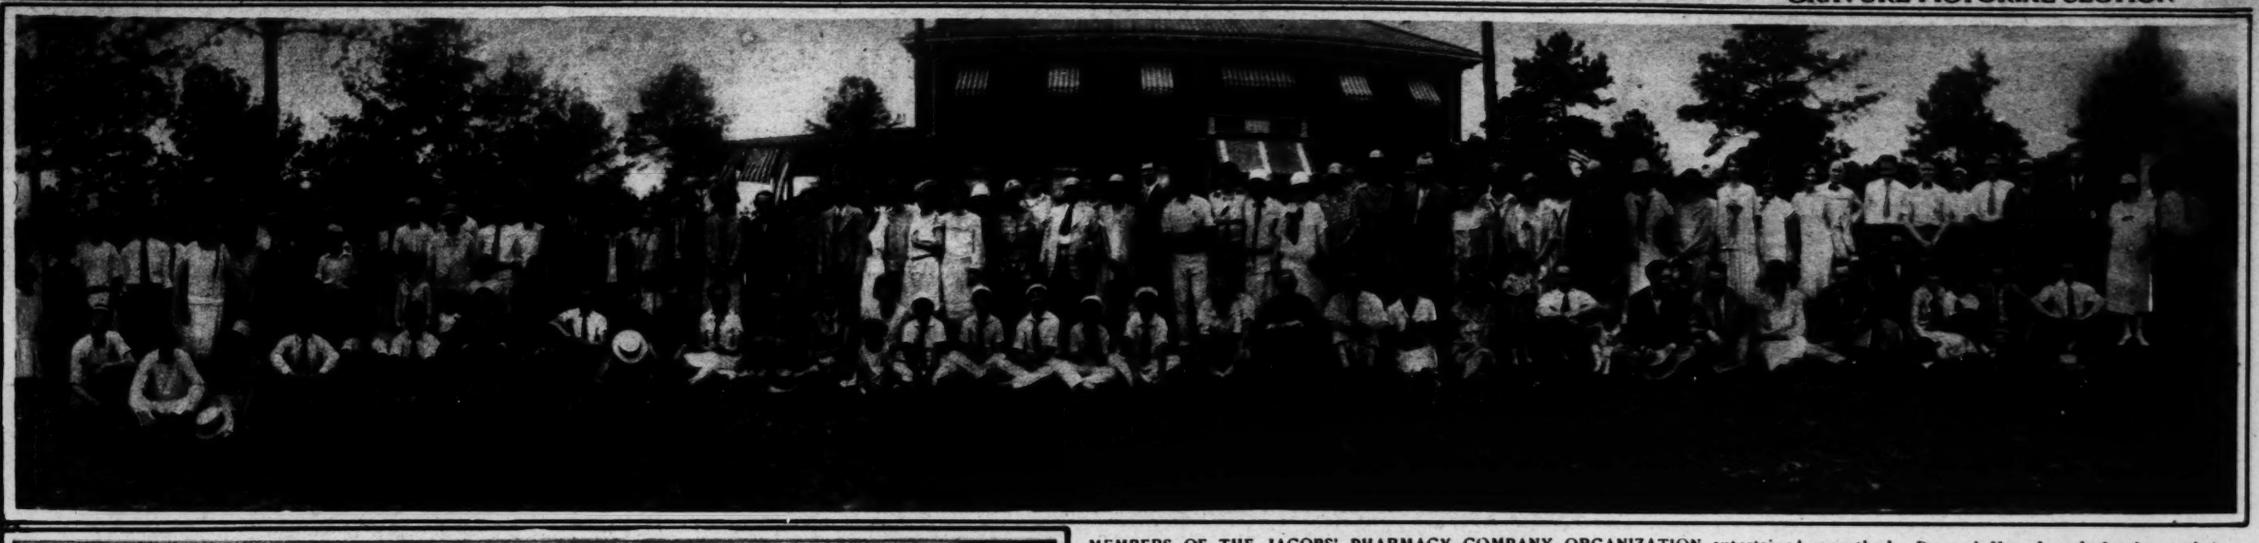

We invite you to see what Studebaker's One-Profit facilities have achieved.

Equipment

No-draft ventilating windshield, exclusively Studebaker; nickel-plated bumper and bumperettes; Watson Stabilators; engine heat indicator and gasoline gauge on the dash; coincidental lock; oil filter and air purifier; automatic windshield cleaner; double rear-view mirror; vanity case; smoking set; clock; arm rests; toggle grips; dome light automatically turned on when right rear-door is opened; four-wheel brakes; full-sized balloon tires; and two-beam acorn headlights, controlled from steering wheel.

No More Gray Hair

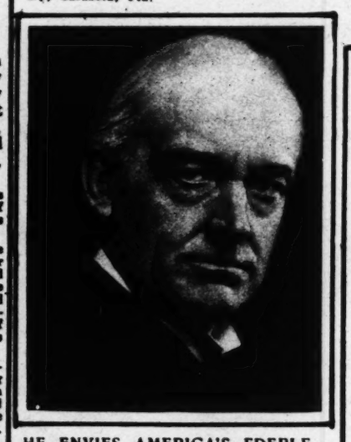

Don't think your hair need remain streaked with gray—or even very gray. For more than ten years, gray haired men and women, whose hair at one time was brunette, blonde, red, auburn, brown or black, have used Kolor-Bak with entire satisfaction, and are no longer gray.

Kolor-Bak is a clean, colorless liquid that has restored youthful appearance to hundreds of thousands. As easy to apply as water, it requires no experimenting with samples of your hair.

Just ask your dealer for Kolor-Bak. The one bottle is for all hair, no matter what shade or color. Results often appear in a week. And with the disappearance of the gray hair, the tonic properties of Kolor-Bak make it splendid to use for dandruff and falling hair. Its tremendous success is clearly shown by the sale of nearly 3,000,000 bottles, which proves its superiority.

Dealers everywhere sell Kolor-Bak with guarantee to return your money if it does not bring desired results. No excuse now for any woman to look old, or any man to be considered too old for employment. Your druggist, or any store where toilet goods are sold, carries Kolor-Bak. Ask for it today.

GASOLINE ALLEY

-King

I SUPPOSE THERE HAVE BEEN A LOT OF PROSPECTORS DOWN IN THIS CANYON, SQUINT.

LOTS OF 'EM, WALT. NONE OF 'EM STUCK IT OUT THOUGH EXCEPT BOBCAT BILL.

HE LANDED HERE ABOUT '67 AN' STAID FOR FORTY YEARS LOOKIN' FOR GOLD. HE KNEW IT WAS HERE AN' WENT UP AN' DOWN, IN AN' OUT TILL HE'D TIPPED OVER OR PECKED AT EVERY ROCK IN ZION CANYON.

HE HAD A BURRO HE'D PICKED UP WILD IN THE KAIBAB FOREST AN' THAT BURRO KNEW AS MUCH ABOUT LOOKIN' FOR GOLD AS BILL DID.

THEY WAS GREAT PALS. SPRING AN' FALL THEY'D MAKE A TRIP UP TO CEDAR CITY AN' TRADE A LITTLE DUST AN' A FEW SKINS FOR POWDER, TOBACKER AN' FLAPJACK FLOUR. OTHERWISE HE NEVER SAW A LIVIN' SOUL.

WILDCAT BILL ALWAYS PACKED AS MUCH ON HIS BACK AS BESS THE BURRO DID. SHE USED TO RETALIATE BY DOIN' ALL SHE COULD FOR BILL. BESS GOT SO SHE COULD KEEP THE FIRE GOIN' AN' TAKE OFF THE COFFEE WHEN IT HAD BOILED ENOUGH.

ONE DAY WHILE BILL WAS PANNIN' OUT SOME MUD THAT HAD WASHED DOWN A LITTLE GULLY, SHE GOT TO LOOKIN' AROUND ON HER OWN. SHE WANDERED AWAY AN' PAWED UP AN' DOWN A OLD DRY CREEK BED.

SUDDENLY SHE GAVE A SNORT. FOR SHE'D UNCOVERED WHAT, FROM DESCRIPTION, WAS THE RICHEST FIND IN THIS PART O' THE WEST. YELLOW NUGGETS AS BIG AS GUM DROPS IN A NEST O' WHAT LOOKED LIKE GOLD SUGAR.

SHE COVERED IT ALL UP QUICK AN' THEN HURRIED OFF TO BRING BILL. HERE'S THE SAD PART OF THE STORY. BILL HAD FELL OFF A ROCK AN' BROKE HIS NECK.

AIN'T THAT TOUGH LUCK! HUNT FORTY YEARS AN' ALMOST HAVE IT IN HIS HANDS AN' MISS IT BY AN' HOUR!

IT CERTAINLY IS THE TOUGHEST KIND OF LUCK! WHAT HAPPENED TO BESS, SQUINT?

WELL, BESS PINED AROUND ABOUT A WEEK, THEN SLUNG BILL'S BELONGIN'S ON HER BACK AN' DROPPED 'EM AT THE NEAREST RANCHER'S PLACE ABOUT THIRTY MILE UP THE RIM.

THEN SHE HIT OUT FOR THE KAIBAB. AN' NOBODY'S EVER BEEN ABLE TO FIND THAT GOLD SHE DISCOVERED.

WAIT A MINUTE, SQUINT! IF WILDCAT BILL DIDN'T KNOW SHE'D FOUND GOLD HOW WAS ANYBODY ELSE TO KNOW THAT SHE HAD?

SEEMS TO ME YOUR STORY DOESN'T HOLD WATER.

WELL NOBODY EVER WOULD OF KNOWN ABOUT IT EXCEPT THEY FOUND THE WHOLE THING IN A DIARY SHE'D BEEN KEEPIN' AN' HID UNDER A STONE NEAR BILL'S LAST CAMPFIRE.

CYNTHIA DELMORTON'S Mistake

by Sapper

Her Dazzling Beauty Left a Swath of Broken Hearts in Its Wake; Then, One Day, She Met Her Match and the Fun Began.

But, until that blissful day arrived, she saw no reason why good looking men should not go wild about her and throng her charming drawing room.

CYNTHIA DELMORTON was a singularly beautiful girl and, for all I know, is so still. Her figure was perfect; her face almost flawless. There were critics who said her nose was a trifle too long; there were others, on the contrary, who denied the fact with oaths and curses. But seeing that she had been painted by three of London's leading artists, who one and all, declared that she was the most perfect thing they had even seen, the nose question cannot have been very serious.

Her origin was a little obscure. She lived in a charming house in South Audley street with an elderly lady who rejoiced in the name of Aunt Hester. Moreover, she undoubtedly had money—lots of it. There was a rumor that the late Mr. Delmorton had really been Smithson & Co., Ltd., one of those charitable firms whose aim in life is to ease other people's financial troubles by lending them money on note of hand alone. And if such a base rumor over the lovely Cynthia could possibly be true, she had certainly possessed the most notorious bloodsucker in London as her father —a man without a tinge of mercy or a thought of compassion.

The fact, however, remained that she was extremely wealthy. Which was a far more important matter than the method by which the money had been obtained. And the result had been that divers men of all ages and positions had laid their hands and hearts at her disposal. Some of them had been genuinely infatuated by her beauty; others by her bank balance. But one and all of them, when their offer was turned down, thanked almighty Heaven for their escape. Except one poor boob, who blew out his brains. . . . For the beautiful Cynthia had one very unpleasant trait, which never manifested itself until the last moment. She would lead a man on until he was well-nigh crazy—and then laugh in his face.

Of course, when the man she did decide to marry appeared there would be no laughter. At least, if there was, it would be carefully concealed. But so far that lucky being had not arrived. And when he did he would have to be something pretty special. Cynthia Delmorton was essentially not one of those who—to paraphrase the well-known line—had danced with princes and kept the common touch. Nothing under an earl would be good enough for her final choice—and not a modern creation, at that. But until that blissful day arrived she saw no reason why good-looking men should not go wild about her and throng her charming drawing room.

And then, one spring, that complete disrespecter of persons, influenza, descended upon the house. Within an hour so did Sir William Harbottle, London's most fashionable and futile doctor. He consumed a glass of port and ate a biscuit and with deadly accuracy diagnosed the disease. He continued to descend at ten guineas a time, more port and more biscuits, and finally pronounced his lovely patient convalescent.

"But, my dear young lady," he announced as he stroked her arm, "we require setting up. We are a little run down."

The "we," needless to state, was a pleasing conceit of Sir William's; no one regarding his ample presence need have panicked unduly.

"We will take a sea voyage."

"Dear Sir William," she murmured, "a sea voyage."

"Where the bracing ozone will set us up again; restore our wasted tissues; remove our lassitude. And then we shall return fresh and invigorated for the ardors of June in London."

And the more she thought of the idea the more she liked it. Up to date her sea voyage had consisted of occupying a cabin while crossing the channel; this was going to be something quite different. Some new frocks, a flirtation or two—there was bound to be some man on board who would fill the bill—and a real rest cure.

Aunt Hester proved the first obstacle. For that usually malleable woman, having heard of Cynthia's decision, stuck in her toes and jibbed definitely. Nothing would induce her to go on the sea. She loathed it and detested it. She was always seasick —and, in short, rather than do so she would resign her position as Cynthia's companion.

"If you must have some one with you, my dear," she said, "why not ask Marjorie? She's a nice girl, she won't get in your way, and you'll be doing her a real kindness as well."

Cynthia cogitated. Yes, Marjorie Blackton would do. Better, perhaps, than Aunt Hester. Her idea of a companion was what most people would describe as an unpaid maid; and if her aunt was continually seasick she would be more nuisance than she was worth.

"Write and ask her," she said thoughtfully. "Tell her that as far as clothes are concerned she can send any reasonable bill in to me."

Marjorie Blackton was an old school friend of hers. At least she was the only girl at the very expensive place at which Cynthia had been "finished" whom she did not actually dislike. For even at that age she neither loved nor was loved by her own sex. And for some strange reason Marjorie bestowed on her one of those peculiar adorations which arise and flourish in girls' schools.

Strange, because it would have been impossible to find two more totally dissimilar characters. Marjorie was everything that her idol was not. Unselfish, utterly lovable, frank and open, she was the exact antithesis of Cynthia. And the latter, though slightly flattered for a time, soon took advantage of the state of affairs. She practically made the younger girl her fag. It was "Marjorie, do this," and "Marjorie, fetch that," from the beginning of term until the end. And the same relationship had continued after they left school, though necessarily not to the same extent.

Then, quite suddenly, Mr. Blackton lost most of his money, and for a while Cynthia had debated whether to ask Marjorie to come as her companion. As far as she was capable of affection for anybody, she was fond of her; but, having given the matter due consideration, she had come to the conclusion that an older woman would be more suitable from every point of view. And so she dismissed Marjorie from her scheme of things, as was her custom when a person was no longer of use to her. Now she proposed to bring her back temporarily into that scheme, a proposal which met with the other girl's delighted approval as soon as she heard of it.

And so, some three weeks later, the two of them stepped into the boat train at Waterloo bound for Southampton. The most luxurious cabins in the steamship Ortolan, 12,000 tons, of the Union Steamship line, had been engaged. A number of immaculately clothed young men, who had pleaded in vain to be allowed to accompany them as far as the ship, clustered around the carriage door.

"Now, you must all promise to be good while I am away," said Cynthia, impartially. "And when I come back in June——"

It was at that moment that the train began to move, but she managed that every member of the group should think that her unfinished sentence was addressed to him personally.

"Thank God, that's over, my dear," she said languidly. "What a bore they are! Do give me my rug, will you?"

She looked up with a sudden frown. A man was standing in the door leading into the corridor. Moreover, he seemed to be on the point of depositing a weatherbeaten suitcase on one of the spare seats.

"This carriage is engaged," she remarked haughtily.

The man turned around with a smile.

"Am I to understand," he said, "that you are the proud possessor of six tickets? I'm really very sorry, but this is the only compartment in the train that isn't full."

"I gave orders that I required a carriage to myself," she said with her most frenzied look.

"Dear me," he answered politely, "if it wasn't for the fact that you can't give orders for anything of the sort, I should say that some one had blundered. However, what would you like me to do? Stand in the corridor, or go into the guard's van?"

"If you persist in intruding," she said icily, "I would prefer that you do so in silence."

"Why—sure," he remarked genially. "Doubtless we shall have lots of time for conversation before we get to the cape."

He buried himself behind a newspaper, leaving Cynthia gasping. The cape? Was this odious mortal going to the cape with her? True, he was young and of pleasing appearance, but he must clearly be put in his place and punished. And she was an adept at doing both.

It was at that moment that she got her second shock. Marjorie was undoubtedly smiling at the man behind her magazine. The man was grinning at Marjorie behind his paper. She knew it; she had done it so often herself with other men.

But what she could do was one thing; what Marjorie could do was quite another. For her companion and a strange man to indulge in mutual smiles at her expense was a state of affairs not to be tolerated for an instant. And the small fact that she was completely wrong—that all that had happened was that Marjorie, suddenly seeing him grinning at her, had involuntarily smiled back just because it was good to be alive—cut no ice. She wouldn't have believed it, anyhow; but, then, Cynthia Delmorton's joy in living lay not in just life but in what she could get out of it.

They were running through Eastleigh when the man spoke again. Five times during the journey had Marjorie got up to do something for Cynthia, and three out of the five times she could far more easily have done it for herself. And five times during the journey had an amused and faintly contemptuous glint come into the man's eyes. But he remained buried behind his paper until the train began to slacken, when he folded it up.

"Would you care to sit at my table?" he asked gravely. "I'm the second officer, and I generally manage to collect a cheery bunch."

For a moment Cynthia stared at him speechlessly. The second officer . . .

"Surprised at my not being on board, I suppose," he went on cheerfully. "Pretty exceptional, I agree. But the old man is a sportsman, and my business was sudden and urgent. However, would you like to fix it up about the table?"

"I think it would be very nice," said Cynthia, quietly, and Marjorie glanced at her in some trepidation. She knew that tone of old—knew what it portended. She knew that before the end of the voyage this poor young man was going to wish he had never been born. And it was a shame . . .

But she couldn't warn him, and he rushed into the trap.

"Splendid. I'll arrange it. But I warn you, from what I hear, we're going to have it a bit choppy as far as Madeira."

They did, and Marjorie for the first time began to see Cynthia in her true light. She was loyal clean through. She tried to make excuses, but the plain fact emerged that for selfishness her employer was in a class by herself. True, she was ill, slightly, for a couple of days, but until they anchored off Finchal, Cynthia treated her and the stewardess like a couple of slaves. Then she was graciously pleased to emerge from her cabin and show herself for the first time to the admiring gaze of her fellow passengers.

"Well, well, how are you?"

A cheerful voice hailed the lovely invalid, and she looked up from her deck chair to see their traveling companion. He looked different in uniform; in fact, honesty compelled her to admit that he looked extremely nice in uniform. So she gave him one of her most bewitching smiles and confessed that she felt a little better.

"Good!" he cried. "We shall be dancing tonight, and you must play a bit of deck tennis. Miss Blackton is a nailer at it."

He moved off, and she watched him cursing four Portuguese lace vendors for blocking the gangway—watched him through narrowed eyes. How that young man was going to suffer before she'd finished with him! And what a lucky thing it was that he was really quite presentable; it made things so much pleasanter for her.

"My dear, that is Cynthia Delmorton! You must have seen her picture in the Tattler and the Sketch."

The words carried to her during a sudden lull in the raucous babel around her, and a sense of pleasant well-being stole over her. Yes, she was Cynthia Delmorton. . . . And the sun was shining, and the water was blue, and the brown-skinned boys diving off the deck for threepenny bits thrown into the water amused her. Also, there was an extremely bumptious and conceited young man to punish. She smiled slightly to herself. . . . Fancy, wasting her time on an officer in the merchant service. Still, she would do it quickly and then turn to worthier game.

"Mr. Fraser," she called gently as he passed—Marjorie had found out his name—"won't you come and cheer me up? Besides, I want to apologize. I'm afraid I was rather rude to you in the train."

"Rude?" he laughed. "Not a bit. You were just natural. Sorry I can't stop now, but I've got to see a man about a dog in the smoking room. You shall apologize at lunch. . . . You're sitting next to me."

And with that he was gone, leaving Cynthia Delmorton utterly speechless. Never in the course of her life had any man spoken to her like that before. "See a man about a dog in the smoking room"—when she had invited him to sit by her! . . . "Not rude; only natural"! Was the man mad?

He certainly showed no signs of insanity at lunch. He included her breezily in the conversation, chaffed Marjorie Blackton, who had been ashore and done the time honored toboggan trip over the cobbles from Terreiro de Lucta, and finally challenged her to a game of deck quoits later on.

"When you're a little stronger," he remarked, "you must play tennis."

And there was a twinkle in his eyes as he spoke, the sort of twinkle a parent might have when dealing with a fractious child.

And so it went on. The trouble about the man was that he seemed impervious to snubs. He had a hide like a rhinoceros; delicate satire flew off him like water off a duck's back. Of course, he missed the point of it all—that was the reason. Completely lacking in breeding, he was unable to understand her subtle irony.

And Marjorie, who understood it only too well, felt her heart grow sick within her. At last her final delusions about Cynthia were gone. Coming out to Madeira they had begun to totter; by the time they were crossing the line the crash was complete. Thank heavens, Jim Fraser didn't appreciate the position of affairs. That was her only compensation.

And then, one evening, something occurred which brought her up with a start. She was sitting out by herself on the boat deck, in the shadow of one of the funnels, when two people passed her. They didn't see her, but she recognized them at once. . . . They paused between two of the boats, not three yards away from her, and she heard Cynthia's voice:

"You really are the most attractive man, Jim."

Marjorie could have screamed. It was too cruel. Surely, surely, she needn't carry her vindictiveness to such a point as that. The poor devil had done her no harm; she cared not the snap of a finger about him. But just to gratify her petty spite she was going to lead him on—and then shake with laughter in his face. Marjorie half rose; then, with a little gasp that was half a sob, she crouched back again. For Cynthia was in his arms.

With a sick numbness she watched him kiss her, heard Cynthia's low, triumphant laugh, heard her whispered "Darling."

Then she was gone, leaving him standing by the boats. For a second she paused at the top of the companion way, and her words floated back. "There is always tomorrow."

For a while he stood there; then, suddenly, with a little start, he saw Marjorie. He came over to her slowly and sat down beside her.

"You saw," he said quietly. "I'm sorry."

"So am I," she answered gravely. "Very sorry. O, Mr. Fraser," she went on impulsively, "don't think me impertinent and foolish, but I—O, it's so difficult to say!"

He was staring at her steadily and she went stumbling on bravely.

"You see—I know Cynthia. And I don't want to be disloyal to her—after all, she's paying everything for me. But please, please, be careful. She's—she's different from most girls. She's been spoiled, I suppose—and she doesn't mean to be cruel."

"No," he agreed quietly. "It's just natural."

But she hardly heard.

"She just plays with men. . . . And then she turns them down without a thought. Can't you see—O! can't you see? I don't want to hurt your feelings, but you must realize that she has the world at her feet, and—and——"

"And, therefore, is hardly likely to pay serious attention to the second officer of the good ship Ortolan," he said, lighting a cigarette.

She looked at him, surprised. He seemed singularly calm about it.

"That's why I am so sorry you saw," he concluded.

"But I don't want you to be hurt!" she cried. "And you will be."

"Why don't you want me to be hurt?" he said gently.

"O, because— Of course I don't. I hate to see anybody hurt."

"You dear—you dear girl!" And now she was staring at him in genuine amazement and dimly realizing that both her hands were in his. "I'm only sorry you saw it, Marjorie, because I can't now do what I would like to. At least, not at this moment."

And then he, too, was gone, and after a while Marjorie got up a little stiffly and went below. What on earth had he meant?

"My dear," said Cynthia, "too humorous! Our worthy pachyderm has kissed me. Upon the boat deck."

"I saw you," she answered dully. O! Cynthia—can't you let him alone?"

"What on earth do you mean?" cried the other. And then she suddenly burst into a peal of laughter. "Why, I believe you're in love with him yourself."

"I am," said Marjorie gravely, and started to undress.

Of course this was too much of a scream, altogether; it really added relish to the jest. That Marjorie—demure little Marjorie—should have fallen in love with the second officer was too exquisite.

"My dear," she cried, "but this is Romance with a capital R. Does he reciprocate your feelings?"

"Of course he doesn't," answered the other, flushing. "And Cynthia—you won't say anything, will you?"

"My dear—trust me. Perish the thought that I should spoil love's young dream. But I must insist on being allowed to deal with the dear man just once. I'll let him down mildly, I promise you, but he has been exceedingly rude to me—and he's got to take his gruel like a good boy."

"But I'm sure he didn't mean it, Cynthia," said Marjorie miserably.

"Then he's got to learn. And anyway, my dear," she went on with a smile, "you have the remedy in your own hands. Get him to take you up on the boat deck tomorrow night."

"You know I don't stand a chance if you're about," said Marjorie simply. "Anyway, I'm nothing to him. But I don't think you're playing the game. He's—he's not the type of man. It's not fair to a man like him, Cynthia; it's not fair."

"Then he had better not go and see people about dogs, my dear, when I've asked him to come and talk to me," said the other softly. "I don't like men who do that. Besides, he must be trained—if you're going to marry him."

She got into her bunk and opened a book; with a little shiver, though the night was tropical, Marjorie following her example. And when at last she did fall asleep she got no rest. For she dreamed without cessation—dreams in which she saw Cynthia, gloating and devilish, and a white-faced sobbing man—a man she tried to comfort, but who always turned away from her.

It was the day after that a piece of information arrived in the Wireless Bulletin which for nearly six hours annoyed Cynthia thoroughly. Marjorie saw it first, just as she was going in to breakfast, and thought no more about it. The news that the Earl of Axminster had been killed in a motor accident interested her but little more than the fact that the French exchange was 129-47. It was otherwise with Cynthia. Not that the death of that well-known and sporting nobleman at the early age of fifty-six distressed her in the slightest, but merely because it made her wish that she had acted otherwise. And it is annoying when one cannot rectify a mistake. She might now have been the Countess of Axminster. And she wasn't. Which was a distressing

Ed Wynn's Question Box :: :: —BY— ED WYNN

Dear Mr. Wynn:—We are getting up a raffle for a poor man, in our neighborhood, and I have been asked to write to you to ask if you won't buy some chances.. Truly yours—BENNY FACTOR.

Answer:—I don't want any chances as I wouldn't know what to do with a poor man if I won one.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I am an amateur actor and last night our Dramatic club gave one of Shakespeare's plays, in which I played Hamlet. Every time I was on the stage the audience laughed out loud. How do you account for that, when you know as well as I, that Hamlet is not a funny character? Yours truly—MANNY JER.

Answer:—I know it isn't, but I guess the way you played it, it was.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I am a boy 10 years old. I have a rich uncle but he is very stingy with his money. My birthday is next December and I asked him to get me a bicycle for a birthday present and he said it would cost too much money. Then I asked him to buy me a tricycle and he said that would cost too much, too, then he said I should leave the present to him. What do you think he will get me? Yours truly—G. HEESTITE.

Answer:—In as much as he says a bicycle or a tricycle will cost too much, I guess he intends waiting till December and get you an icicle.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I hear so many jokes about matrimony that I often wonder if any of the things I heard have any truth behind them. For instance, are all married people unhappy? Sincerely—I. RISH.

Answer:—No, only the men.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I notice so many women keep money in their stockings and every time they need it they lift their skirts, put their hands in their stocking and pull it out. What I want to know is: "How do these women get at their money when gentlemen are around them? Truly yours—X. TREMITIES.

Answer:—My dear friend, when there are gentlemen around, women don't have to get at their money.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—Will you kindly settle a dispute for us? In our town there is a strike on the trolley car line, and the cars are being run by incompetent men with the result there have been several accidents. What we want to know is this: "In case of an accident what is the first duty of the conductor and the motorman?" Truly yours—VIOLET RAYS.

Answer:—In case of an accident the first duty of the conductor and the motorman is to blame it on each other.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I am a chicken raiser and my farm is located right near the city reservoir. I have been here about two years and during that time they have had three accidents at the reservoir and each time they have trouble the water floods my farm. Up to date over 300 of my chickens have been drowned. What shall I do? Yours truly—U. UNDERSTAND.

Answer:—Stop raising chickens and raise ducks.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—We are a New York family and my son, who has just graduated from high school, is preparing for college. I asked him what course he intends to study and he says he thinks there is a great field for civil engineers. Do you agree with him? Truly yours—I. M. A. BRAKEMAN.

Answer:—What New York really needs is civil taxi-cab drivers.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I am a middle-aged woman and have been ailing for some time. The doctor advises an ocean voyage as a cure. I am subject to sea sickness but the doctor says a trip to Europe will do me a lot of good. If I take an ocean trip do you think I will feel better? Sincerely yours—M. I. SAFE.

Answer:—If you are subject to sea sickness, as you say, I think you will feel better after a trip to Europe, about two years after.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—Isn't it wonderful, all these new inventions? Think of it, they can now send messages without wires. Do you think we will ever be able to travel without leaving home? Yours truly—F. I. ONLEENEW.

Broadway Banter :: :: —By— FORNEY WYLY.

"LOOSE ANKLES" is being referred to as "the first play of the new season." Just when the old season stops and the new one starts has never been very clear to me. Suddenly on a Thursday, some play will bob up and proclaim itself "the first play of the new season" leaving those defenseless shows which might have opened on Wednesday the cowstails of "last season."

"Loose Ankles" is neither the best nor the worst play New York will find itself confronted with during the coming year. It's a rather refreshing story about those young men who make their money dancing with robust matrons whom no one would think of dancing with for nothing. This play is tremendously funny in spots and exasperatingly dull in others. For the most part, you'll like it, for ever so often remarks are made that you're quite sure you shouldn't be listening to. An amusing evening awaits you at "Loose Ankles."

* * * *

Nora Stirling was a member of that carefully-picked Sunday night audience which saw "Loose Ankles" before its Monday night premiere. And while I did not see Miss Stirling roll into the aisle in fits of hysterics, I did get the impression that she thought the show quite funny. It was during her recounting of a recent visit to Atlanta that she mentioned "riding around all one afternoon with Alice Stearns." When, in insisting on having my little joke I asked if Miss Stearns' Chevrolet sedan was still as reliable as ever about stalling in traffic, I was informed rather forcibly that the Chevrolet was just a memory, and that Miss Stearns was now doing her afternoon bowing from the more becoming setting of a Chrysler roadster.

* * * *

Armine Maier was a tireless swimmer whom I saw plodding his way about the pool in the Hotel Shelton the other afternoon. Shelton Pool addicts seem totally unaware of the fact that there are some thousand or so bathing beaches around New York waiting to be swam in. I wondered if young Mr. Maier knew that he was frequently swimming alongside of the elusive "Houdini" that afternoon.

Bunk Reid, the real reason so many Atlanta girls stormed Athens at Big and Little Commencement back in 1918 and 1919, was at the Garrick Gaieties the other night. After the show was over, your rougish correspondent escorted Mr. Reid and his friends back-stage to meet a few of the cast they liked the best. There was many a girl in the old days who, after dancing "Too Much Mustard" with Mr. Reid, decided that her life would never be a total loss anyway.

* * * *

She's a very good secretary, I hear, and yet I couldn't help wondering what she had in mind when she dressed for the office that morning. She must have been thinking that was the day of the garden fete. Seated at her typewriter, she was wearing just a simple little dancing frock of lavender chiffon trimmed in lace, ostrich feathers and velvet ribbon. When she got up to go out to lunch she pulled on a floppy leghorn hat swooning with flowers. Maybe she figured out you never can tell when somebody's going to need a bridesmaid.

* * * *

A play by the name of "Honest Liars" has unloaded itself upon the stage of the Harris theater, and it should spend the rest of its life trying to explain why. I have an idea this jewel was written many, many moons ago, but has only recently dropped into the hands of someone thoughtless enough to produce it. That is the only way I can explain the rusty old jokes, puns and wisecracks which go to make up "Honest Liars" (No punning). As a matter of fact, the word "wisecrack" hadn't been thought up when the things they say in "Honest Liars" were going the rounds.

The play takes place in a hospital. Laughing gas, which was the only thing laughing the night I saw the show, plays a large part in the general disorders. Your first fear that they're going to convulse you by starting to operate on the wrong person, is correct. There's no end of door-slamming, lovers' quarrels, and unfunny comics in "Honest Liars." It shouldn't take you twenty minutes after reading this paragraph to figure out I didn't think so much of "Honest Liars."

* * * *

The next time anybody asks me "Which do you like the best, Gloria Swanson or Pola Negri?" I intend to reply, "Florence Vidor." Those of you who are now so frightfully amused at "his grammar" may realize that you are the only persons in the world who would put it "Which do you like the better?" Miss Vidor's performance in "The Grand Duchess

Crossed Wires — A Fascinating New Serial — By John T. McCutcheon

INSTALLMENT XXXI.

Rasher Makes a Match.

THE following morning the atmosphere in the Crayton household was electric with impending events. Mr. Crayton was stirred by the approaching arrival of Henry Livingston Bacon at ten o'clock. Just why he was coming was a mystery that heightened interest in the purpose of his visit.

"That young man saved me from bankruptcy and we want to show him our gratitude," he kept repeating to his wife, who, under these reiterations, glowed with nervous anticipation. Both cast frequent glances at the clock.

Mrs. Crayton, fearing that her husband's bitter opposition to the engagement of Virginia to Count de Barsac would be revived tenfold by the favorable turn of his fortunes, resolved to act once before being forestalled by his objections. To this end she dispatched Wells to the city, where he delivered the notes announcing the engagement to the two morning newspapers.

Having crossed the Rubicon, she informed Mr. Crayton; and, as expected, her husband exploded with his old time fury.

"I've opposed this thing all along," he stormed, "and I'm still opposed to it. I won't have my daughter bartered in this way. It's indecent!"

"As between a nobleman and a chauffeur I prefer the former," retorted Mrs. Crayton. "I want to see Virginia safely married before she does some crazy thing like marrying the first good-looking chauffeur she meets. Even you haven't been so blind as not to observe that danger."

"I'd rather see her marry a dozen good, clean American chauffeurs than one miserable foreign adventurer."

Virginia, pressing her hands over her ears, rushed from the room. This interminable controversy was disgraceful and humiliating. They heard the great front door close with a bang.

Mr. Crayton looked at his watch. Fifteen minutes to ten. Bacon would soon be here. He forbode renewing the controversy for the present.

As Virginia, walking distractedly, approached the outer gates Wells drove into the grounds. At a sign from the girl he stopped the car. She looked so unhappy that he sprang out and stood by her side helplessly.

"Where have you been?" she asked.

"Delivering some notes to the papers for your mother."

"You know what they were?" she asked again.

"I can guess," he said bitterly. "O, why didn't you wait till Rasher got here? I got a wire. He's coming this morning. He'll murder me for not stopping you."

"It's nothing to him what I do," she said, and before Dick could speak she went on passionately, "Besides, I didn't do it. It's my mother. You believe that, don't you?"

Wells took a step nearer. There was such an appealing look in his eyes that her senses swam. And doubt as to her feelings toward him were swept away in that instant, and her heart shouted clamorously that she would rather face a life of poverty with this man than luxury with any one else. Impulsively she held out her hands and he seized them. His heart was racing. He felt his resolution crumbling, and for an instant his obligation to his friend was overwhelmed by a delirious madness.

In another moment she would have been in his arms had not a car suddenly swung around the turn and stopped. They drew apart in confusion just as Harry L. Rasher jumped out, smiling broadly.

"Thank heaven!" cried Wells. "You're just in time. I'm at the end of my string. And I've gummed things horribly." He indicated Virginia wildly. "Do your own courting."

Rasher glanced quickly from one to the other, although he had seen quite enough from the taxi.

"I'm afraid you've been laboring under a misapprehension, Dick. You got your wires crossed. Why, you don't know how happy I am to see you two nice people together, and I'm happy to have been the cause of it." He smiled amiably.

Wells was staring wide-eyed. "But —but——" he began gropingly.

"There's no 'but' to it, Dick. I put you on the job precisely to save a nice girl like Miss Crayton from that damned Count."

"But her engagement to the Count is announced to the papers. It'll be in tomorrow morning."

It was Rasher's turn to be amazed. "Not with your consent, I hope, Miss Crayton?"

"O, no." She was almost sobbing. "Mother did it."

"You really do not wish to marry De Barsac?" he asked again.

"I do not," she answered emphatically, "but I'm so tired of it all I don't much care what happens. I told mother I would."

"It would be a great mistake for you to go through with this," said Rasher gravely. "I'm just on my way to see your father and mother and tell them what I know of this Count. I should have done it before."

"But mother will never be convinced," cried Virginia. "She'll think you have a personal motive; she won't believe a word you say against him. I'm sorry, but I'm afraid you'll

"Don't forget you promised to show me the Southern Cross tonight, Mr. Fraser," she said as he rose from his seat.

"Am I likely to?" he answered fervently.

And across the table her eyes met Marjorie's mockingly. Really, life wasn't so bad after all; it had its humorous side.

But it was a side that was taxed to the uttermost that evening. The pachyderm was so terribly intense and gauche. And he would persist in harking back to Lord Axminster's death.

"It must be wonderful," he said humbly, "to know all those people who are just names to us as intimately as you do."

He was holding her hand at the time and gazing at her adoringly.

"I very nearly married Hedderton," she said softly. "But I'm glad I didn't—now."

"And if you had," he puzzled it out, "you would be the—the Earless of Axminster."

She gave a delighted gurgle of laughter.

"Countess," she corrected him. "But then, you see, the—the poor fellow is dead."

"But I'm sure he wouldn't have gone to Africa if you had married him," he said gravely.

"Well, if he hadn't and was alive, and I had married him—then I should be the Earless of Axminster. You delicious person!"

"And instead of that," he cried eagerly, "you're going to be——"

Really, she'd die of suppressed laughter in a second. The pachyderm was on the verge of proposing; she looked round to see if by any chance Marjorie was about. This was going to be a thing too good to be missed.

"What am I going to be?" she whispered.

"Cynthia, wouldn't you rather be my wife than the Countess of Axminster?"

That finished it; self-control could stand it no longer. She burst into a peal of laughter. Then she pulled herself together. The thing had become a bore, so she'd punish the pachyderm now and finish with it.

"This," she said as soon as she had recovered herself sufficiently to speak, "is the funniest thing that has ever occurred to me. My poor dear young man, are you mad? Do you really imagine, even for one second, that I should marry you?" Laughter again overcame her.

"But you deserved a little lesson, you know. As a matter of fact, I intended to give you a longer one, but I couldn't help laughing. You were so supremely ridiculous." Once more she began to shake.

"No, Mr. Fraser, I am afraid that I must decline the riotous future you offer me. I feel it would be too much for my nerves. But as a reward for having made me laugh, I'll tell you a secret. Put the excellent alternative you gave me before Marjorie. Not that the poor dear is ever likely to be countess of anything, but still—"

She rose with a smile, a smile which suddenly faded from her face. For this uncouth boor was lying back in his deck chair, literally holding his sides.

"Rich," he almost sobbed. "Not to say ripe and fruity. You're quite right, my dear woman; we've hurried matters. This jest would have stood another three days."

"What on earth do you mean?" she said.

And then he too rose to his feet, and stood facing her.

"Listen to me, Cynthia Delmorton," he said quietly. "In the course of my wanderings round the globe I've met some pretty rotten women. You're just about the rottenest."

"How dare you?"

In her stunned rage she could hardly get the words out.

"You're going to hear one or two home truths now," he went on calmly. "You're a calculating, mercenary snob—and you killed Hedderton as surely as if you'd shot him yourself. Only no jury, unfortunately, could convict you. I happened to see him the night before he left for Africa, poor devil."

"Will you kindly take me straight to the captain?" she said icily. "I can only consider that you're drunk, and I wish to make a complaint."

"Certainly," he answered. "What are you going to tell him? That I was drunk last night, too—when I kissed you?"

For a moment or two she stared at him, white and rigid with rage. He had got her, and she knew it. This common man had beaten her at her own game. Why he had done it was beyond her; her brain was still too dazed at the sudden turning of the tables to think clearly.

"You set out to teach me a lesson." He was speaking again. "I fully intended that you should. Your only miscalculation was that I had already determined to teach you one—one that you richly deserved. But I admit that I never even dreamed that the lesson would prove quite so subtly successful until this morning. And I'm profoundly sorry it has. I was very fond of my uncle."

"Your uncle," she stammered. "What do you mean?"

"There was a cousin of sorts, I believe," he said gravely. "There was, and—is. And he happens to be second officer of the Ortolan."

"You mean," she almost screamed, "that you're Lord Axminster?"

"Precisely," he answered. "And since you have mercifully refused my invitation to become my earless, I think we might conclude the interview. You see, I want to follow your advice and put the alternative I gave you in front of Marjorie. Er—goodnight. O, and the captain's cabin is the fourth from this end. It's the big one. And incidentally—one other small point. Had I not been perfectly certain that you didn't know who I was, I should have never risked proposing. The danger of your acceptance would have been too great. Still, it was kind of you to explain about us having different names."

A moment later he was alone. Cynthia Delmorton still retained sufficient thinking capacity to realize that, if she was going to have hysterics, her cabin was the most suitable place. For a while he stood looking after her. Then half consciously, he turned and stared over the water toward Africa.

"Yes, old man," he muttered, "she killed you. And I loved you. Life's a funny thing."

Then, with a faint smile on his lips, he strolled down to the main deck. They were dancing, and he stood in the smoking room door watching. Life indeed was a funny thing. And then he saw her coming toward him with a startled look on her face.

"What on earth has happened to Cynthia?" she cried. "She's in the most extraordinary condition."

"Biting the bed clothes," he said lazily. "Splendid. I asked her a question, you see, and she got the answer wrong. I asked her if she would sooner be my wife or Countess of Axminster."

"Jim—you proposed. But I don't understand. Did she refuse you?"

"Good God, my dear!" he cried, "you don't suppose I'd be as pleased as I am if she'd accepted me! And now I want to ask you the same question."

And then suddenly he grew serious.

"Marjorie—Marjorie darling, come up on the boat deck. I don't make a hobby of this, my dear—and there's a lot you don't understand. But I haven't got time to explain it to you now—not until you've answered that question. Will you marry me?"

"Jim—you're mad," she whispered. "And you can't propose in the smoking room."

"Can't I? I've just done it. But come up above and I'll do it again."

And she went. And she stayed. And an hour later he still hadn't explained. Explanations are tedious things. In fact, it wasn't until the following morning that she thought about the explanation, and then for a while she couldn't grasp it.

For Jim wasn't at breakfast, and a note lay in her plate. She tore open the envelope and read the contents.

"Second Officer Jim Fraser presents his compliments to the future Countess of Axminster, and trusts that the beautiful Miss Delmorton is not still biting the bed clothes. He further solicits her company at the eleven o'clock issue of beef tea.

"P. S.—You're an adorable darling.—Jim."

What Has Happened to Justice?

The Story of Elizabeth Johnson

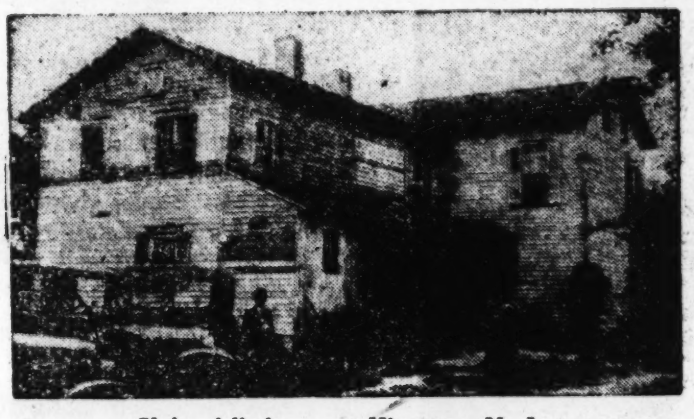

Farm Girl's Search for Love Led to Her Death—Youth She Fled With Never Found

NEARLY two years have passed since the sunny Sunday morning in September, 1924, when the body of Elizabeth Johnson, comely 15-year-old daughter of a farmer, was found in a copse on the shore of Lake Carnegie, near St. Joseph's seminary, at Kingston, N. J. Seeking surcease from the drab monotony of farm life, she had tasted of the golden cup of happiness only to find therein the dregs of violent death.

Just two years before a similar grim tragedy had roused the Jersey countryside. In a bed of goldenrod under a lone crabapple tree on the deserted Phillips farm across the Raritan river from New Brunswick, the bodies of the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall, rector of the fashionable church of St. John the Evangelist, and Mrs. Eleanor Mills, young and pretty choir singer and wife of the church sexton, were found side by side. They, too, had been murdered. But the identity has never been disclosed.

Authenticity Doubted.

And, like this gruesome sacrifice to an illicit love, the Johnson murder also remains unsolved. One bit of incriminating evidence, the tattered fragment of a letter written with an indelible pencil on ordinary brown wrapping paper and pieced together by the police, points an accusing finger at Harvey Selhaver, farmhand and soldier of fortune, who disappeared from the vicinity about the time Elizabeth Johnson was slain.

Slain girl's home at Kingston, N. J.

Weighty evidence, if geunine, that letter. But the authorities now question its authenticity. They are not at all certain the letter was not a plant; not at all sure it wasn't placed where it was found among the ruins of an ancient smokehouse of revolutionary days, which stands almost entirely hidden by foliage within fifteen feet of the spot where the body was found.

"My precious darling," the letter read, "I am very sad tonight, and my heart is broken for the one I love most dearly. Just to think, only two days more and I will have to part from you, my love. I cannot do it. It seems that the only way out is the way you said tonight on the porch.

"Give me what I want, my fair and only lover, and I will do anything under the sun that you asked me to do. Without you life would be nothing worth while for me, and if I do what you asked me to do our sorrows will be over forever. I know, my Precious One, that I could not live without you and I think you could not get on without me.

"If we cannot live together in life let us part together in death. This is the only way I can see clear, my Beautiful One.

"Give me the answer in the letter you write tomorrow if you still want me to do what you asked me to do out on the front porch last night when we were alone. If you do, give me until Saturday, August 9, to return. Tell me the time and place that you will meet me and give me the key back just as soon as you write your letter to me and make my bed. And please destroy this. I cannot say any more, so will bid you good-by. A million kisses to you, My Love.

"Your broken hearted lover. H. S."

Unanswered Queries

Is the letter genuine? Did Elizabeth Johnson and her rustic swain, fired by the romance which surrounded the deaths of the Rev. Hall and Mrs. Mills, conceived the idea of a suicide plot and determine to carry it out? Does the body of Harvey Selhaver, as his mother afterward suggested, lie beneath the waters of Lake Carnegie?

Did Selhaver slay the girl he loved, and then, lacking the courage to take his own life, toss the pistol into the lake and flee? Or is the letter a hoax designed and executed by some one bent upon directing suspicion to Selhaver for reasons best known to himself? These are all questions which the authorities weighed carefully, but without conclusion.

Densely wooded spot near shore of Lake Carnegie where girl's body was found.

One fact which leads to the belief that the letter was a plant is that it was not discovered until three days after the body was found. And during those three days Corporal John Dunn and Trooper Charles Ulrich, of the state police, went over every inch of ground in the vicinity many times. Meanwhile, newspapermen were conducting similar searches independent of the police and they went through the cave, as the ruined smokehouse came to be known, many times, without finding any trace of the letter.

Mystery of the murder of Elizabeth Johnson (above) is still unsolved.

Then, on Wednesday following the discovery of the body, in making a final search they found a crumpled mass of paper, rolled in a ball, lying in the middle of the smokehouse floor, and they turned it over to the troopers, who pieced it together. From that time on the hunt for Harvey Selhaver, who until then had been wanted only as a suspect, was redoubled. Police posters were sent broadcast over the country and rewards offered for his arrest. But he has never been found.

There is a striking parallel in the lives of Elizabeth Johnson and Mrs. Eleanor Mills. Neither was content with her lot in life; both had tried to find a short cut to happiness through the fields of romance. Both were sentimental, constant readers of romantic novels, and sought to transmute their daydreams into idyllic actualities.

Elizabeth loathed the tiny farm where her father, a gaunt man, lacking imagination, who seemed a part of the land, sought to wrest from the sandy soil a living for his wife and three children.

The mother, too, an Austrian by birth, had no sympathy for her daughter's daydreaming. She loved Elizabeth in an expressionless fashion but could offer her little beyond food and shelter. And in her scolding way she frequently told her daughter that woman's place was in the home and that she should be content to work about the farm and put aside her yearning for the city, the theater, fine clothes and gay parties.

Indeed, only twice in her fifteen years had Elizabeth ever seen a motion picture show. Those were rare occasions when she accompanied her father to Trenton with loads of produce. And only once had she visited so large a city as Trenton.

Her whole life had been spent around Plainsboro and Kingston, tramping long miles to school each morning with her brother and sister and tramping back after school hours to perform her chores at the farm. It was seldom a newspaper ever found its way into the Johnson home, and the family paid little heed to what was going on in the outside world. There were only three books in the house, the Bible, "Alice in Wonderland," and an ancient almanac.

Her Dream World.

Elizabeth had read the whimsical tale of Alice so often that she almost knew it by heart. About it she built up a dream world in which she lived apart from her family. It aroused in her an appetite for reading and from her few friends she borrowed whatever books she could get. For the most part these were the love stories of Harold Bell Wright, Elinor Glyn, Rex Beach or George Barr McCutcheon.

She dreamed of the errant knight in shining silver armor who some day would ride by the rude farmhouse on a prancing white charger and take her away forever from the everyday world of milk pails and pots and pans which she had always known.

Then, in the springtime of her fourteenth year, when the dogwood was just beginning to blossom, adventure, in the person of Harlie Snowden, swept into her life. Like Selhaver, Snowden was a wanderer. He had drifted north from Texas, bound nowhere in particular. Elizabeth had met few men other than her own father. Most of the time the Johnsons had been much too poor to employ farmhands.

A meeting in the moonlight after the family had gone to bed. Soft spoken words, caresses such as she had never known. Warm lips pressed close to hers. Ah, this was romance! But there came a night when a watchful mother heard her daughter's stealthy steps upon the stairs and stormy scenes followed. Yet Elizabeth managed to arrange another rendezvous with her lover.

"Take me away," she pleaded, and

How To Tell If Your Chil

Novel Plans for Discovering While Babies Are Still in Their Cradles, Just Which of Them Are Likely to Show Exceptional Talent and in What Fields the Geniuses May Dazzle the World

NEVER before has there been a time when so much attention was paid to the child or so much was known about what is rather smugly called "child culture."

Child specialists, for quite a few years now, have applied the Binet tests and have promptly told anxious parents whether their child was a middle class defective, a border line imbecile or merely a high-class moron.

But until just recently one very important thing has been lacking. There were plenty of little color charts and fancy toothpicks and suspicious picture puzzles to pick out the child of low mentality. But when it came to "spotting" the scintillating geniuses of the future, while still those geniuses were wearing bibs and shaking rattles, the learned child psychologists have been a trifle backward.

Edwin Markham, the poet, who will try to pick out the little poetic geniuses

This oversight has at last been attended to. Today, by a few simple tests which any parent or even any partially educated nurse girl can apply in ten minutes, it is easy to determine whether little Johnny will set the world on fire as a genius or brighten the corner where he happens to grow up as a merely average citizen.

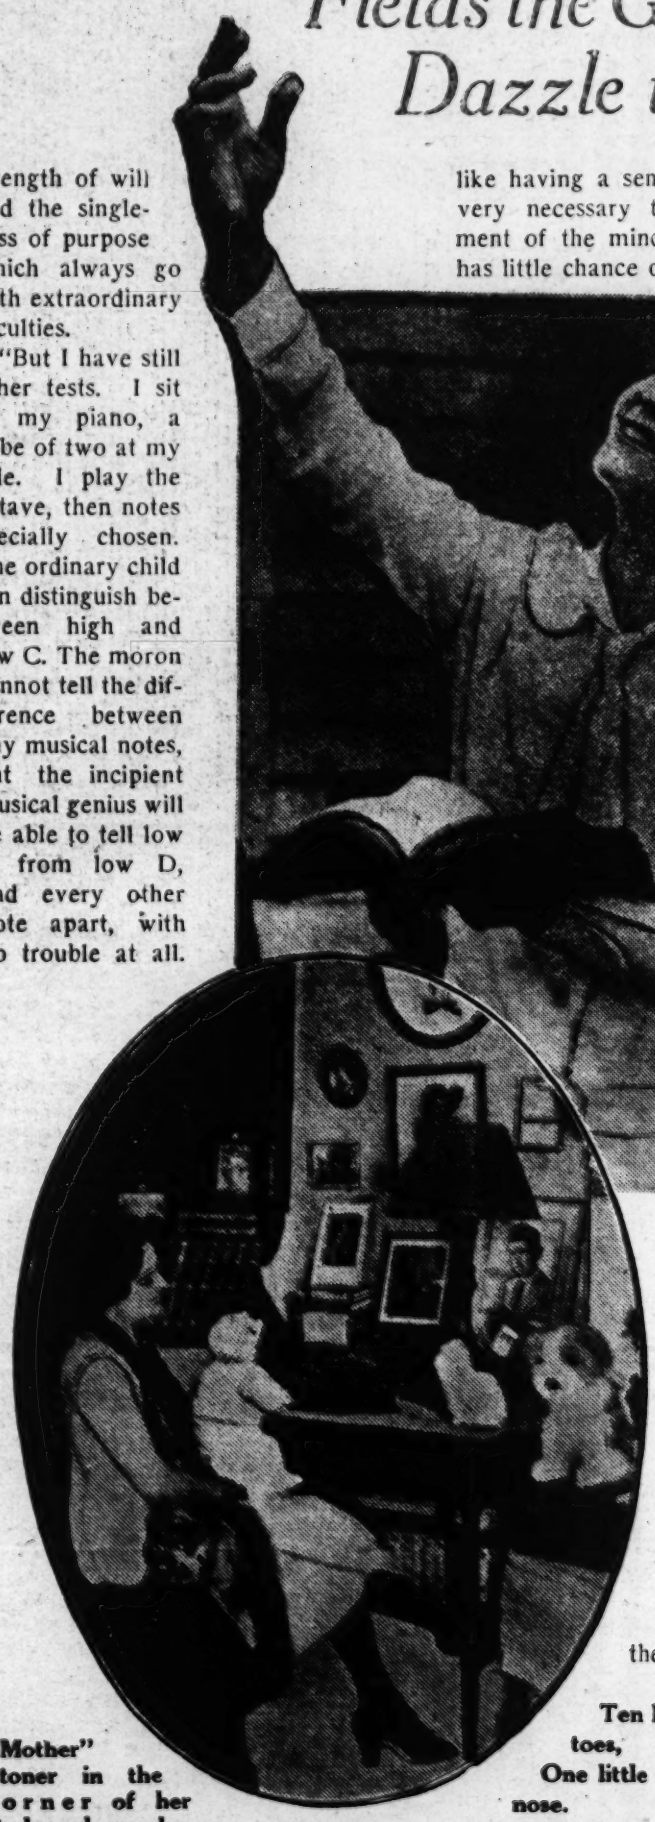

Thanks for this tremendous advance in the knowledge of the child is due to a numerous band of eminent Americans, men and women, who have united themselves into the "League for Fostering Genius." They apply the tests to various children, take the geniuses under their protection and then go ahead to nurture them into perfect self-expression by encouragement and understanding.

Edwin Markham, the poet; Mrs. Luther Burbank, widow of the great naturalist; Edwin Franko Goldman, the band leader and composer; Dr. Francis Snow, magazine editor; George Gray Barnard, the sculptor; Mrs. Winifred Sackville Stoner, mother of the famous child prodigy, and forty others are the founding patrons of the league.

"The time to discover genius," says "Mother" Stoner, "is between birth and five years. The nearer the cradle the better.

"In five minutes I can tell you whether a child is a genius or not. First, I give it the stick test. I pass a smooth stick to a child of a year or under. If he curls his little hand about it but lets go fairly easily when I pull the stick away he is just an average child. If he refuses to touch it at all, he is a fool or moron. But if he winds his fingers about it tightly and refuses to let go, then he is a genius. He has the strength of will and the singleness of purpose which always go with extraordinary faculties.

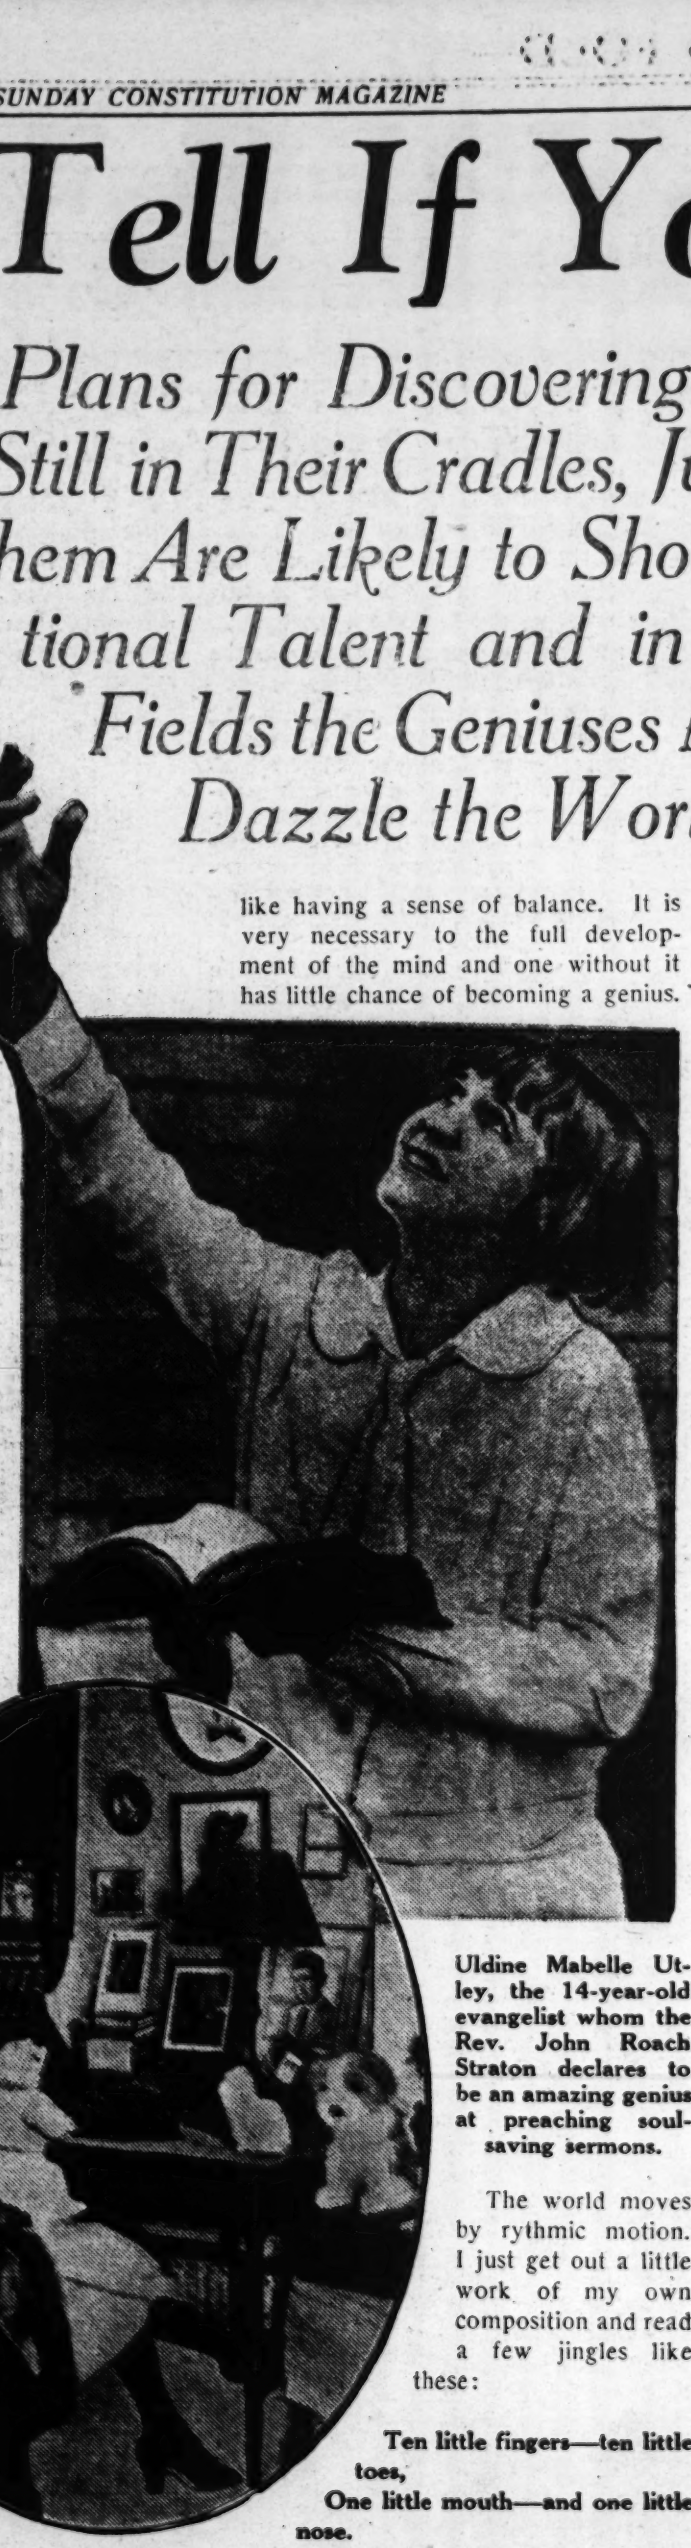

"But I have still other tests. I sit at my piano, a babe of two at my side. I play the octave, then notes specially chosen. The ordinary child can distinguish between high and low C. The moron cannot tell the difference between any musical notes, but the incipient musical genius will be able to tell low C from low D, and every other note apart, with no trouble at all.

"Mother" Stoner in the corner of her study where she applies the rhythm tests to determine which children are worthy of being made proteges of the League for Fostering Genius

Mozart composed some of his best music at ten and at two he knew all the notes apart.

"Last of all, I apply the rhythm tests. These are very important tests because having a sense of rhythm is like having a sense of balance. It is very necessary to the full development of the mind and one without it has little chance of becoming a genius."

Uldine Mabelle Utley, the 14-year-old evangelist whom the Rev. John Roach Straton declares to be an amazing genius at preaching soul-saving sermons.

The world moves by rythmic motion. I just get out a little work of my own composition and read a few jingles like these:

Ten little fingers—ten little toes,
One little mouth—and one little nose.

Two active kidneys—a liver for bile,
Folks with good livers always smile.

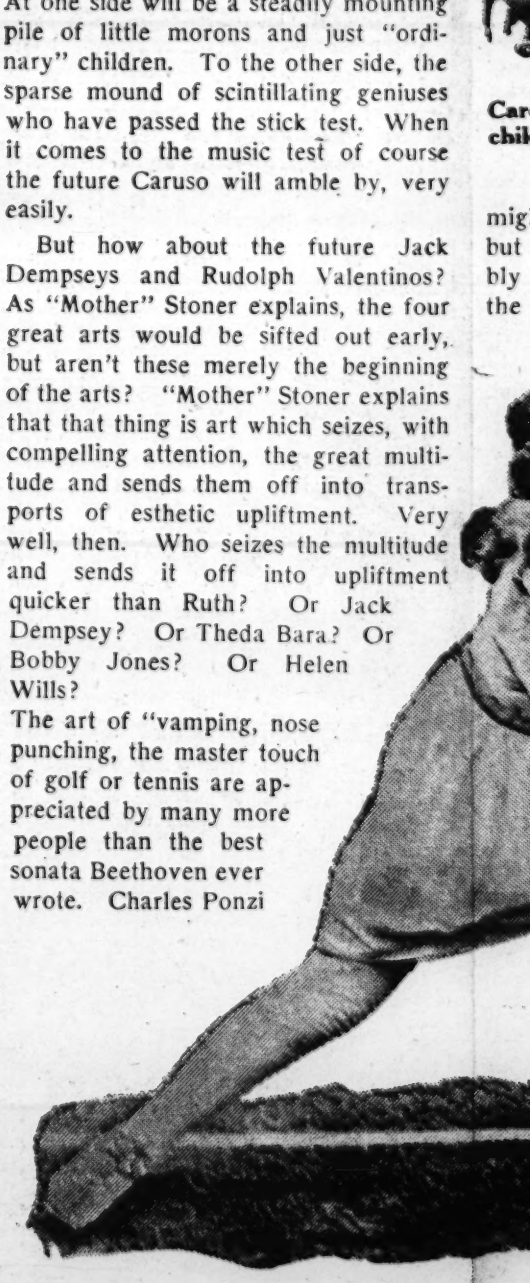

Let's work our livers—make life worth while,
Smiling and smiling a big, big smile.

"If the infant turns a dull ear to the reading and no particular emotion breaks over his features—he's just an ordinary child, or perhaps even below par mentally. But if he immediately breaks into high, poetic glee and claps his little hands, while his infantile eyes glisten with pure pleasure—why, he is a genius and positively sure to become a poet or painter or musician or something which requires a high sense of rhythm."

So far so good, but those of us who are neither experts nor geniuses ourselves may wonder about a few points. For instance, do these tests determine all the kinds of genius there are? Poetry — painting — music, certainly. But how about pole vaulting, prize fighting, "shieking," "vamping," costume wearing and trick juggling? How are the infantile geniuses of these types to be determined? One can easily picture "Mother" Stoner giving the tests. At one side will be a steadily mounting pile of little morons and just "ordinary" children. To the other side, the sparse mound of scintillating geniuses who have passed the stick test. When it comes to the music test of course the future Caruso will amble by, very easily.

But how about the future Jack Dempseys and Rudolph Valentinos? As "Mother" Stoner explains, the four great arts would be sifted out early, but aren't these merely the beginning of the arts? "Mother" Stoner explains that that thing is art which seizes, with compelling attention, the great multitude and sends them off into transports of esthetic upliftment. Very well, then. Who seizes the multitude and sends it off into upliftment quicker than Ruth? Or Jack Dempsey? Or Theda Bara? Or Bobby Jones? Or Helen Wills?

The art of "vamping, nose punching, the master touch of golf or tennis are appreciated by many more people than the best sonata Beethoven ever wrote. Charles Ponzi once made his million overnight, and it is a difficult art to make a million overnight, and an art much esteemed, from Oskosh to New York. And do Edwin Markham and "Mother" Stoner expect to determine such a genius by the stick or jinglelay or musical tests?

Now a born vamp, at one year,

Caroline Bird, one of the first of the children selected by the league as possessing unusual ability.

might take a tight hold on that stick, but at the high C test she would probably merely bellow and try to pick up the piano. Or steal the jinglelay book, nnis was discovered at a very early age and to win the junior championship.

young gold digger saving all her faculties for the acquisition of future platinum being a vamp and a gold digger. A failure in the infantile genius to feel rapture at "Mother" Stoner's poetry or at Edwin Markham's might not really mean a stupid moron but rather a keen bracelets.

None of these judges of genius dare to deny that an ability to play tennis magnificently well constitutes true genius. And they furthermore admit that many athletic geniuses have been lost to the world through early neglect and lack of recognition. Surely the selection of the physical genius, very early in life, is extremely important.

But how?

"Nothing easier," explains "Mother" Stoner. Then she whispers: "You pick the future tennis champions by their perfectly horrid dispositions. When little Edna scoops up all the tennis balls of all the children on the court and carries them off home and refuses to play, why, just watch that child! Humor her every whim. Let her sulk while everybody is waiting to see her play, for when she grows up she will surely be a great tennis champion!"

"Mother" Stoner feels that, of course, the mental is far more important, but she agrees with some of the other authorities in the league that her specific tests might sometimes not pick out the physical genius. They're to be chosen other ways. Sometimes, even, they may be selected by the knowing eye of the child culturist as he merely "sizes" up an incipient genius.

The future physical genius, "Mother Stoner has been made to agree, is generally far handsomer and livelier than the future mental genius. Dr. Samuel Johnson was near-sighted and thick-lipped and pimply. But he was the great lexicographer. And Bobby Jones, who looks so smart in his plus fours, was very good looking as he chewed his rubber doll. Mussolini, one of the master minds, was a sluggish baby in his cradle, whereas Elsie Janis, the genius at song and dance, just scintillated with toes and hands and eyes before she ever walked.

But when "Mother Stoner" has told how to test your child early and when further you've heard how to determine other sorts of genius besides the old, threadbare brands, there's still another very important point to be determined. Sometimes there will come, of necessity, a moment when Editor Snow and

Mrs. Winifred Sackville Stoner's daughter, one of the most remarkable of all child prodigies and one whose amazing capacity for acquiring a vast amount of knowledge was revealed to her mother when the girl was only a few months old.

"Mother" Stoner and Poet Markham and Artist Barnard and Composer Goldman and Fighter Dempsey and Tennis Player Wills (if, finally, these last two competent judges of physical genius are added to the board) will all heartily disagree.

A handsome toddler of two will be up on the carpet. He will have passed the stick test and the high C test and the jinglelay test. He's a genius all right, but of what sort?

"I claim this baby is a born poet," Edwin Markham may say. "Just see how he gooed when I read him one of my little things."

"I claim that child is a born composer," Mr. Goldman will flash back. "Why, he actually beat time with his lollypop when I whistled my latest march."

"I claim he is a pole vaulter."

"I claim he will be the greatest financier the country ever knew."

"I claim—"

And how will it be decided? Very easily, as "Mother" Stoner and all her coadjutors hasten to explain together:

"We'll just keep on arguing impolitely, trying to prove that the child is a pole vaulter or a poet. In arguing, we'll let the child alone. And so his genius will develop into whatever it is, a genius for sheiking or vamping or poetizing, for the very top notch geniuses of the world have come from being left entirely alone."

Further, the child that has successfully passed the tests for genius must be permitted full self-expression.

Of course, the parents who bring up the unreproved genius face fifteen years at least of overturned furniture, broken mirrors, noisy houses, smashed windows, trouble with the neighbors and even with the police. This is truer, moreover, of the physical genius than of the mental. But isn't it worth a life of worry to give a genius to the world?

Lord of the Less :: ::

—By—GUY DENT

WAVE upon wave of tepid mist thickened the already impenetrable veil which lay upon the endless grassy flats.

From above old Hekimu, the mother of all the vultures, rocking one thousand feet up in the glare of the rising sun, saw an occasional palm upthrusting starkly through the ever moving silver fog, or perceived, scattered at wide intervals throughout the square miles of featureless landscape, a kind of cactus looking extraordinarily like thirty-foot-high candelabra, which flung aloft its rigid arms from out the gray folds drifting about its trunk.

But down below, in that hot obscurity, the African dawn was a dreadful portent.

Through and through the obscuring moisture slid strange shapes, grotesquely distorted by the feeble rays. Devils, some might have thought them. And, indeed, Libah, the Royal, prospecting for a late meal, would have merited that name.

Ever and anon came horrid muffled scufflings and dulled sounds of panic-bewildered flight. Not infrequently shrill high screamings seemed to rip the clammy air literally asunder, and only Ataka, leading her troop of fiend-faced baboons through the streaming grass stems, could have explained them adequately.

Death rioted grim and swift beneath that semi-transparent pall.

Many were the strange encounters arising from that eye and nose deceiving condition of affairs.

Once indeed, Sharbel, the leopard, hunting by half seen sight on the track of an exhausted Oribi, found himself close, far, far too close, to Libah's armed forepaw, and, withdrawing in haste, that is to say, like the snap of a lock, landed unannounced in the midst of Ataka's little party as they scoured the thicker grass patches for defenseless fawns.

That was a quick and unpleasant affair of fifteen packed seconds, at the end of which Sharbel was glad to get away with his bare life.

O, yes! Things were happening; action, ruthless, decisive, and full-blooded, was in order just then, and many a one ended his or her existence almost before being aware that any menace was at hand.

Yet I would not have you think that this was in any way an unusual state of affairs. True, the morning mist prolonged matters for the better part of an hour; but to those myriads of the wild folk which live in constant awful fear of death there appeared nothing untoward about it all.

It was a typical African dawning.

Now, amongst a couple of thousand or so of others who were about their usual business on that morning, within one short square mile of country-wide plain, was Buni.

He was a great cock ostrich, and his was the overlordship of the lesser creatures of that district, not forgetting certain of the carnivora.

From time to time he raised his little pointed head from his occupation, swallowing a double handful of small white quartz pebbles and thorny seed pods in the action, and peered toward where Siri (The Mystery), his mate, scratched meditatively at the ground in the neighborhood of eleven huge eggs which lay openly on a bare spot surrounded by two-foot high grass.

Buni was no fool. He knew that danger lurked on every side, though until those eggs should be hatched the danger was for the most part confined to himself and his spouse.

Therefore he kept a sharp watch for any possible murderer, fearing none; for he trusted to his marvelous agility to save him from Libah or Sharbel and their kind, and for others —well, for them he had divers tricks of offense and defense, as may be seen.

Abruptly the sun put out its full power, and, like the drawing back of a sheet, the upper layer of fog was sucked up, and long lanes and rifts of visibility ripped through the thinning folds at ground level.

As luck would have, one such chasm exposed to any ill disposed persons overhead those eleven treasures which were all Buni's world; also, by chance, Siri chose that exact moment to take three great strides in the direction of a bright green shrub and commenced greedily to pluck the leaves and twigs, thinking, rashly, that for a few moments her guard might be relaxed.

But Hekimu had been waiting for just some such moment, and, though she was a quarter of a mile away at the time, she flung round on outstretched wings at that tempting sight, balanced a moment, watching with telescopic eyes, and came down like a girl's sigh.

She made no mistake. It is not wise to make mistakes in the wild; one does not have many opportunities of remedying them.

One dirty brown wing almost overshadowed the outermost egg as the great bird landed, and on the instant her shaven neck darted out and the cruel curved beak crashed against the tough shell.

At the impact Hekimu knew that the job was beyond her, so, with a swiftness surprising, she wheeled and grasped a heavy lump of quartz and turned again with distended jaws and brought the improvised hammer down—crash! and the rich contents bulged from the resultant fissure.

Hour by hour Buni stayed at his post, while the hen foraged for much needed food, and moment by moment the marvel of life repeated worked beneath him, till suddenly he stirred, raising his head and neck like the periscope of a submarine, and Siri, watching, knew that the great moment was at hand, though how Buni knew I cannot say.

Swift the mother flew, and fairly pushed her lord and master from his place to take her own, and so by the time the fantastic carved ridges of the Murosoka Hills danced purple upon the far horizon under the sun's drooping fingers the family was complete, and ten chocolate brown fuzzy ostrich chicks clamored instantly for food.

Then began a yet more anxious time for the devoted parents. Their enemies multiplied against them. Jackals and cheetahs, several cats, and even hyenas, found courage and opportunity to evade the guardians of youth. As the days passed the brood diminished until but six were left.

And one morning, while afar on private business, Buni heard the distant warning of his mate that told him of further trouble.

In an instant he was on the move. With curving neck stretched backward and little eyes like crimson dots, he scudded across the plain. His springy, rather mincing action was deceptive. He came to the scene of battle at a speed that none might rival. Twenty-one feet to the stride, and forty-five strides to the minute, the wind of his passage tossing his splendor of plumes about him.

From a long distance he noted the curious antics of his spouse and knew the affair to be no ordinary one.

Buni could see naught as he came save a pile of oryx with tapering horns tail-switching their way to a noonday resting place.

A little way overhead a ring of kavirondo cranes, magnificent crested birds of immense bulk, swung in a slow circle, calling mournfully.

Far up in the blue, however, Hekimu and others of her kith sieved the landscape for battle and the wreck of battle; their food is carrion. Already they began to let themselves down their invisible threads.

Buni was not deceived. He was very well aware that, in spite of the apparent peacefulness of the scene, evil was toward. He was well versed in Siri's maneuvers and knew what they portended. So he increased his already incredible speed and roared —I say he roared—a great, sullen volume of sound which echoed across and across the flats; at which many a buck stirred uneasily, deeming Libah to be about his fell work.

With a wholly superb semi-circle sweep the cock ostrich flung a detour round his offspring and saw that Siri had done wisely—no immediate danger threatened there. In a dozen checked strides he was by his spouse, and his flaming eyes peeped eagerly for his enemy. Thus for a space the twain stood, and it seemed as if nothing which had life could approach them, so scanty the cover, so merciless the watchfulness.

But Sharbel did it. Ah! but he must have been an hungered to tackle a pair of full-grown birds as these in full daytime.

On a moment you have them, two carvings in black and white ivory, with heads on tall, slim necks turned both in one direction. Then Sharbel ceased the movement in the last joint of his tail and launched himself in a majestic, power-crammed curve.

His armed forepaws reached and clung to Siri's neck where it sweeled to join the body, his drooling lips were curled back from frightful fangs, a hot film obscured the flickering green fires of his eyes.

As he swung up to full leap, so Buni moved, so Siri, else had Sharbel been upon her back and in position for the fatal bite to the vital vertebrae.

Even while the leopard's hind legs scrabbled in the grass, seeking fresh purchase that he might heave himself to where he would be, Buni came in.

Now, the power of an ostrich's kick is rather more than equal to that of a mature dray horse; in addition, Buni carried on his feet long, bitter sharp claws; and once he drove home his blow, and twice and thrice, and at each a ghastly rip.

The red blood spurted to the beat of the flashing claw with a noise like the rending of sackcloth.

Nothing under four hundred pounds weight could withstand such a hammering, and Sharbel, for all his ferocity, was but a few pounds over ten stone.

The third tearing onslaught, delivered downward, as always, with the cock bird's whole weight behind it, fairly jerked the aggressor from his hold. He fell and rolled over, head screwed along one shoulder in a fiendish smile at his opponent, and Buni's final kick caught him full upon the face. Then did Sharbel bethink himself; no time he wasted in bitter regrets or self-pity; oblivion waited upon hesitation, and leopards are quick movers.

He seemed to melt into the adjacent grass, to be there one moment and never to have been the next. It was the blowing out of a candle, so swift he went.

Unwisely, Buni, flushed with victory, essayed to follow, and a tuft of stems which looked as if it could not hide a rabbit vomited a bloody, swearing something that flashed in and struck and left five red hot scars through all Buni's supple armor of plumes.

But Sharbel did not tarry; he was away with the mere impetus of his counter stroke, and though the cock bird did not know it, only a broken jaw prevented Sharbel reaping a rich reward for his last bout.

Nature, it seemed, had called a truce with the valiant birds after this latest affray. The chicks flourished unmolested, save one that swallowed a scorpion in mistake for some other indigestible dainty, and died uneasily.

Moons waxed and waned, and the heavy rains were over, and now the remaining five stood high as a tall man, and already carried more ebon plumage. Buni and Siri strutted to and fro across the luxuriant feeding grounds, puffed up with undue pride. Never before, in their opinion, had there been such an egg-bursting. These ostrich younglings surely surpassed all other hatched since time began!

They redoubled their vigilance as the dry season recommenced, and the herds of buck came back to the drying lowlands, followed by the beasts of ravine, who take toll of their packed hundreds, and the sinister parasites, such as jackal and Mangy Ones, whose other name is hyaena, which follow the Lords of Death subservient to the feast.

Yet the return of these plains dwellers was slow and uncertain, and Siri, looking day by day towards the horizon, saw ever a livid band of copper cloud which lay upon the peaks, and though by midday it was gone, yet at each return was denser and more menacing.

And day by day the damp heat grew more intense and the earth seemed to pant in expectation of a mortal blow.

On a morning the copper poisonous clouds did not disperse but grew up towards the zenith, shot with lightnings and terribly a-roar. Then too late did the cock bird realize that, save for an infrequent hyena or wart hog, they were alone.

Wiser than he, all others had trekked towards the hill, where perchance they might be safe from the wrath to come. Followed a season for which it would be meet to thank God. Let there be no mistake. The thanks would be due because surely such a one could never be again.

Out of time, the rains returned upon themselves, and the earth roared to the raving heavens and the waters spread out afar.

The Tarash filled its fifty-foot chasm and ran level miles to either hand; a broad river sprang from the Lorain swamp to rush foaming across the Karroli desert and join the Lakjira, a portent at which the Ogaden Somalis marveled and died, for the beat of the ten-foot wave crest was an irresistible terror.

Then did the waters sweep down upon a hundred villages and bore strange rafts upon their yeasty surface, while vultures and crows floated grimly with the current, ever busy with their resting place.

And Buni with his family was at the place whereon the full fury first descended. Too late then to trust to speed for salvation, with the heavens spouting fire and water and the currents rising seven inches an hour about benumbed legs. Of no avail to roar one's anguish to an unheeding pall which turned day to twilight.

Through that unaccustomed sea the cock bird struggled overlate towards the distant hills; sliding, slipping, and half submerged. Those miserables, the chicks, sought to keep at his side.

Ever he roared his challenge, and step by step hope died within him. Finally, as they rested on an outcrop, where as yet no tide reached, something the three remaining younglings thought to be a ghoul from the Pit ran in amongst them.

Amidst the flame-shattered murk this horror ran in with many mouthings and hideous gestures. In the midst of death it seemed that something must slay it for sheer beastliness of nature. That was Fisi, one of the Mangy Ones. Greedy, though within an hour of his end, he was at the side of one bird before the ex-

Things New and Old About the Bible :

BY REV. W. P. KING

Arguments for the Existence of God.

THE heart and life of the Scriptures is that portion which deals with religious experience. This is forever beyond the reach of adverse criticism. This is that part of the Bible which is as fresh as the dew of the morning. This is not to depreciate the Bible, but to exalt it. It is a library of religious experience. It unveils the spiritual life of the various prophets and saints who wrote the various books. It kindles the aspiration for a life experience in the reader.

DR. W. P. KING

The test of religious experience was the fundamental factor in determining the Canon, and the experience of the highest saints comes to use with the note of authority. St. Paul in his address to the Athenians would bring men to the center of their own soul to find their lost god.

As you reach the culmination of this divine revelation, you find still the unfolding of religious experience. The marvelous teaching of Jesus was out of His own experience. The beautitudes were first lived by Jesus, before they were spoken. "Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the Kingdom of God." "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God."

Can we have any higher authority than that which comes through the highest experience? Do we want any higher authority than the divinely inspired consciousness and the revelation of the spiritual consciousness of Jesus Christ?

How can you get revelation except through experience? Even in the historical element God revealed Himself through the deeds of men which made history. Can you conceive of any way that a divine revelation could reach the heart of humanity except through experience? The revelation of the Mormon Bible and the Mohammedan Koran is not conditioned on experience. We are not Mormons nor Mohammedans in our idea of the Bible, at least we should not be. A revelation that is to reach the heart of humanity must come from God through the heart of humanity. The universal human heart will never respond to any other sort of revelation. There could be no botany without experiencing the flower. Astronomy exists only as the stars are experienced. The child knows the mother only as the mother reveals herself to the child through experience. We can only know God as we have an experience of God.

Some Biblical scholars have been more concerned about who wrote the twenty-third psalm than in showing how the twentieth century Christian can cultivate the blessed experience of divine companionship. Some men are more eager in their speculations as to the authorship of the Fourth Gospel than in teaching the world how they are to make the prayer of the seventeenth chapter the supreme aspiration of their own lives. We can only know the date and authority of a psalm, if at all, by historical knowledge. But the humblest saint may know the truth of the Psalmist's words, "Blessed is he whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered." We may not know how many inspired prophets had some part in the Book of Isaiah. But you may know to a certainty, "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as snow, and though they be red like crimson, they shall be white as wool."

A technical knowledge of the first epistle of John comes as a result of historical investigation. We may know with an inner, immediate certainty, "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive our sins and cleanse us from all unrighteousness.

Our creed which we receive from others is useless plunder unless it is vitalized by a living experience.

It is not our theory of prayer that is important. We must be able to say, "I cried unto the Lord with my voice, and he heard me out of His holy hill."

It is pathetic to see a person seeking logical evidence for immortality in the hour of his crushing sorrow. The only satisfying evidence of immortality is to live the eternal life in this present world. Men believe in a heaven for the future when they have already found a heaven close at hand. We may know that Jesus Christ rose from the dead, because he talks with us today.

Men try to understand the atonement, the significance of the death of Jesus as the dogmatic article of a creed. You can never understand it in that way. But go to the rescue of some outcast, bear the burden of the shame of the sin of others on your own heart, and then you will know something of the eternal heartache of God for a lost world.

The incarnate life of Jesus Christ would be but a dead fact stranded on the shores of time if it were not for the vitalizing power of Christian experience.

"Though Christ in Bethlehem, a thousand times be born,
If he be not born in thee, thy heart is all forlorn."

The doctrine of the deity of Jesus is only truly verified in experience. If you are not willing to surrender to Jesus as your guide, you will never know him as your God. We have insisted that men must first accept the dogma of his divinity, forgetting that we must first accept his character with his hatred of lust and impunity even in thought, his hatred of hatred, revenge, pride and selfishness. You never realize the difficulty of being good until you start in to try to be good as Jesus was good. As you endeavor to attain goodness and lead other men to attain it, then in your insufficiency you know that you must have help above the human and that Jesus must work in you and through you. The divinity of Jesus Christ ceases to be a dead dogma and becomes a burning living fact.

The World's Greatest Pictures

"Crusaders' Entry Into Constantinople" :: By Delacroix

BY EUGENE P. CONLEY.

This is the 28th of a series of 52 greatest paintings, which represent the choice of the art directors throughout North America. Reproduction of this art masterpiece appears in the rotagravure section of today's Constitution.

In the Louvre hangs "The Crusaders' Entry Into Constantinople," the masterpiece of Eugene Delacroix, (Deh-la-cra') painted in the year 1840, when the artist was in his 41st year.

It forms one of the largest historical paintings made by him, measuring twelve feet square. At the door of a fine mansion situated on a hill and overlooking the city of Constantinople ride the crusaders headed by Baudouin, Count of Flanders. His attention is attracted to an old man and young girl, presumably father and daughter, who beg on bended knees, that mercy be shown them; from the portico on the left an old man—hands raised in solicitation—is being taken from his home by a soldier; to the right and in the foreground appears the half nude figure of a beautiful girl bending over the lifeless form of her sister.

"A chain is no stronger than its weakest link," is applicable to art. Inattention to the minutest detail has injured many an artist. The smoke effect emanating from the city in the background, giving indication that the crusaders were guilty of incendiarism, is finely executed on canvas, and shows Delacroix to be a master of detail.

He was born one year before the dawn of the Century of Inventions—the nineteenth. Ten years later, in 1809, Destiny flooded this planet Earth with a goodly number more than its fair quota of great men, including: Lincoln, Mendelssohn, Poe, Chopin, Gladstone, Holmes and Tennyson, thereby proving the truth of Emerson's statement "Great men never come singly." In that year the teacher caught young Eugene drawing a picture of her in the back of his school book. Now it is not a teacher's habit to encourage such practice in the school room, so the young pupil was duly reprimanded.

But the mother liked drawing, and after allowing the proper discount for maternal pride, this much must be admitted—a mother is more often right than a teacher. If nothing more the incident at least decided the boy's future. He would be an artist. It is said that Franz Listz could read music before he could write, and Delacroix was kin to him in this respect—he could draw pictures before he could read.

Art and poverty go together. They are allies. The most priceless heritage any artist can hope for is poverty. When Delacroix made his debut at the Paris Salon in 1822, (the same year Rosa Bonheur was born), with his famous "Dante and Virgil," he was so destitute that buying a frame for the painting was beyond all reason, so he improvised a rude one out of laths. On the opening day of the Salon, he could not find his painting, but later found it occupying a place of honor and in a beautiful frame. A friend, who did not wish to see it rejected because of the crude frame, was responsible for the new one.

Throughout his life, Delacroix suffered from ill health, and this hindered his progress greatly, keeping him from entering in competition with other artists. He died in the year 1863, his niche fixed high on the ladder of success. He lived to see the sunshine of fortune smile radiantly upon his beloved fellow artists, Millet, Corot and Bonheur.

hausted parents knew that they were not alone.

He was not there long, for Siri heard the last call of her kin and whirled about like one distraught. The outcrop was of no great extent, and Fisi feared the flood and tried to save his life by acrobatics.

At the end, with coward courage, he even turned upon the fury that was the mother, and she slew him swiftly as he started on his slashing spring and recover.

At least there was not much left of him when an outflung arm of the tepid waters plucked him from the edge and sucked him to his doom.

For five days the heavens spurted their contents, and for five days the four ostriches clung to their insecure foothold. For food there was rock and cactus spines. Cactus spines and rock. But a beneficent Providence has ordained that an ostrich shall flourish where even an American Jew might perchance grow thin.

And on the sixth day the sun tore himself a path through the clouds, and the waters fell as they had risen, like magic.

So the great birds came down again to where the grass lay beaten flat upon the earth, and stalked mincingly to and fro, searching for more luscious fare. The storm was past. Let it pass. It was over. Let there be no repinings.

With almost cruel indifference the remainder of the brood took life once more where it had been so savagely interrupted. Regret was not one of their drawbacks; the struggle merely to keep alive is too sharp for weak indulgences.

Thus one day when Buni, annowed by some trivial wrongdoing, turned upon his son, that one struck at him again—an unexpected defiance.

Then both Buni and his mate knew that their responsibility was at an end. With no thought of the anxious months of parenthood, they united and drove the two youngsters from them to seek their own livelihood.

The chicks were grown up.

INSTALMENT X.

"FABRIAN," he snapped.

"I never saw anything like it, not even in the pictures," said Miss Wenner. "Couldn't we have the hood up, Fabe —Fabrian?"

He stopped the car with a jerk, pulled up the hood and fastened it.

"What are you going to do?"

"I'm taking you home. We'll make another attempt tomorrow night. By the way, how did you get that stone corner piece to turn?"

"I can't tell you that, Fabrian," she said firmly and truly. "That's my only hold over you."

"Don't be stupid. You used a bodkin or something, didn't you? I noticed there was a space between two stones which looked to be artificial."

"A pair of scissors," she said. "There's an iron catch inside that slit —I only found it by accident."

He knew all he wanted to know now; could dispense with her for the rest of the night, for ever, as it happened. He declined her invitation to come upstairs for a drink, and no sooner was she out of sight than he was flying back into Sussex.

Half way between Dorking and Leatherhead, his petrol gave out, and he had to wait on the charity of a passing motorist, and it was not a night when traffic was very thick. At last he found a good Samaritan who gave him enough to take the machine to the nearest filling station, and at Dorking, with his tank replenished and a few extra tins against emergency, he went on confidently.

Two o'clock showed on the illuminated dial of his watch when he backed the car into the field and mounted the slope to the ruins. From here onward he moved noiselessly, one step at a time, stopping every few paces to listen. But there was no sign or sound of the mask.

He found the corner of the tower, with his penknife pressed back the catch, and, pulling at the rough stone the edges of which crumbled in his hand, he opened the door.

Stopping only to examine the upper chamber, he went slowly down the stairs, his pistol in one hand, his lamp in the other. There was no sign of the intruder, but——

The door of the treasure house was closed. He pulled, and it swung open. Flashing his lamp into the long, narrow cell, he saw something that sent the blood from his face. The "ingots" had disappeared, every one of them! Neither the bench to the left or right held a single cylinder. Beads of perspiration were running down his face as he turned, and it would have been death to any human spook who opposed him, for his heart was bitter against whosoever it was had checked his enterprise.

He made another inspection of the underground chamber. Unlike its fellow, the second door in the opposite corner of the room was solid. Neither a peep hole nor grating gave a view into the room it guarded. He guessed that behind the nail studded portal was a similar room to that in which the cylinders had been stored. Trying his key on the lock, he could produce no result. He put his shoulder to the oaken face but the door did not budge by so much as a fraction of an inch.

Before this room the flooring consisted of a long slab of stone that ran without a break to the center of the apartment, and was the exact width of the narrow doorway. Had this any significance? Kneeling, he examined the stone carefully. It was different from the rest of the paving. The broken stones that formed the floor of the room were worn smooth by the passage of generations of men; this oblong strip was rough dressed, more like the underside of a paving stone than its chiseled surface. He stamped on one end and felt it give ever so slightly; stamped on the other end and had a like experience. In the middle ran a staple, balancing the stone, and beneath there was a hollow space. Some day or night he would come along and conduct a more careful inspection.

He came into the upper room to confront a more urgent problem. Just as he was about to extinguish his lamp preparatory to passing through the opening, he saw the stone move. Before he could spring forward it had thudded into its place. From somewhere outside he heard an unearthly chuckle of laughter.

"Thomas!" he said, unable to believe his eyes, "what the devil are you doing here?"

Trapped! He pushed at the door, but it was inflexible. Inch by inch he examined its surface. There must be an opening somewhere, he thought. He remembered the story of the amorous Abbot and his clandestine excursions. It was certain that a means existed for opening the door from the inside.

He searched the wall; nothing appeared. And then it occurred to him to send his light slowly along the floor, which was made up of broken flagstones. One, smaller than the others, attracted his attention, because it lay at a truer level than the rest, and he tugged at its end, and, with great effort, pulled it up. Beneath he saw a great iron ring, so rusted that it was almost razor thin. With his handkerchief he gripped it and pulled. It gave a little, and, as it did, he saw the door move. Again he strained at the handle, and slowly it came up; although the door had moved only an inch he knew it was clear of the invisible catch which held it. Running to the stone, he pressed with all his might. It swung open and he came staggering out into the eerie light of dawn.

The storm had passed; overhead, the stars were shining in the paling sky. Far away to his left a wisp of smoke curled up from the twisted chimneys of Fossaway Manor. Fabrian Gilder wiped his hot face and strove to overcome the bitterness of his defeat. And then, at his feet, he saw something and, stooping with a cry, picked it up. It was one of the cylinders, heavy and laden, that had been dropped by those who had cleared the vault. It was not heavy enough for gold. He knew that at once. The cover was of lead. He tore away the seal, expecting to find an opening, but the cylinder had been sealed at both ends. He carried it quickly down the slope, and in the shelter of the cut road he took out his knife and slit the thin lead end, and pulled out a tightly rolled sheet of parchment. He opened it and stared. It was an ancient missal, beautifully painted and, as a work of art, priceless, but a poor substitute for thirty-five pounds weight of solid gold!

An ancient missal, beautifully painted, was in the cylinder which Gilder found, and that was all the other cylinders contained, he thought, with a gleam of satisfaction. Whoever had watched him—and he suspected Arthur Gwyn, naturally—had had the same disappointment.

It was in this room that the old monks had stored their ancient music. There was a certain grim humor in the thought of how he had spent his night and the reward for it.

Gilder Gets a Surprise.

He crossed the road, opened the gate, and went into the field where he had left his car, and stood stock still, petrified with amazement. The car had disappeared!

The tracks were plainly visible. They led through the cutting, along the road towards Willow House. There was nothing to do but to tramp after them. A mile beyond Arthur Gwyn's residence was Ravensrill Cottage, his own property, he thought with some satisfaction, and a snug retreat where a man could get a hot bath in an hour and a steaming cup of tea in a quarter. The prospect was cheering, for he was wet through, weary and footsore.

The tracks passed the entrance of Willow House and continued on the way to the cottage, and when at last he turned the bend of the road that brought his little country home into view he saw the car standing before the door. There was no sign of any living creature. He went round the house, searched the tiny plantation to the left, and even descended to the banks of the stream before he opened the door of his cottage and went in.

He put the key in the lock and, to his surprise, on the pressure of his hand, the door opened. The door which opened into his little dining room yielded to his pressure before he could turn the key. He gazed, stricken dumb with amazement. A small fire was burning in the grate, on which a kettle was steaming. An open teapot was on the hearth, and somebody had broken open a tin of biscuits. He heard a footstep in the next room and swung round to meet the intruder, and at the sight of him he dropped the point of his leveled Browning.

"Thomas!" he said, unable to believe his eyes, "what the devil are you doing here?"

"Fired this morning," said the ex-footman curtly.

"This morning? Why, it's hardly daylight!"

Thomas nodded.

Alford found me wandering about the house when I ought to have been in bed and asleep," he said, "and he hoofed me out."

"But why?"

The man was uncomfortable.

"How do I know why?" he demanded. "That dog never liked me. I think he suspected me of writing to you."

Gilder knew that this story was a lie, designed to show him under obligation to this ex-servant. Thomas had been a useful correspondent of his; all that went on at Fossaway Manor had been faithfully recorded for his information.

"You are in trouble. What have you been doing?"

The man pursed his lips.

"Well," he hesitated, "I may as well tell you the truth. Have you ever heard of Monkey Puttler? Wait a minute. I'll make the tea."

He picked up the steaming kettle and filled the pot, and not till he had put it back on the hob did he continue his narrative.

"Monkey Puttler's a 'busy.' Every crook in London knows him, and I know him as well as anybody because he got me three years for a job I did at the Westinghouse hotel."

"Burglary?" asked the other, to whom this was news.

"An inside job," said the other tersely. "You can call it burglary if it gives you any pleasure. Anyway, Monkey caught me and pushed me over the Alps for three long and weary ones. When I came out I got this job. There were pickings to it, too. Chelford isn't a man who counts his change, and Alford doesn't dare ask him what he's done with his money when he comes for more."

"An ex-convict, eh?" Gilder was slightly shocked and regarded the man from a new angle. "I didn't know that or I should never have employed you!"

"I had to kid a bit," confessed Thomas with a grin.

"You kidded me all right!" replied Gilder.

"Well, I didn't exactly kid you," said the other, amused. "But that day when I went to your office and you started cross-examining me about how things were at the Manor with Gwyn, I didn't see why I shouldn't earn a few honest dollars."

"Well? Go on about your friend Monkey—what is his name?"

"Puttler. He came yesterday."

"To Chelford's house?" asked Gilder in surprise.

"Yes," nodded Thomas. "Alford pretended he is an accountant, but he's a busy all right. I knew him the moment I saw him, and what's worse, he knew me. I'd come to Chelford's service on a false character and I knew my number was up as soon as I saw his ugly phiz. Sure enough, last night Alford gave me notice, told me to clear out today. I'll catch that bird one of these days," he said, with an ugly look in his face.

"But why this morning?" asked Gilder.

"I was going to tell you," said the other impatiently. "Chelford keeps a cash box in his library; it's in the second left hand drawer, and he's generally got a wad of stuff there. He's childish in the matter of money. I knew if I could get my hooks into the stuff I could lift enough to be happy, and leave enough behind so that Chelford couldn't swear whether I'd had it or not. I got into the library about four this morning and was going upstairs when Alford spotted me, told me to go up and dress and clear, which I did—he's got something on his mind, that fellow; he never sleeps!"

"He caught you with the money?" asked Gilder in disgust.

"Not he. I shoved that out of the library window as soon as I got it. I picked it up later."

"What was Mr. Alford doing, wandering about the house at that hour?"

The man made a grimace.

"You never know when that bird is around," he said. "He's not human. I tell you he doesn't want sleep!"

Though Gilder was certain he was telling the truth, yet he was equally sure that the man was concealing something. There seemed to him to be gaps in his story which he bridged readily enough. Wisely he decided that it was not the moment to cross-examine him. On one point he made up his mind. This man and he must part company, and soon.

"Why did you come here?"

"Thought you were in London," said the other coily. "I've been here before to see you, and I didn't think you'd mind my using your house for a day or two—maybe a week or two," he added, his eyes fixed on the other's face.

Gilder scratched his chin thoughtfully.

"I don't know that it will do me much good if it's known that you're an ex-convict."

"They needn't know; why should they?" said the other.

"Did you bring my car here?"

Thomas nodded.

"I was going over to Red Farm first; there's a groom there who's a friend of mine. Then I saw your car and thought something had happened to you. I waited for a time and when you didn't turn up I brought it along."

"Did anybody see you?"

"Nobody. It was nearly dark."

What was the man concealing? The impression that Gilder had—and he was a skillful reader of minds—was that Thomas was bursting with some vital information. Once or twice it had been at the end of his tongue and he had inhibited the sensation.

"You can stay here if you like. I'm going to town. If I get a letter from the local police saying you're living in the house, I shall write, saying you have no authority. You understand that I must protect myself?"

"I can understand that, guv'nor."

Again his lips moved to speak, and again he checked himself.

"What do you want to tell me?"

"It's too big to tell. I am going to keep it. Maybe if you come down later I'll spin you a story that's worth a million dollars."

Thomas had once spent twelve months in a Canadian penitentiary, and it was his favorite pose that he was an American crook.

"A million dollars—yep."

Gilder poured out the tea, helped himself to biscuits, and, his hunger relieved, went into his room, and from a bureau took a complete change of clothes. The water was too cold for a bath, and he had a rub down with a rough towel as a substitute. He felt another man, shaved and clean and warm. He came back to Thomas, who was smoking a short brier pipe, peering into the fire.

"When you've decided to talk, you had better send me a wire—not from Chelfordbury but from Horsham."

He wrote his address on a page of his notebook, tore it out and gave it to the man; then, cranking up his car, he went back through the dull morning to London.

At ten o'clock he was roused from a heavy sleep to answer the telephone. It was Mary Wenner, and he cursed her under his breath.

"Is that you, Fabe? I've been so worried about you all night, my dear. You didn't go back to that awful place?"

"I'll come and see you this afternoon," he interrupted. "Don't talk on the telephone; people can hear."

"Fabe, dear"—there was a real note of anxiety in her voice—"you didn't go back and get any of that gold, did you? I know you're awfully brave, but I wouldn't have you risk your life for the world."

"No, I didn't get any gold," he said.

"Oh!" she replied, and in that "Oh!" was disappointment and annoyance. "It wasn't so bad for you, a man," she said, with some asperity in her tone. "Here I've been lying in bed all night thinking of you, and worrying about you—"

"I will see you this afternoon," he rasped, and hung up on her.

He had no intention of seeing her that afternoon or any other afternoon, but in this matter his will was not the determining factor. Soon after tea, when he was preparing to go out, she walked in his dining room unannounced. What she had told his servants, he shuddered to think. She passed swiftly across to him, stooped and kissed him chastely on the brow, and then seated herself by his side.

"Dear," she said, and he closed his eyes patiently, "do you mind if I do something that seems a teeny-weeny bit deceitful?"

"I don't mind——" he began.

"But this is something which affects your honor, dear." Her sober eyes were fixed on his. "You must never think I'm not faithful to you and all that sort of thing, but he's written to me such a pleading letter——"

"Who has written?" he asked suddenly interested.

"Arthur. I've also had a letter from his sister. She wants me to go down and spend the week-end with them, and of course I'd much rather stay up here with you. But I feel I ought to have it out with Arthur and let him know that my affections are no longer his. After all, even if we didn't get the fortune, I know that I'm dealing with a gentleman who doesn't want me for my money alone. And you're not exactly a pauper, are you, dear? I went and asked a young gentleman I know at Stubbs' agency, and they told me that you were worth at least a hundred thousand pounds."

Gilder groaned.

"And I have your promise, in writing."

"Yes, you've got everything, my dear Mary," he said wearily.

"And, Fabe, dear, such a curious thing happened about that paper. When I took it from under my pillow this morning, what do you think? All the writing had disappeared! You could have knocked me down with a feather."

He stirred uneasily in his chair.

"That is most extraordinary," he found words to say.

"I was so upset about it that I took it to a gentleman friend of mine, who's in the conjuring business. You've probably seen him. He takes rabbits out of paper bags, and he says that you must have used invisible ink, and he showed me how to bring the writing back and make it permanent."

"And did you?" asked Gilder, hollowly.

"Why, of course I did, dear. You just squeeze a lemon, rub it over the paper, and hold it in front of the fire."

"Gilder's head reeled. All he could say was "Oh!" This was awkward—very awkward; but it was a difficulty that might easily be surmounted. At the worst he could buy her off for a thousand, and the promise of marriage was contingent. Still, it was a very unpleasant document to be produced even in a breach of promise case; for, strong in the faith of the invisible quality of his ink, he had made an agreement which was very damaging to himself.

"Are you going to stay with the Gwyns?"

"I think so, dear." The hesitation was assumed, he knew; she had already made up her mind. "I really think that I ought to go. Arthur, of course, is a very old friend, and although he's nothing to me, any more than the dirt beneath my feet, and I should no more think of throwing myself at his head than I should of flying to the moon—well, I feel I ought to go."

"Then for heaven's sake go!" he said curtly, and she murmured her thanks, and would have lingered on, but he accompanied her to the door and opened it very pointedly.

He gathered that, whilst she held him to his promise, she had not altogether lost hope of bringing Arthur Gwyn to heel.

She had hardly left the place before a telegraph boy arrived. Gilder was expecting a wire from one of his bookmaking businesses, now in process of liquidation, since their only client had passed from active operations. The telegram was addressed from a village five miles from Chelfordbury and ran:

"Get down here as fast as you can. Big news for you."

It was signed "T."

Would Thomas talk? And what had he to say?

What Has Happened to Justice

he, unhesitatingly, obeyed.

Snowden took her all the way to Cranbury, seven miles. There, after three days, her parents found her and brought her home. And for his part in the elopement the youthful Lothario was sentenced to nine months in the county workhouse. Thereafter a close watch was kept on Elizabeth.

The following spring the Johnsons moved from Plainsboro to Kingston. It was a much larger farm than the old one. The season was late and crops had to be gotten into the ground. The hard-visaged farmer told his wife they would have to get help. It was too much for one man to handle alone and thus did Harvey Selhaver come to the Johnson household.

His coming was, of itself, inauspicious enough. Little Johnny Johnson, brother of Elizabeth, was on his way to school. It was a long hike from the farm to the schoolhouse, so Johnny hitched on behind a motor truck which went clanking over the narrow road from Trenton.

At the Lincoln highway crossing in Kingston, Johnny slipped to the ground. Nearby he spied a youth clad in a tattered soldier's uniform, himself dirty and unkempt. The boy, either through fate or sheer curiosity, sidled up to him.

"Say, kid," the stranger asked, "where could a fella get a job around here?"

For a moment Johnny's brow wrinkled in perplexity. Then he remembered he had heard his father tell his mother they needed help on the farm. So he sent the stranger to his father's home.

Behind the stern exterior of Farmer Johnson was a warm heart. Not much given to demonstrations, he was, in his awkward way, extremely hospitable. He welcomed Selhaver and gave him a job. The hands on farms thereabouts are paid by the month, and Selhaver didn't have a penny. So the farmer took him to Trenton, bought him new clothes and tobacco and gave him an advance on his wages.

Their First Meeting.

That afternoon when Elizabeth returned from school she met the new Prince Charming whom luckless fate had sent her way. Harvey had been even more of a wanderer than Harlie Snowden, and what he lacked in experience he made up in imagination. He had served in the coast artillery at Fort George Wright, Washington, and deserted during the war.

One of his hands was maimed and he loved to describe how he was wounded overseas during the height of the Argonne offensive. At times, too, he would hint, not too vaguely, that an impediment in his speech was the result of shell shock.

But to Elizabeth he was a hero. At night, when the farm work was done, they would sit together on the front porch of the ramshackle little house, while he recounted marvelous tales of travel and romance. He saw that she was of a romantic nature. At the store nearby he learned of her affair with Harlie Snowden. And, young though she was, he determined that she must be his.

His attachment was almost fanatical. If any of the neighborhood youths looked twice at Elizabeth, Harvey would turn purple with rage. To win favor in her eyes, he even invested a good share of his wages each month in the cheapest type of love stories. And at night, by the light of a smoky coal oil lamp, he spent long hours perusing these books, memorizing passionate phrases that he might whisper them to her on the porch as his own.

Farmer Johnson and his wife saw that Selhaver was spending much of his time in Elizabeth's company. Indeed, Mrs. Johnson called the matter to the farmer's attention on more than one occasion. But her husband was not of a suspicious nature. He thought it only natural they should be attracted to each other. Elizabeth was pretty and Selhaver was young. And besides he was a good worker and had begun to get the hang of things about the farm.

The Birthday Gift.

Then one day Johnny found a letter in Elizabeth's room. It contained a dollar and had been slipped under the door by Selhaver. In the letter he said that he was sorry he could not buy her a birthday present, but the dollar was all he had and he professed violent love for her.

Johnny thought it funny and took the letter to his mother. But she, with her old world notions of proprieties that ought to be observed by girls of marriageable age, went to Selhaver and demanded that he cease his attentions to her daughter.

The farmhand, however, insisted that his intentions were honorable and asked permission to marry Elizabeth. But the mother only laughed. Elizabeth, she said, was too young to be married. And besides, how could he support a wife on $30 per month?

Thereafter, whenever Elizabeth and Harvey were together, Mrs. Johnson contrived to have either Johnny or Elizabeth's younger sister, Katherine, nearby. More stormy scenes followed, in which Harvey demanded Elizabeth's hand in marriage. But the parents were obdurate. One day, after a particularly violent argument, Harvey turned to Farmer Johnson and exclaimed:

"Well, if I can't have her no one else will!"

The farmer didn't like this. He thought matters had gone about far enough. So he paid Harvey off and told him to look for another job. That was August 5. It was exactly a week later that Elizabeth disappeared.

Katherine sensed that something unusual was afoot. All day long Elizabeth had been going about the house in a dreamy fashion.

Night came and the family retired as usual, tramping up the rickety wooden stairs, with Farmer Johnson, carrying the big sturdy lamp from the parlor, last in line. When her mother had retired Elizabeth went to her room and kissed her—kissed her twice, and wept a little—that wasn't an everyday occurrence in the Johnson home. And back in her own room which she shared with Katherine she lay wide awake.

Telltale Footprints.

Katherine had slept for about two hours when she awoke to find Elizabeth snuggled close to her.

"Why don't you go to sleep?" the younger sister asked.

"I can't," Elizabeth replied.

Those were the last words any of her family ever heard her speak. When Katherine opened her eyes in the morning Elizabeth was gone. Then they combed the neighborhood for her, but found nothing. The search lasted all day and at nightfall Farmer Johnson returned, footsore and weary, satisfied that Elizabeth and Selhaver had eloped.

Everything pointed to this fact. Mrs. Johnson recalled that the back door was open when she came downstairs in the morning. It had rained the night before and in the soft ground outside the farmer found footprints—a man's foot, large with narrow pointed shoes and rubber heels. Harvey had worn just such shoes. And near the barn the man's footprints were joined by smaller, slighter ones.

Inside the barn Farmer Johnson found an old pair of trousers belonging to Harvey and some sacking which had been used during the night to make a bed. Apparently Harvey had slept there.

Day after day went by and no word came from Elizabeth. The family watched each mail for word from her. They knew that she was pleasure loving and that she had longed for the life of the great city, but they were sure that some day she would come back.

A month passed. Then on September 15, James Casserly, caretaker on the grounds of St. Joseph's seminary, noted buzzards circling in great numbers over a clump of woods near the lake shore. It was a spot well known to the neighborhood, an ideal trysting place, and because of this the road running nearby was called Lovers' lane.

The Discovery.

Thinking that one of the cows on the farm had met with an accident and was dying, Casserly sauntered over to the spot. And there he found the body of a girl.

It was Elizabeth Johnson, dressed as she had been the night she left her home. Her best dress of blue and white striped cotton. On her finger was her father's ring, which she had made smaller by wrapping string around one part of the circlet. And carefully spread beneath her was a Philadelphia newspaper bearing the date August 12.

In Elizabeth's left temple was a single hole made by a small caliber bullet, and as they lifted her a .22 caliber missile fell from the right side of her skull. The position of the wound and the absence of any weapon precluded suicide and the police began at once to look for Harvey.

What happened after Elizabeth left home on the fateful night of August 12, 1924? No one knows and each passing day serves only to heighten the mystery. The love letter of the cave is the only tangible evidence the authorities have.

Most of our ladies of the screen when impersonating titled personages never look more like Patronesses for the Fireman's Ball. Stop a minute and see how very few stars you can think of who might be accused of looking patrician.

I hear they are going to tear down my apartment building in December, but I think it's going to fall down in October. Every morning I look out of the window to see if I'm still on the seventh floor. In New York when they haven't anything to do they tear down apartments just like in Atlanta, they tear up the streets. October 1st in New York is worse than any May 1st, for that day everybody moves whether they have any reason for moving or not.

only be humiliated if you try."

"Because I'm only a chauffeur?" He smiled inscrutably. Then he looked again from one to the other and his eyes twinkled.

"Pardon me, but I wonder if I'm right in assuming that you two are—well, interested in each other? I wouldn't be so presumptuous if I hadn't happened to come 'round the corner when I did."

Virginia blushed and Wells smiled awkwardly. They glanced sheepishly at each other, and then burst out laughing. Rasher was satisfied.

"Good! Then this is the time for action!" he exclaimed. "The happiness of both of you depends on the next few hours, and as I may not be able to save the day single handed my advice to you two is to clear out at least until you're safely married. Get into that car now and beat it. You can get a license and a minister inside of an hour. Then come back if you want to. That will give me time here."

Wells was shaking Rasher's hand in an excess of gratitude, and Virginia, after one last glance of apprehension through the trees toward the house, smiled through tears of happiness.

"I'll go up to the house," said Rasher. "My blessings on you." And he leaped into his taxi and kept his eyes forward. Just before rounding the next curve he ventured a backward look. The Crayton car, with Dick and Virginia, had vanished on the first leg of an auspicious journey that promised to extend through many happy years.

Promptly at ten Mr. and Mrs. Crayton heard a car draw up to the door, and they composed themselves to receive their distinguished visitor, Mr. Bacon. Instead, they were horrified to see their late chauffeur, Rasher, enter the room.

"You!" exclaimed Mrs. Crayton. "Why are you here?"

"Why, it's Rasher," remarked Mr. Crayton. "I didn't expect to see you so soon."

Both the Craytons were thinking fast, anxious to get rid of this unwelcome visitor as soon as possible—Mrs. Crayton fearing he might once more complicate her plans, Mr. Crayton considering the likelihood that Rasher had come to make a financial claim for having sustained a bullet wound in defense of his daughter. He was already wondering how much he could compromise for. He noted that while Rasher looked a little pale he seemed in fairly good physical condition.

"Well, my dear fellow," he said, glancing at his watch, "what can I do for you?" Mrs. Crayton had arisen and was tapping her heel impatiently on the floor. She was glowering at the intruder.

"I've come on a rather embarrassing mission," said Rasher slowly. "I hardly know how to begin."

"Let me help you, young man," said Mr. Crayton brusquely. "You want some money as damages."

Rasher smiled. "No," he said. "No, I don't want any money, Mr. Crayton. You owe me nothing, at least not in that direction. It's not quite as simple as that. I wish to speak of your daughter."

A snort of anger burst from Mrs. Crayton. "This is insufferable!" she cried. Mr. Crayton's eyes hardened. "Well, go on," he said coldly. "But be brief—we are expecting a visitor any minute."

The FUN BOX

Bravery

"What are you running away for, sonny?"

"I am trying to keep two fellows from fighting."

"Who are the fellows?"

"Tony Brown and me."

In a Dry Country

Last summer a fruit grower with irrigated lands was hapy to see a light rainfall. During the rain his hired man came in. "Why don't you stay in out of the rain?" asked the farmer.

"I don't mind a little dew like this," remarked the hired man. "I can work along just the same."

"The next time it rains," ordered the farmer, "you come in. I want the water on the land."

Of Course

"How was the circus?"

"Intense."

The Reason Why

"Mother," remarked little Elsie, "I wish we had a real baby so I could wheel it around in my go-cart."

"How sweet, dear. What made you think of that?"

"Well, you see, the dolls are always getting broken when the buggy tips over."

The Musician

"I don't know why it is, but I'm always breaking into song."

"If you'd ever get the key, you wouldn't have to break in."

SCHOOL AGAIN

Vacation is almost over, and boys and girls throughout the country will be returning to school in a few days. Right now is the time for you to decide what good you intend to get from this school term.

The next nine or ten months will present new opportunities to you in many lines. You will learn new things and study new courses. Each of these will have value for you. Resolve now to master them from the very beginning.

Then there will be new activities, in and out of school, open to you. Resolve to enter these with whole-heartedness. Remember that you get from things just what you put into them. Choose your activities with care, then give yourself to them vigorously.

You will make new friends and have new good times. Enjoy the good times to the full, and be a good friend to your friends. In other words, do your best and be your best in everything during the school year that is about to open.

Is Your Letter Printed On These Two "Letter Writers Club' Pages?

THE LETTER WI

WHIGHAM, GA.

Dear Cousins: I wonder if you will admit a stranger to have a pen-chat with you tonight? Hark! didn't I hear some one say, "I wonder where she is from?" I must tell you. I am not a stranger, but a new cousin from dear old south Georgia. I am 5 feet tall, have medium complexion, gray eyes and blonde (bobbed) hair and weigh 106 pounds. I am 12 years old. My birthday is July 14. What do you cousins do for pastime? I live on a farm and, of course, there is always plenty of work for both boys and girls. Best of all I enjoy helping mother with the house work. We have about 350 white leghorn chickens and I enjoy feeding them. Girls and boys, how many of you praise father and mother as much as you should? I am sure there is no one that knows how to appreciate their parents as they should until it is too late. Then they can look back over the past and say, "Well, if they were back on earth again, I would be better to them." Friends, now is the time to strew flowers. Don't wait until they are dead. I am glad to say my father and mother both are living, of which I am very thankful. I have one of the sweetest little brothers that ever was. His name is Millard. He is 11 years old. He calls himself daddy's little plow-boy. How many of you enjoy going to school? I think school days are a child's happiest days. I am now ready for the tenth grade. I go to a country school called Bell-Dixon. It has an enrollment of about 175 pupils. What are your favorite books? I like to read books of our great men, but best of all the Bible. It comes first with me. I won't worry you any longer. All of you cousins write to me and I will try to answer all letters received. Please send photos, too.

Just a happy new cousin,
ELIZABETH HARRISON.

Route 4.

POWDER SPRINGS, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: As we are members of the club we will not ask for admittance. What are you kiddies doing this hot weather? We are together (as usual) and have just finished eating a 45-pound watermelon. Wish some of you could have been here to help us. As we are cousins and live about one-half mile apart we are together most of the time. It has been so long since we wrote that we guess you have forgotten how we look.

I, Mary, have brown eyes, brown hair (bobbed), fair complexion and am 14 years old. I am 5 feet, 1 inch tall and weigh 100 pounds. My birthday is February 25. Have I a twin?

I, Norma, have brown eyes, brown hair (bobbed), fair complexion, am 5 feet, 3 inches tall, weigh 114 pounds and am 14 years old. My birthday is April 12. I suppose I have a twin, so there is no use to ask. If we have a twin please write to us and send your snapshot if possible. We have a snapshot book and we want all of you boys and girls' pictures in it. How do you enoy outdoor sports? We are both real fond of them. We are both fond of reading, too. We read the letter writers' club every Sunday. I think it is very nice for the editor to give us a page in the magazine. We are both going to school. We will be in the sophomore class next year, which will mean more work for us. How many of you take Latin? We took it in the freshman class and expect to take it again next year. It is our most of my time reading. We have you belong to the club? I, Mary, am a member of the calf club. I, Norma, am not a member of the club. I spend most of my time reading. We have lots of friends here, but we want some letter friends, so we can get acquainted with you boys and girls. We will answer all letters received. All of you write soon and please send mail separately.

NORMA TAYLOR.
MARY LEE.

DOUGLASVILLE, GA.

Hello Central: Give me the letter writers' club. Move over and let a little Georgia girl join your club. I have blue eyes, light hair and fair complexion. I am 8 years old and am promoted to the third grade. Did you ket promoted? My birthday is February 2. Who is my twin? I am 3 feet, 6 inches tall. I have three brothers and two sisters. My mother and daddy are both living. I go to Douglasville school and sure do like to go. I spent a week with my aunt on Chattahoochee river and had a good time. All you girls and boys write me and I will answer.

Your friend,
FRANCES GABLE.

CARROLLTON, GA.

Dear Friends: Slide over and let a Georgia girl in your club. I am 11 years old, am 4 feet, 2 inches tall and weigh 69 pounds. My birthday is March 2. I will be in the sixth grade when school begins. I sure will be glad when it starts. I like Little Orphan Annie, Gasoline Alley and Winnie Winkle best in the funnies. I like The Constitution better than any other paper. This is my first time to write. All of you boys and girls write to me. I will answer all letters received.

Your unknown friend,
ANGELINE GRIFFIN.

BRONWOOD, GA.

Hello Everyone: May I join your nice club? I am 14 years old and am in the tenth grade. I have taken piano four years and violin two. The height of my ambition is to be a good musician. How do you like my poem? I enjoy letters very much.

"MY GRANDMA."

I.
I have an old, old grandma,
Who in her room she sits,
And all through the quiet day
She knits, and knits, and knits.

II.
Grandma has a Bible—
She reads it every day,
And tells me Bible stories
When I come in from play.

III.
My grandma has a patchwork quilt
That she keeps in her room.
And part of it—she told me once—
Was woven on a loom.

IV.
The patchwork quilt is made
From dresses of grandmother's.
There's yellow, blue and purple
And many other colors.

V.
The blue stands for "forget-me-not,"
The yello was gold as the skies;
I never ask her about the purple,
For when I do, she always cries.

VI.
Grandma says that life
Is just a patchwork quilt;
And so to keep it pure and clean
It must be kept well-built.

VII.
My grandma lots of times
Sits right down in her chair,
And hands to me her comb and brush,
And lets me comb her hair.

VIII.
My grandma is so quiet and good;
She's also kind and true.
But she is always telling me
What I MUST and MUST NOT do.

IX.
I love my dear old grandma—
She's as good and kind as can be.
I guess the reason she loves me so
Is just because 'tis me.

Your friend,
LEE ELLA CAPEL.

VILLA RICA, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Will you please admit a Georgia boy into your happy band of boys and girls? I have been reading the letters every Sunday and enjoy them so much that I decided to try my luck for the first time. I have blue eyes, brown hair and am 4 feet, 8 inches tall. I am 12 years old and weigh about 70 pounds. My birthday is January 18. I will be in the seventh grade when school starts. Do you boys and girls want school to start? I don't much, because I am having such a good time. What do you kiddies do for pastime? I ride my horse, go swimming, play ball, play horseshoes and a little of everything. But best of all I like to ride my horse and go swimming. Can you swim? I can swim like a duck and ride a horse like a cowboy. I have a cowboy suit with fur on it, so I am a cowboy. See! How many of you can drive a car? I can and have been driving a long time. My daddy is a doctor and I used to go with him and he would let me drive, but I drive by myself now. We have a Buick sedan and a Ford coupe. What have you kiddies for pets? I have a dog, three puppies, a horse, three geese, three squirrels and a cat. I have three sisters, one married, one 18 years old and one 16 years old. Every one be sure and write me and I will answer all received.

OCOEE, FLA.

Dear Boys and Girls: May we join your letter writers' club? We are sisters living way down here in Florida. We sure do have a good time. In summer we go in swimming and in winter we have a good time eating oranges. For pets I have three German police dogs and two cats. Their names are Lady, Big Boy, Frisky, Puff and Muff. There is a spring near here that has hundreds of pet fish in it. The water is as clear as crystal and as cold as ice. There is also a lake here that is 18 miles wide and 20 miles long. Some people catch large fish and alligators out of it. I, Lucy, am 12 years old and am in the seventh grade. I, Peggy, am 9 years old and am in the fourth grade. We are racing to see which receives the most letters, so all of you girls write to us and we will answer all letters received.

Your unknown friends,

Dear Club Members: I am a girl 16 years old, have blue eyes and dark brown, curly hair. I am 5 feet, 3 inches tall and weigh about 125 pounds. I go to school at Pittman Center community school and I am a sophomore. One of the girls here told me about your club, so I thought I would like to join. We have lots of fine games here such as basketball, tennis, croquet and several others. But my hobby is to play tennis, ride horseback and go skating. I also am very fond of music and reading. I play a piano and guitar. I will try to answer all letters I can. Please write soon.

SAY GOODBYE TO SUMMER-TIME.

Composed by LaVerne Slaughter.
(Age 13.)

We must say goodbye to summertime,
And leave the trees we like to climb;
Leave the brooks we love so well—
And answer the call of the old school bell.

Away from the hook; away from the line—
Let's all say goodbye to summertime.
And hunt up our books; don't get up late,
For if we do, tardy will be our fate.

Come away from the old cornfields;
Come away from the sweet-scented hills;
September is the month that calls us to school,
Away from the lake and the old swimming pool.

Come on to school with a cheery smile;
You won't have to stay but a little while.
Just be busy while you stay,
And the school term will seem but a day.

Everybody write to me. I'm 5 feet, 2 inches tall, have fair complexion, blue eyes and golden brown curls.

Your friend,
LaVERNE SLAUGHTER.

BRONWOOD, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: How is our club getting along? Is it hot enough for you? I have written once before to the club. I live in the country. We are going to move to Dawson this fall. I am 4 feet, 2 inches tall, have a brunette complexion. My birthday is October 9. I will be in the fourth grade next year. I go to school at Dawson. I have six pets—two dogs and four cats. I did have seven. I had a chicken. I do not like the farm a bit, but I like town. We have horses, mules, sheep, hogs, ducks, chickens, turkeys, dogs, cats, guineas, and cows. One of the dogs' names is Hallie and the other Mack. I do not go fishing often. I have taken my vacation this summer. I have six brothers and one sister. I like the funnies. I like Orphan Annie, Chester Gump and Winnie Winkle. We take The Constitution every Sunday and I read the letters. My mother is 34 years old and my daddy is 37. They married in the year 1887. Write to me soon. I am 9 years old.

Goodbye,
CAROL PETTY.

BOWDON, GA.

Hello Boys and Girls: Here I come again. I've written once before but have not received any letters. My cousin from Ranburne, Ala., is spending the week with me, and she is writing to the club also. Her name is Lillian Stallings. We sure do have good times together, but not as good times as we did before her sister, Marie, went to Atlanta, for when I visited them Marie was so funny. She would make me have a better time. Lillian and I are going to visit Marie this fall in Atlanta. Mother and daddy have gone to Boaz, Ala., this week and my aunt is staying here while they are gone. I've been eating watermelons this morning. They sure are good. Lillian and I have been playing dolls today. Please write to me.

Your pal,
LEILA WRIGHT.

WRITERS' CLUB

Write a Letter Real Soon and Join "The Letters Writers' Club"

WHIGHAM, GA.

Dear Club Members: Yes, here's that Georgia girl at the door knocking again. How are you since I called last? I gave you all a pen chat once before and, to my surprise, was admitted into the happy band of boys and girls. I surely do enjoy reading the letters you girls and boys write to the letter box.

I have had several letter from the letter box cousins, of which I enjoyed reading and answering also.

Oh, say! Just three more weeks, then school will start again. Who will be glad. Oh, just look at the hands up. Yes, and me for another. How many of you boys and girls know of anything any more beneficial than going to school, and obeying our teachers' rules while there. I can say I do not.

I attend school at Bell-Dixon Junior Consolidated High scholo. We have a very, very nice brick building, even if it is in the country, and we have all necessary equipments. I was promoted to the ninth grade.

What do you cousins do for pastime? Me? Well, I read mostly during my leisure hours—that which I enjoy doing. But I also write, sew, help in the house, on the farm, etc.

I have had several letters from the cousins who surely spend their pastime well.

Well, I am not going to talk on no special subject. But if I should mine would be these: "Health, Education and Character." I wrote an essay on "Our Love and Service for America," with 1,000 words.

How many of you like descriptions? I, for one, do. So if you all won't get frightened I'll give you all a short one. So here goes, 5 feet 5 inches tall, weigh 120 pounds, brown eyes, dark brown wavy hair (bobbed) and medium complexion, and am a jolly little lassie of 16 winters. Quite frightening, eh? I should think so.

Listen, folks, who can send me the song, "When the Whole World Turns You Down?" I would appreciate it very much and wil lexchange songs.

Listen, some of you cousins write me. I will surely answer. With oodles of love to all ye cousins.

The same little friend,
GLADYS NAZWORTH.

SPARTA, GA.

Dear Friends: Since I have been in Georgia on a visit I have been reading The Constitution and I certainly do enjoy it, especially the letters in the club.

I was 12 years old December 30. I am 5 feet tall, have light brown hair, blue eyes and dark complexion. I have no brothers but have two sisters younger than myself. I am blessed with both mother and father.

I live in Miami, Fla. We have a home and lumber yard down there and have a home, farm and store up here. My uncle keeps the store while we are in Florida.

I will be in the seventh grade B when school opens. I guess I will go to the new Andrew Jackson High school if they finish it.

I go to church and Sunday School every Sunday. I am a member of the Allapattah Baptist church in Miami.

How many of you can do the "Charleston?" I can.

I wish some of you could go in bathing with me in the Atlantic ocean. It is fun.

If I do not stop I will not have anything to say next time.

Everyone write to me and send me a photo of yourself. I will answer and maybe send you some of the poetry and stories that I composed.

I am going back to Miami soon, so address all letters to

Your friend,

Dear Kiddies: Can't you find another chair? I want to sit down.

I am 5 feet two inches in height. I have dark hair, dark complexion and brown eyes. I am 12 years of age and in the seventh grade.

I have five brothers older than I and no sisters.

I belong to the Girls' Four H. club. We cook, sew and play games. Our motto is: "To Make the Best Better."

For pets I have two cats.

My birthday is April 20 and I have a twin.

All kiddies write to me and I will answer all letters received.

Please send photos if possible.

Dear Boys and Girls: Please allow another little Georgia girl to join your happy band. I am in the fourth grade and like to go to school. I have a pet cat. I am 9 years old, have blonde hair and blue eyes. I guess I had better say goodbye. All of you boys and girls write me.

Your unknown friend,
BERT AVERA, JR.

LAKELAND, FLA.

Hello. One and All: Dear children, kind friends and comrades. As it has been some little while since I had a chat with you all, I will make an humble request—"Will you slip over a few inches (now, I knew you would)—and let me in for a few words. I observe in the last week's issue that school will soon open again for the 1926-27 term, and one thing I notice especially, I haven't seen where any one was sorry to see the time approach. But, in other words, all seem to be looking forward that they will. God being their helper, strive to reach a goal which is previously set and each and every one of you have my heartiest wishes and hopes for the banner year of schooling of all your happy school days, and I shall doff my hat to you all and give three big cheers for all of young America. Rah, rah, rah, for the sunny south and the great opportunities in preparing the children to step into the ranks and file and grasp the reins of our government and pilot the good old ship Columbia clear of rocky coasts and when we are all from this land called away she will still be floating high and dry, unconquered and undefeated by all comers.

But be ye watchful and cease not to put your faith and trust in the God of our fathers and do not forget to at all times pray. I will give you a little worthy prayer which is poetryized and see how many will learn it and follow out the cause. Some have wrote club songs, some state songs, some of mountain and some of stream, but after all I think it if left to me to write the club prayer, and hope you all and every one will like it as I do, for there is where I receive all my happiness and strength from prayers.

Our Club Prayer.

I.
"Lord help us to live from day to day
In such a self forgetful way
That even when we kneel to pray
Our prayers shall be for others.

II.
Help us in all the work we do
To even be sincere and true,
And know that all we do for you
Must need be done for others, too.

III.
And when our work on earth is done,
And our new work in heaven begun,
May we forget the crown we've won,
Still thinking, Lord, of others.

IV.
Others, Lord, yes, others,
Let this our motto be;
Help us to live for others
And think and live for Thee."

P. S. I am sending a poem—

If I Had a Friend.

I.
If I had a friend so true,
Who my every trial knew,
Who would be my strength and stay,
In my weakness day by day,
I would love him,
I would trust him,
Wouldn't you?

II.
If I had a friend so great,
Who could open heaven's gate,
Who could lie within the grave
And could rise with power to save,
I would love him,
I would trust him,
Wouldn't you?

III.
Such a friend is Christ who died.
For our sins was crucified;
Risen now he lives above,
Cares for us in tender love.
I will love him,
I will trust him,
Will not you?

WARTHEN, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: I wonder if you will let another Georgia girl into your happy band. I've always wanted to join your band. I am 8 years old, and weigh 55 pounds. I am 4 feet, 6 inches tall and start to school September 7. Which of the funnies do you like best? I read them all and like Little Orphan Annie. All you boys and girls write to me and I will answer all I receive.

An unknown friend.
MARY WILSON.

LANGDALE, ALA.

Dear Friends: I would like very much to join your club. I read your letters and would like to join. I am 5 feet, 2 inches tall, have brown hair (cut ragged Ann), brown eyes, and will be 16 years old October 4. Who has my birthday? Who will be glad when school starts? I sure won't, because I won't get to go in swimming. I will look for letters from all of you boys and girls.

Your friend.
MATTIE LOU WALLACE.

ATLANTA, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: May I join the letter writers club? There I knew you would let me. I am a girl 4 feet tall, weigh 100 pounds and am in the ninth grade. My birthday is February 25. Who has it? For a pet I have a black and white cat. He sure is cute. Every boy and girl write to me and I will assure you an answer.

So long,
RUTH JENKINS.

CHINA GROVE, N. C.

Dear Friends: I wish to join the letter writers' club. I have been enjoying your letters very much. I am a girl 14 years old, am 5 feet tall, have fair complexion, gray eyes and light hair. I will be 15 years old October 16. Will you boys and girls write to me and send your pictures. I will gladly answer all letters.

Your friend,
MILDRED DEAL.

SCRANTON, N. C.

Dear Boys and Girls: Will you let me join your band? I am a girl 12 years old, 4 1-2 feet tall, weigh 76 pounds. I have dark brown eyes and brown hair. My birthday is February 11. Have I a twin? If so please write me. Everybody write me and send a picture of yourself.

Your friend,
EVA ANDREWS GRAHAM.

MILTON, FLA.

Dear Unknown Friends: I would like very much to join your letter club. I am a boy of 12 years and am in the seventh grade. I have dark brown eyes and weigh 100 pounds. I am 4 feet, 8 inches tall. We get The Constitution every Sunday.

Yours truly,

The BOYS and GIRLS PAGE

MANY, many years ago there lived in Asia a funny old king. He wasn't exactly crazy—just a little bit coo-coo, you know. He was cross-eyed and he wore a long white beard with a heavy stone tied to it. He did that to make the beard grow longer and to keep it down on windy days! His crown also was funny. He had ordered his royal goldsmith to put a big bell on it so that everybody wherever he went would say, "Ahaa! here comes the king!!"

You see, he was a little coo-coo, but that wouldn't have been so bad. However, since he didn't know what to do all day long, he became lazy and wicked. Finally he started to play jokes on his loyal subjects.

One day he ordered the court magician to lunch with him and, when he came, the king said, "My dear magician—I have a big surprise for you! I have invented a new dish, whipped cream and minced herring in oil. You must eat it!"

You should have seen the magician's face when he saw the stuff. Yet he dared not refuse, for he knew that if he did the king would cut his head off. But whipped cream and herring in oil!!!?—brrr! So he told the king that he had a terrible stomach-ache and that he just couldn't eat a thing.

"Well, well, well!" said the king, "that's too bad! But I will cure you—see if I won't!" And with that he pushed a red button, whereupon a page with a hot flat-iron appeared.

The king took the iron and, grabbing the court magician by the neck, exclaimed, "Now let's see if I cannot make you feel so good you'll eat all the whipped cream and herring and ask for more!"

With that he put the poor magician on a table and placed the hot iron right on his stomach. Soon the magician couldn't stand it any longer, and he cried, "Oh beloved king! I feel perfectly all right again! In fact I'll eat anything from a hatpin to a boiled rubber heel!!!" (To himself, however, he said, "You onion-eyed gazook! My poor tummy feels like the furnace in a big battleship. I wish you would jump in the lake!!")

When he turned around to eat the dreadful stuff, however, it was all gone! The royal cats had eaten it and were just licking the plate clean!

Well, children, you can imagine that the court magician gave a sigh of relief! But when the king saw the cats, he took off both of his shoes and even his heavy crown and threw them at them. But he missed every time and he got so angry he ran after them.

Suddenly he let out a terrible yell. He had stepped on a tack—a big tack—without his shoes on. Oh, how he screamed!!! In his great pain he sat down to pull the tack out, but he hadn't noticed that he was sitting on an ant-hill full of red ants. He had hardly pulled out the tack when they came running all over him. Brrrrr, it tickled! They bit him—oh, it itched like fire! Did he get up?! I'll say he did. He ran and ran and ran until he came to a big lake, and jumped right in it.

But the heavy stone on his beard pulled him down so quickly he would have drowned miserably if it hadn't been for a swordfish who happened along and cut his beard off. Finally a whale put him on his back and swam ashore with him.

"When the king saw the cats he took off his shoes"

Well, he came home safe all right, but as soon as he was back at the palace he called for the court magician and said, "Forgive me! I have treated you badly, but I surely have learned my lesson. From now on I'll be a good king to my people!!"

And I assure you that he kept his word and everybody liked him. Yes, even the court magician!

Ye End!

My Pet

This Hen Sings!

Myrian Dunn, of Deatsville, Alabama, has a hen for her pet. It is an Ancona hen with white dots. Every morning the hen comes to the back door and "sings" until Myrian comes out and gives her her breakfast. She lays one white egg every day and is very peaceful and contented unless you bother her when she is on her nest. Myrian says that she can go out into the yard and call the hen and she will come and allow herself to be picked up. Myrian says that dogs and cats make very nice pets, but she would rather have her hen.

Dot Is Ticklish

Charles Herring, of Nichols, South Carolina, has a pony, of which he is very fond. He has taught "Dot" many tricks. She can stand on her hind feet, and kneel down as though she were saying her prayers. Charles says that when you tickle her, she squeals "just like the girls do." He said that he would not take $250 for her. He is very proud of his pony and is always anxious to show her off to his friends.

Almost every boy and girl has a pet. We want to hear about yours, and so do the other readers of the My Pet column.

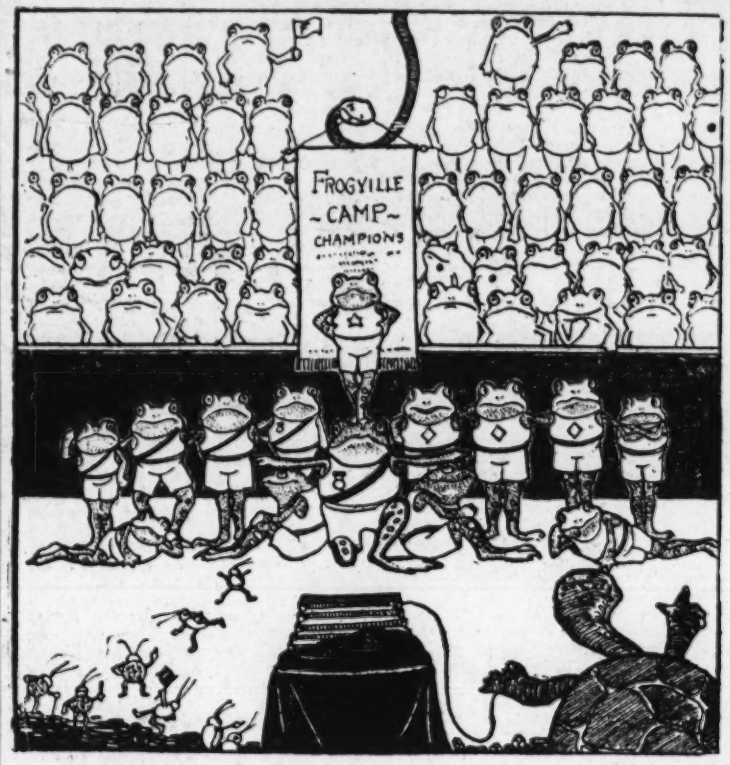

If you have a dog or a cat or some other pet, take a few minutes and write to the "My Pet Editor," in care of this newspaper. Tell about the tricks he does, and anything else of interest to readers. If your letter is a good one, we'll publish an account of your pet in this column.

ATTENTION, YELL FANS!

Starting in a short time, there will be published on this page a series of good school yells. Football season is coming, and all you girls and boys will be learning your school cheers. Why not send us the best yell you know? We will publish it with your name, and all the other readers of the page will read it, too.

Send in your school yell now, addressing the Yell Editor, care of this newspaper.

Here we see the Frogtown's star athletes caught by Old Man Turtle's camera as they posed for a picture on the final day of the Frogtown camp. Fatty Frog, still puffed up over his victory in the pie-eating contest, insisted on doing a little act in the center of the group in order to better display his hard-won medal.

The winners of the events in the annual field meet received their prizes, and the winning team got a beautiful banner proclaiming them champions. Old Man Turtle certainly accomplished an artistic effect in posing the frogs, didn't he?

After this gala occasion the athletes removed their track suits and led the other frogs in the task of breaking camp. And so the annual Frogtown summer outing was brought to a happy close.

Here Is a Recipe For Tasty Candy

"Pastille Drops" is the name confectionery stores have given these tasty little candies, and here's the way to make them:

Put two or three cupsful of fine powdered sugar into a saucepan with just enough juice of an orange, or a lemon, or some other juicy fruit the taste of which you like, to make a thick paste. Do not put in too much juice or the candies will not become as hard as they should.

Set the paste on the stove over a slow fire. Stir it steadily and do not allow it to boil. When it has become watery enough to pour easily take it off the stove.

Then carefully pour small drops of the liquid on pieces of waxed or greased (with butter) paper.
